Police arrest suspect

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Hingham police arrested a man they believe is responsible for two incidents of breaking and entering in Hingham and two in Winchester.

Timothy M. Black, 26, of Revere, is charged with two counts of breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony by Hingham police.

Winchester Detective Joseph Perritano said the department will also charge Black with two counts of breaking and entering during the daytime. Perritano said he matched fingerprints he found at the scene of one of the Winchester crimes with Massachusetts State Police file fingerprints of Black.

On Wednesday, Aug. 26, at 12:11 p.m., a Johnson Road woman reported that someone had broken into her home through the back door while she was home. The man rang the front doorbell twice, but did not give the woman enough time to answer the door before going around the house to the back door, police said.

As the woman got to the front door, she heard someone break door her back door and went to the door to see what was going on. The woman told police that when the perpetrator saw her, he ran out the back door, according to police.

The woman desrcibed the suspect as 5-foot-11 or 6-feet tall, dirty-looking with a pot belly, brown hair, and possibly a gray shirt or pants.

The woman's rear door jam was smashed, according to police.

The neighbors said they did not see anything unusual, police said.

Police believe the man then went to a North Border Road home to try again. He was more successful this time.

The resident of that house said he left at about 10 a.m. that morning and returned at 12:30 p.m. to find a small, black Toyota pick-up truck parked in front of his house, according to police reports.

The man parked behind the truck. He told police that as he approached his house he saw that the front door

Town meeting will consider housing issues

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Fall's Town Meeting will tackle two planning proposals that have selectmen sharply divided: one to develop affordable housing, the other to consolidate town planning.

Selectmen Monday split 3-2 in their decision to put both items on the fall warrant. They will vote later on formal wording for the articles.

The Planning Committee recommended the articles in response to the Pattison, Slavet and Co. Inc. housing report issued earlier this year.

The articles would create a Housing Partnership Board and a Department or director of Community Development. The Housing Partnership Board will be designed to oversee the development of affordable housing without stepping on the toes of the Winchester Housing Authority.

Selectman Francis Sopper suggested waiting until spring Town Meeting to introduce the article. "We're talking about changing the structure of the whole town government," he said. "We need more time to discuss it."

But Selectman Robert Deering said he supports filing the article because he said there has not been enough progress in the past. "I don't view it as a change in town government," he said. "I see it as a better way of providing a service." He added that anyone who has an interest in housing would know why the selectmen wanted to create a housing board and that there was no reason to wait for the spring.

Selectman Mark Lombardi was concerned that the housing board would try to develop low and moderate income housing on all the remaining open land in town. He also criticized the Pattison, Slavet report saying it was too inclusive without being original. "It is not a plan, everything is in there. There's nothing new," he said.

Selectman Thomas Schmitt was in favor of the plan. He said, "This town has had a lot of difficulty dealing with affordable housing. We need a focused housing program. We shouldn't delay it."

The board voted 3-2, with Sopper and Lombardi in the minority, to file the article.

Selectmen propose Woburn Loop articles to aid sale

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

"We're finally going to take action on part of the Woburn Loop," Board of Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia said after the board decided Monday night to file two Fall Town Meeting articles that will facilitate the sale of the Loop.

The first article will propose a rezoning of the Russo property and the Ferrari property, both abutting the Loop land, and portions of the Loop itself. Currently the land is zoned industrial and general residential. The article will propose a change to multi-family residential zoning.

The Russo and Ferrari properties lie on the east side of the Loop. The Russo land, currently not in use, is directly north of the Ferrari land, which houses a plumbing shop and a used metal shop.

The proposed rezoning article passed unanimously and without much discussion.

The second Loop article will allow the town to sell all or a portion of the land north of Swanton Street. The selectmen had agreed previously that they would not sell the land between Hill Street and Swanton Street.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer said the proposed developers of the Loop would like the land south of Hill Street, because, he said, their architectural designs overlap eight feet onto it. The selectmen agreed, however, to go ahead the way they planned and let the developers who intend to buy the three largest chunks of the portion of the Loop currently in question, the Russo family, Charles Ferrari and the Russell Hill Group, hash out their differences.

Maurer also said the part of the Loop in question must be surveyed before it is sold. The town also must come up with a sale price, whether through an outside appraisal or from the town's board of assessors.

Maurer also called attention to three issues that the selectmen must resolve before Fall Town Meeting. The first is an agreement by all the developers to participate in the town's housing program. The affordable housing made available to the town through the agreement should be kept separate from the sale price of the land, Maurer said.

Second, Maurer said, the town should establish a covenant with the purchasers of the property describing the allowed uses and the design of any structures on the land.

Third, the selectmen should decide what land will be sold in addition to the land abutting the Russell Hill, Ferrari and Russo properties, Maurer said.

The board unanimously voted to place the article for the disposition of the Loop on the Fall Town Meeting warrant.

The selectmen did not vote on the exact wording of the articles, just to place the issues on the warrant.

Officials doubts stall decision on Advanced Life Support System

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Selectmen will consult the police and fire chiefs before voting whether to sanction a new, private ambulance service. They want assurances it will be there over the long haul.

Representatives of the Advanced Life Support (ALS) Corsortium at Monday night's Board of Selectmen's meeting could not guarantee to Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer that their service would be available indefinitely.

Lacking that guarantee, and with other questions on juisdictional and budgetary impact, selectmen put ALS on hold pending talks with Police Chief John McHugh and Fire Chief Robert McElhinney.

ALS is a supplementary emergency-care system with trained paramedics available. Paramedics have more advanced medical training and are authorized to perform more life-saving services than the emergency medical technicians (EMTs) who staff Winchester's ambulances. Currently ALS, which is funded by Winchester Hospital, Choate-Symmes Health Services, the Lahey Clinic in Burlington and Armstrong Ambulance, services nine communities.

ALS would provide a Bronco-like vehicle to service Winchester. The vehicle would be housed on Brattle Circle in Arlington, which is off Arlington Center.

The non-transporting system is charged to patients, not towns, but Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer is concerned that ALS will come to the town in the future looking for money. He said the hospitals can pull out any time in a business decision, but once Winchester has offered the service, it will be much harder for the town to discontinue it, leaving the financial burden on the town's budget.

Maurer wanted ALS, and particularly Winchester Hospital, to guarantee the service will continue for an indefinite number of years.

James Higgins, Winchester Hospital's vice president for administrative services, said the hospital never believed the service would make money. He said the hospitals have no intention at this time to ask the towns in the consortium for money.

Selectman Francis Sopper requested the input of Fire Chief McElhinney and Police Chief McHugh, since the system will exist under their departments. The ALS vehicles would be dispatched by the civilian dispatchers who serve both the Fire and Police departments.

Sopper also asked how much it would cost for the town to have its own paramedic squad. He said that the town would have to pick up the tab if the service failed, so why not just have its own from the beginning?

Maurer said the cost of a Winchester paramedic squad would be about $250,000 for salaries, capital

Ristorante Lucia draws big crowd for gala fund raiser to aid muscular distrophy

By ROGER L. KAY
Star Editor

People came from as far away as California and Niagra Falls, Canada, to attend the gala 10th anniversary fund raiser at Ristorante Lucia last Sunday.

More than 300 people showed up to the benefit for the Muscular Distrophy Association (MDA) and collectively donated $17,350 to the cause.

"It was the best party I've done so far," Lucia's owner, Filippo Frattaroli, said. "Everything went smoothly."

Many local luminaries showed up, including Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia, Selectman Robert Deering, Town Moderator John Sullivan, Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer, former Gov. John Volpe, Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh. and 2nd District Sen. Salvatore Albano.

The hoi polloi paid $40 at the door for the privilege of tasting the specially prepared menu. The proceeds gathered thus were thrown together with the bulkier donations made by long-time suppliers of Frattaroli's restaurants.

Lucia's of Winchester is Frattaroli's second restaurant. The other is in Boston's North End.

Two suppliers, Fleet Fruit Co. and Oscar & Son Woodworking, gave $1,000 each. Nine donors gave $500 and many others gave $250.

Entertainment was provided by comedian Jay Leno, who has appeared on the David Letterman show and guest-hosted the Jonny Carson show.

The Frattaroli family received a citation from the state signed by Gov. Michael Dukakis that reads: "To the Frattaroli family on the occasion of the Tenth Anniversary of Lucia's Restaurant, which is deserving of recognition by all the citizens of Massachusetts."

A telegram came in that says: "Congratulations to the entire Frattaroli family on the 10th anniversary of Ristorante Lucia. I'm deeply touched to know that you're marking this important occasion with a buffet to benefit MDA. Your dedication to the association's fight against muscle diseases really means the world to me.

"Best wishes for a fabulous event and God bless you for caring.

Love, Jerry Lewis."

Actor-comedian Lewis runs the MDA Labor Day telethon every year.

The whole event was filmed by WCVB-TV5, which will show portions of it on Monday at 5:15 p.m. as Donato, Filippo's brother, presents the check to the MDA at the televised telethon.

Italian Fiesta gets fireworks permit

The Board of Selectmen Monday granted a fireworks permit to the Society of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary for their fiesta Saturday, Sept. 19, at Leonard Field.

Selectman Thomas Schmitt made a request to shorten the duration of the permit to one hour from two. The society asked for a permit from 9 p.m. to 11 p.m. Schmitt asked that the display be over by 10 p.m.

"At this time of year it gets dark by 7:30 or 8 o'clock," Schmitt said. "It wouldn't cut back on the fireworks." He added that the reduction would keep "neighbors less unhappy that they already are."

The board voted 3-2 in favor of allowing the permit with a shortened time period. Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia and board member Robert Deering voted against the permit.

The society submitted their proof of insurance covering both themselves and the town in case of an accident.

The owners of the property showed police tire marks on their front lawn. They said the damage must have been done sometime after 11:30 p.m. the previous night, according to police reports.

Police believe the tracks were going east to west, according to reports.

Saturday, August 29

Three Winchester youths approached officers on patrol in the Manchester Field area at 10:33 p.m.

They told the officers that they were sitting in a parked car owned by one of their mothers at the field, when a group of Arlington youths tried to start a fight with them, according to police reports.

When the Winchester teens would not fight, they said, the Arlington teens beat on the car with their feet and beer bottles, causing damage to the roof, doors, and hatchback, according to police reports.

The Winchester youths told police that the Arlington teens left the scene in three vehicles, a Ford station wagon, another wagon and a gray Chevrolet Nova, reports said.

One of the Winchester teens said he recognized one of the youths as an Arlington High School hockey player, according to police.

At 11:45 a.m. police responded to a call from a Swanton Street man.

The rear window of his 1986 Chevrolet Camaro was smashed soemtime during the night while parked in the building's parking lot, according to police reports.

At 9:51 a.m. a Hillside Avenue woman called police to report property damage.

A large limb of a tree had fallen on her 1986 Chevrolet causing damage to the roof and front and back windows. The car was parked in the woman's driveway, according to police reports.

Friday, August 28

At 10:27 p.m. police arrived on Cross Street in response to a radio call.

The resident showed police where someone had jimmied open a window on the side porch at the south side of the house, according to police.

Police said only a little ransacking had been done and nothing obvious was missing.

The man had been away from the property since 3 p.m.

At 1:34 p.m. police arrived at south reservoir gate off of South Border Road in response to a radio call.

A Water Department employee was detaining two Medford men on charges of trespassing, police said.

The employee said he saw the two men enter the unlocked gate to drive onto the reservoir property, according to police.

The police told the Medford men they will be summoned to court on charges of trespassing in a water supply, according to reports.

At 7:48 a.m. a South Gateway woman arrived at the police station to report a larceny.

She showed police the smashed right passenger window of her 1984 Audi 5000 and the space in the dashboard where her radio used to be, police said.

Wednesday, August 26

At about 6 p.m., police found the girls who another girl said had beaten her up the day before.

The girl, a runaway from the Germain-Lawrence School for Girls in Arlington, spoke to police, giving them descriptions and first names of the four girls. She also told them she was with two other runaways at the time of the beating, police said.

Police found all six of the other girls on Sheridan Circle. After a brief chase, police caught the girls. One girl told police the runaways did not have anything to do with the beating. She said she and the three other girls had kicked the victim, according to police.

The three other girls told police they did not care how badly the girl was injured because "she deserved it," according to police.

Police informed the girl and her counselor at the school that they could press charges if they chose to, police said.

At 12:34 p.m. a North Border Road man reported a breaking and entering at his home.

He said he left his home at 10 a.m. and returned to find a small, black Toyota pick-up truck parked in front of his house. He told police he parked behind the truck and as he approached the house, noticed that the front door had been forced open, according to police.

While standing in front of the house, the man heard noise from the wooded area across the street. A man exited the woods and told the resident that he had been chasing two youths who had been in the back yard, according to police.

The resident asked the man to stay while he called police, but he left, according to police reports.

When police checked the house, they found all the rooms had been ransacked. A check of the woods turned up two pillow cases full of items the resident identified as his, police said.

At 12:11 p.m. police responded to a breaking and entering call from a Johnson Road resident.

The woman told police someone rang her doorbell twice, but when she got to the door, she heard someone breaking the back door down, according to police.

When the man saw the woman, he ran out the rear door, police said.

McHugh and Mawn remind drivers to take care

Children in Winchester return to school this week, and Chief of Police John McHugh and Police Safety Officer Kevin Mawn join AAA Massachusetts in urging motorists to drive extra carefully.

"Many children in kindergarten and first grade will be coping with traffic on their own for the first time," said Safety Officer Mawn. "They may not be aware of the pedestrian safety rules."

Officer Mawn had some advice for concerned motorists. "Safe driving is a year-round responsibility, but it's even more important as schools open," he said. "Keep alert and always obey the posted speed limit, but especially in school zones. That will make it easier to come to a quick, safe stop if a child darts in your path."

Officer Mawn also advises that school buses will be rolling once again in September, and that penalties for illegally passing a school bus stopped boarding passengers is $100 minimum and a $1000 maximum, with suspension of license for repeat offenders.

Massachusetts and the Winchester Police Department are distributing free "School's Open — Drive Carefully" bumper stickers.

For additional information contact Safety Officer Kevin Mawn at 729-1212, ext. 318.

SENIOR NEWS

Jenks Recreation Committee keeps senior citizens active

By LEONOR RICH
Special to the Star

A look behind the scenes

The story of who decides the recreational programs at the Jenks Senior Center has evolved from a group of congenial people who enjoyed doing interesting things before the Winchester Seniors Association, Inc., was organized to the well-developed structure of today's Recreational Committee.

The originators met once a month with Donald Spinney, the recreation director for the Town of Winchester, gathering at the old Knights of Columbus Hall for meetings and refreshments. Special monthly outings and occasional longer trips were planned by Donald Spinney. Dues for individuals were $2 per person and/or couple and the money was used to purchase refreshments and supplement the cost of bus tours. The group called themselves, "The Retired Citizen's Group," and participated in special events and took day trips to entertainments in Boston such as "The Ice Follies," plays such as "Man of La Mancha," and the "Boston Ballet." Trips to Bermuda and elsewhere were organized through Gateway Travel in Winchester.

When the Council on Aging was formed in 1973 and the seniors organized a Senior Service Corps, a Recreation Committee was developed, but it continued to work closely with the Town Recreation Department. The senior committee consisted of Charles Yorke, president of the Winchester Senior Service Corps, Mal Masters, chairman of the Recreation Committee, Mary Cameron, Dr. Leonor Rich, Robert Winn and Donald Spinney.

The Recreation Committee has been chaired by several people. In its infancy, Charles Yorke served for about six months. Mal Masters continued as chairman with Robert Winn as co-chairman. Joseph Moran took over the important responsibilities, continuing with enthusiasm and vigor for at least three years. In 1982, Randy Kazazian, then program vice president of the Winchester Seniors Association, accepted the leadership and has chaired the committee with Agnes Blyth and Sylvia Saslow as co-chairmen from that time to the present.

Today the committee has several sub-committees to facilitate the work, which is divided into day trips, overnight trips, special events, movies, slides, and VCR presentations, and crafts. Serving as members of the committee are: Randolph Kazazian, Agnes Blyth, Sylvia Saslow, Esther Anderson, Mary De Courcy, Sec., Anne Feuss, Al Karnilla, Irma Ganchi, Leonard Leader, Samuel McCarthy, Helen Murphy, J. Raymond Murphy, Ed Palmer, Helen Rafferty, Leonor Rich, Charles Craven, Mary Craven, Regina Karnilla, and Angelo Giannetti.

Barbara Ciampa, Jenks Center administrator, always gives assistance in attending meetings, clearing dates, contacting bus companies, making provisions for clipboard sign-ups at the center reception desk, and resolving any problems that arise.

Randy Kazazian and Mary DeCourcy of the Winchester Seniors Association Recreation Committee get ready to board the bus on one of the many trips the committee arranges for seniors.

The goal of the Winchester Seniors Association Recreation Committee is to involve as many of the nearly 5,000 seniors of the town as possible by developing programs with a wide range of interests. Provisions for multiple opportunities for socialization are important in program planning.

The committee meets once a month and plans for activities that will take place several months hence. Much pre-planning for an event is necessary through discussion and in the case of a day trip, arrangements for bus service, dining, side trips, time involved and costs must be worked out in detail. Then comes publicity to develop interest in what is to take place.

If a restaurant has been asked to reserve places for 40 meals and only 35 people arrive, the WSA has to pay the cost of the extra five meals since reservations have been made weeks ahead of the trip. There is always a waiting list of people who desire to go on a trip, so it is of the utmost impor-

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

THE UTILITIES CHANGE OVER

When you're selling a home, it's important to work out all of the details with your local gas, electric, heating oil and water companies before settlement.

Coordinate these matters with your buyers. Both parties should call each company a week or so before settlement to close out old accounts and set up new ones. You can arrange for a final reading on the various meters. If you have an oil heating system, ask your supplier to come to your house to do an estimate of the amount remaining in your tank. Your buyers can reimburse you for the cost at the settlement table. If the oil level is very low, have them add enough to insure that the heat stays on.

It is not a good idea to have the utilities turned off for settlement. If you do, buyers won't be able to test the appliances and some of the systems at the walk-through. In addition, you might have to escrow a large sum of money until the power is on again and buyers can be sure that everything is in working order.

For solid advice on buying or selling real estate, consult the professionals at The Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Please call us at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson Street in Winchester.

tance to notify the person conducting the event when a cancellation is necessary in order to give someone else a chance to enjoy the experience with others. Checks must be remitted within three days after making a reservation.

The extended overnight trips such as those to Bermuda, Florida, the Panama Canal, cruises, and other places involve airlines, hotels and ships and must be coordinated by Charles Craven and the Travel Committee and finalized far ahead of the date of the trip.

This brief look behind the scenes serves to indicate that an enormous amount of detail is needed in planning for any trip, whether it be for one day or several. People on the Recreation Committee are dedicated in their service, giving unstintingly of time and effort in carrying out their responsibilities as they endeavor to provide enjoyable experiences for seniors.

Lip reading course will be offered

People with impaired hearing, however slight, will benefit from a 10-session course in lip reading as an extra channel of communication.

Classes will be one hour in length for 10 weeks beginning in October with Marion Moran as the instructor of the development of this important skill. Moran obtained her master's degree in speech and hearing at Boston University.

She has conducted classes in lip reading in senior citizen's groups in Somerville, Melrose, the Carlton Willard Rest Home in Bedford, the Jenks Senior Center in Winchester, and in other communities. She is certified in audiology by the American Speech and Hearing Association. The purpose of the course will be to help those with slight and moderate hearing problems and for people wearing hearing aids.

The course will be open to any age level among the people of the community. The size of the groups will be limited to 10 or 12 people.

Those interested in the course may sign up at the Jenks Senior Center by Sept. 15.

Ed. committee brings Dr. Hewson Ryan to the Center

Dr. Hewson Ryan, well-known Tufts University professor and Latin American expert, will present a program on, "When the Shooting Stops: Central America's Real Problem," at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 23. Don't miss this vital informational program about a troubled portion of the continent so close to the borders of the United States.

Dr. Ryan has been a guest at the center twice before and his presentations have been received enthusiastically. He served as ambassador in Central America several years ago and is well versed in knowledge concerning the onset of the present day political problems. Sign up at the Jenks Senior Center to attend in order to assist the committee in the preparation of refreshments.

Quarterly meeting of the WSA

A catered soup and sandwich luncheon will be served at the quarterly meeting of the Winchester Seniors Association Sept. 16. The meeting is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. and the luncheon will be at noon.

Norman Keene, pianist, will entertain while the meal is in progress. All seniors are asked to attend the meeting since the business transacted is important to the progress of the association.

Jane Tapia, director of the Visiting Nurse and Community Health Association, will speak on, "Medicare Changes in Home Nursing.

Fall Fling at Jenks

The Saturday night monthly dance, the Fall Fling, will take place in the grand new ballroom Sept. 12 from 8 to midnight with Dick Brogna and his band supplying the music for the ballroom and line dancing.

Anne Feuss and her committee of helpers will ensure an entertaining evening in spacious quarters. Light refreshments will be available.

Correction

The lead article on the Keep Well Clinic in the Aug. 27 issue of the Star listed the directors of the Clinic. Barbara Hoglunds's name should have followed Hilda Hope, R.N., and Anne Henderson was unintentionally omitted as an aide who served for many years in that capacity.

Both of these volunteers deserve high commendations for their dedicated service to the seniors of Winchester.

Fair Dinner at Jenks Senior Center

The new auditorium will be the scene of the annual Fall Fiesta Fair dinner at the Jenks Senior Center Oct. 7 with continuous serving from 5 to 7 p.m. Heretofore, the Knights of Columbus have most generously allowed seniors to use their spacious hall for this annual meal.

Ezio of Stoneham, caterer, formerly head chef at John Hancock Company, will provide the meal consisting of lasagna and meatballs, salad, rolls, ice cream, cookies, and coffee or tea. A light wine will be served to make the meal more festive.

Anne Feuss is in charge of arrangements for the dinner. Tickets may be obtained at the Jenks Senior Center Reception Desk. Ticket chairpersons are Clarence Borggaard and Harry Chefalo. These will be available in early September.

People who are willing to assist Ezio's waitresses should leave their names and telephone numbers at the reception desk at the Jenks Senior Center (721-7136).

Rental of the center facilities

Requests for the rental of the facilities at the Jenks Senior Center should be left at the Reception Desk (721-7136). Angelo Giannetti, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, has accepted this extremely important responsibility that has been handled with outstanding efficiency for the past 10 years by Lawrence Hutchings.

Manager needed for lunch program

Urgently needed is a site manager for the noontime luncheon program that is being planned by the Winchester Council on Aging and the Minute Man Home Care Cooperation. The implementation of congregate meals as a pilot program at the Jenks Senior Center provides for catered noontime luncheons twice a week. The nutrition project is funded by the Minute Man Home Care Cooperation pending their board approval in September.

The program can begin as early as October if a site manager is found. The staff member must be at least 55 years of age, will receive a salary from the Minute Man Home Care Corporation, and will have charge of volunteers who set tables, serve meals, collect donations, and do the clean-up following the meal.

This is an excellent opportunity for someone who is interested in a paid position for 20 hours per week. If interested, call Carole Burns at the Minute Man Home Care Corporation, 862-6200, as soon as possible. The proposed program requires a site manager in order to operate.

Classes opened for registration

A Computer Club is being organized. Italian lessons will be available for all who are interested in learning the language. Rug hooking classes will be busy as soon as an instructor can be found. Recorder lessons given by a member of the Community Music School will soon add sounds to the Center if enough people indicate an interest in learning to play this age-old instrument.

Heating expert proposes trash-burning co-generation facility

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Uglietto wrote about a system he says is the most efficient way to create heat, electricity and cooling while eliminating much of the problem of solid waste: burning trash.

Salvatore Uglietto of Mayflower Road is a connoisseur of heating systems.

Uglietto is the president of Yankee Resources Corp. in Winchester. He says, "Heating is not just my vocation, it's my avocation, too."

Last October, the American Society of Heating, Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Engineers (ASHRAE) asked Uglietto to write a paper for presentation at the organization's annual meeting in July. He wrote about a system he said is the most efficient way to create heat, electricity and cooling while eliminating much of the problem of solid waste: the burning of trash.

The system, called district heating, works by burning trash under a boiler filled with water to create steam. The steam is pushed through a turbine, which turns to create electricity. The steam that is left over is cooled to become hot water for heating, or in the summer can be used to fuel a central air-conditioning system.

Burning the trash, Uglietto said, will virtually eliminate the need for municipal landfills.

The problems with old, coal-burning heating systems, Uglietto said, were inefficiency due to the system of transferring steam from condensers back to the boiler to be used again and the creation of air pollutants.

Now, Uglietto said, the water is heated at such high temperatures that only safe levels of impurities are created. The boilers also contain scrubbers and a filter to assure that pollutants are not released into the air, he said.

District heating systems do not waste water because the system works in a loop instead of a dead end. Previously heated water will return to the boiler after flowing through the system to be reheated. Uglietto said the water leaves the boiler at a temperature of about 250 degrees and returns to the boiler, after heating all the structures along its route, at 160 degrees.

Uglietto proposes that the district heating system can save towns money because they will become energy self-sufficient. He also said the electricity produced in the process can be used by the utilities as an auxiliary system during the high-draw months of the summer. The sale of electricity would increase the town's tax base, Uglietto said.

His idea is to get one central town and a few other towns together and build the plant in the central town. Pipelines would lead to the outlying towns like spokes of a wheel, Uglietto said. The pipes would require very little maintenance once they were in place; they will not rust because no air will run in them.

The air would be filtered out by the "Yankee Air Purging Manifold," designed by Uglietto. He said he worked on the problem for many years, changing and perfecting his design, before the completion of the manifold.

Water will not lose heat through the pipes, Uglietto said, because they are so well insolated. On a trip to see the system in action in Denmark, Uglietto said he saw snow on heating pipes installed above a highway that did not melt, despite the hot water contained within them.

The system eliminates the use of individual boilers and, therefore, the cost of repairing and replacing them. Baseboard radiators would be the normal means of heating. The radiators will not have to be bled, Uglietto said.

The district heating system is in use in downtown Nashville, Tenn., Uglietto said. Provo, Utah, is also trying it out.

What about the trash trucks driving up and down the streets? Uglietto said there wouldn't be any more than there already are. He also said that he envisions a building that is self-contained and aesthetically pleasing. The trucks would be out of sight once they enter the plant's grounds.

He has been designing heating systems for over 40 years. He is working toward initiating the construction of a district heating system in this area.

The paper Uglietto presented on converting buildings to a district heating system has been published by ASHRAE in its Technical Data Bulletin.

Uglietto said he designs heating and cooling systems at home. "I know what makes a system tick," he said.

The Boston chapter of ASHRAE voted Uglietto an award for "outstanding achievement in the design of energy efficient buildings."

"More people should know about what's going on," Uglietto said. "This is the system of the future."

Salvatore Uglietto presents his paper on district heating to the annual meeting of the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating, and Air-Conditioning Engineers, Inc.

COMMENT

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

You can't always get what you need

Capitalism is a very fine system that performs all sorts of magic tricks almost automatically, but any observant person can see that the exercise of free enterprise also creates some tears in the social fabric.

Starting from the basics, money is exchanged when the party of the first part performs a service for or delivers a good to the party of the second part.

Introduce the price setting function: competition for scarce resources. The amount of a good or service and the number of people competing for it determines the price at which it is finally sold.

In its pure form this is unbridled capitalism.

The capitalism that we practice today in America is far from unbridled. A John Rockefeller could never gain control of an entire industry the size of the oil business without the Justice Department getting after him. No, the greatest cowboy economy today thrives in Hong Kong, half a world away.

Part of the reason free enterprise has been modified here has to do with the panic engendered by the stock market crash of 1929 and the subsequent misery inflicted on the populace. Franklin Roosevelt rammed measures through Congress that could be labeled socialist, but at the time seemed like the salvation of the country.

That type of socialism, and the kind practiced in many European countries today, has at its base the assumption that the population's well-being should be the first priority of the government. Where possible, socialist governments try to foster programs that help people.

Sometimes, as is happening right now in Europe, the bill for all this popular comfort gets too big to pay, and then the arm's length forces of the marketplace take over again.

So keeping in mind the constraints of the system, let us look at one aspect of it: payment for labor.

People get paid in a number of ways. Employees get either an hourly wage or a salary. Self-employed people pay themselves out of earnings. Some people don't get paid at all: those who don't have jobs and those who don't need them. Both groups live more or less off the fat of the land, the latter off the fatter fat, naturally.

Looking more closely at working people, the large majority, one detects a wide difference in pay scale. Doctors, lawyers and Indian chiefs take home up to hundreds of times as much as clerks, hairdressers and nurses. An argument could be made that the well-paid cadres have the same human needs as the masses, but the system values the professionals' output more highly.

All sellers purport to serve the purchaser. A lawyer serves the client by keeping him or her out of jail. A doctor serves the patient by keeping him or her alive. A clerk helps find the right pair of shoes. A nurse serves the patient by keeping him or her alive. Wait a minute. Isn't that what a well-paid doctor does? Well, yes, but in a different way. Hmmn, well, on to the next.

It seems that many of the professions that deliver crucial services are underpaid in the United States.

Social workers, teachers, nurses and day-care workers cannot pay their bills on what they make. Much of the most personal and difficult service is performed by volunteers. Hospice work, convalescent aid, big brothering and drug counseling have so little money in them that performers of these services often have to work for free.

The society needs these workers, but somehow no mechanism in the economy values them highly enough to fund them properly. The humanity of the system is dependent on the generosity of rich people and the work of volunteers.

The low-paid professions literally subsidize the rest of the population. Nurses say they like to help people and are willing to do the job for less. As long as they are, capitalism is performing its function.

But let's look at how the high-paid professions serve people.

Doctors keep people alive, but some of them can fall into the trap of regarding patients as clinical objects. They treat the disease, not the person.

There are some lawyers who first and foremost help themselves. Not content to thrive on bad news, they often create it. When others fight, these lawyers make money.

Scientists and engineers work on abstract ideas, and some of them forget about the consequences of their actions on people. How else could the nuclear situation have arrived at where it is today?

The marketplace promotes all these people without regard to the real needs of society.

A good example of how the system is not working is modern air travel. Planes are dirty, hostesses surly (and underpaid), seating cramped, food abominable, and the routine of constant feeding downright crazy.

These conditions are a product of the marketplace. If an airline ran a nice clean service with happier, better-funded hostesses and lounge chairs, it would have to charge more to cover the costs.

But people have decided that they want to fly as cheaply as possible and so airlines compete to cut costs and therefore services. Everyone hates the conditions in airplanes, but no one is willing to pay the price for the upgrade.

And so it goes for us. We won't pay for many of the things we need, but we are willing to pay huge premiums for others.

Parents decry personnel actions

TO THE EDITOR:

Thumbs down to Superintendent Mitsakos and the School Committee on their recent handling of the Vinson Owen principalship.

Regardless of whether or not their actions will prove to benefit either school, we feel that parents of both Vinson Owen and Muraco students should have been given the opportunity to air their feelings before such an important decision was made.

Vinson Owen's staffing problems are solved, but at what expense to Muraco? Muraco not only loses its' principal, but two teachers and the school secretary as well.

We feel that time and energy would have been better spent solving Vinson Owen's problems rather than creating ones where they didn't exist at Muraco.

Exchange student thanks chaperones

TO THE EDITOR:

As one of the participants in the WHS English Exchange, I would like to thank Connie and Heather Trickett for making my English experience an unforgettable one.

I don't think any of us imagined when we left for London exactly how much responsibility our chaperones were undertaking. These two women took 10 students under their wings for 25 days of touring, traveling, and sightseeing. During that time, they served as parents and friends to the entire group. They showed us all much love, respect, and trust and helped us to do the same.

As Ms. Trickett quoted in a letter of last minute advice before the trip, "Love is patient and kind . . . not boastful not arrogant or rude . . . not irritable . . . does not rejoice at wrong . . . bears all . . . believes . . . hopes . . . endures" (1 Cor. 13:4-7). "Practice that type of love," she told us. "Love appreciates the values in different countries and the qualities of other people." How right she was. I think we all found love in England: love amongst each other, love in our host families, and a sense of love and devotion to our country.

Again, I want to thank Connie and Heather Trickett for the best time of my life. I have never been happier and I owe it all to these two very special people who make the world a brighter place.

Thank you both so much!

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Volume 13-Report No. 35
Massachusetts House and Senate
August 28, 1987

The House and Senate. The House and Senate continue to meet in brief informal sessions during the summer recess. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" continues its special report on previously unrecorded roll call votes by representatives in the House on amendments to the fiscal 1988 budget recently signed by Governor Dukakis.

Barrett - House 79-74, approved an amendment prohibiting any senator or representative who has not completed a two year term from receiving an additional salary for service as a committee chair, vice chair or assistant vice chair. The House later reconsidered this approval on a 120-36 vote and then defeated the amendment on a voice vote.

Amendment supporters said this would rectify the situation in which the Senate created a new position with $7500 bonus for Cambridge Senator Michael Barrett.

Opponents said the amendment goes too far and unfairly applies to any freshman.

(Two roll calls are listed below. This first is on adoption of the amendment. A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it. The second is on reconsideration of the approval. A Yea vote is for reconsidering approval. A Nay vote is for the amendment.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes on the first and voted no on the second roll call.

More Barrett- House 95-61, rejected an amendment repealing the entire law passed earlier in the year creating the position of assistant vice chairman of Senate Ways and Means including a $7500 salary bonue.

Amendment supporters said this bill was an outrage and simply designed to rush a salary bonus through the legislature for Cambridge Senator Mike Barrett.

Opponents said Ways and Means needs additional help and claimed the position is justified.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Registry- House 154-2, approved an amendment requiring the Registry of Motor Vehicles to prepare and implement a plan to open all 37 branch registry offices on Saturday mornings and at least one evening during the week.

Amendment supporters said this would make the Registry more accessible during non-business hours.

Opponents offered no arguments.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Federal Losses- House 96-59, rejected an amendment increasing local aid to cities and towns by $13 million.

Amendment supporters said this will increase reimbursement to communities for federal revenue losses and bring all communities up to a fair level.

Opponents said the state cannot afford the hike and claimed local aid has been sufficiently increased.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

AFDC- House 74-72, rejected a $21 million amendment increasing the rent supplement for recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) from $35 to $65.

Amendment supporters said this small hike will help many families put a decent roof over their heads.

Opponents said the state cannot afford the increase and noted the budget already substantially increases aid to the poor.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Libraries- House first approved 74-72, then rejected 76-73, an amendment providing $5 million for grants to public libraries for new projects and renovations.

Amendment supporters said the state can easily afford this money which is important to improve the state's libraries.

Opponents said the state cannot afford the money.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it. Both roll calls are listed below.

Saltmarsh voted yes on the first and voted yes on the second roll call.

Volume 13-Report No. 33
Massachusetts House and Senate
August 14, 1987

METCO — House 129-25, rejected an amendment requiring that at least three bids be solicited for the providers of the METCO program and that the lowest qualified bidder be chosen. Amendment supporters said this could help cut costs. Opponents said this was tried last year and is counterproductive because there was only one bid.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Elderly Health — House 127-26, rejected an amendment striking $100,000 for a study of health care needs for the elderly, uninsured and poor and adding $100,000 to a program of respite care services including Alzheimer's disease.

Amendment supporters said the money should be put to good use and not wasted on a study.

Opponents said the study is an important one.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Melt down at Disneyland

By TERRY MAROTTA

My desire, at summer's start, was to do all the usual summer things: watch fans turning left and right like spectators at a tennis match; go places with the kids; have my thoughts pressed flat by a steam-iron sun.

Here on the lip of autumn, I can say I've done that now. I've sat hypnotized before fans. I've certainly had my brain ironed. Together with my spouse and my high expectations, I even took the kids to a theme park a week or two ago, the paragon of the theme parks, in fact, Disney World in Florida.

Three days we spent at Epcot and the Magic Kingdom, and for the most part lovely days they were, too.

For two days the crowds were thin and the lines were short. We danced through the portals of Cinderella's castle; flitted from ride to ride with a wondrous ease. We had spooky thrills in the Haunted Mansion; jolly singalongs with bears dressed like hillbillies; photo opportunities with both Chip and Dale.

At six o'clock of the second day, we reached our hotel room exhausted but happy. "We're staying right here," the older children announced, flopping on the couches. Seconding the motion, the toddler Michael waded out of his clothes and was asleep before his head hit the pillow.

But the Daddy of the group, he who'd wished upon a star and mortgaged the farm besides to bring a family of five to this place, meant to make the most of the opportunity.

"Mikey and I are going back for the fireworks," he chirped, gay as Tinkerbell at 8 o.m., as he moved toward the bed to rouse the unconscious child.

"He's all excited," he said at 8:15, as the tot, fully clothed now, lay curled on the floor like a Cheese Doodle, still deeply sleeping. "He's going to love it."

And he did love it, once he came to. They both loved it, as they told us in great animated paragraphs when they got back to the hotel at midnight. We marvelled together at their tale. It seemed a kind of high point to the season, the apogee in the path of that brief bright star we call summer.

But the next day the decline began.

For one thing, Central Florida simmered suddenly in a record heat wave; for another, every family south of the Mason-Dixon line showed up at the park.

The ferry to the Magic Kingdom, which had spanked merrily over the waves on those first days, churned slow and inexorable now under its weight, a ferryboat to Hades. We stood on board her, already slick with perspiration, our faces pressed between the shoulderblades of strangers.

Once we gained entrance, the lines were staggering. It was 50 minutes' wait to get on Pirates of the Caribbean; twice that for Space Mountain. We stayed at the park for four brain-stewing hours: we didn't get on a single ride.

Instead we crawled from one air-conditioned snack bar to the next, in an orgy of joyless ingestion.

"We went on the food ride," one of our number told Tinkerbell when we met up with him at Epcot, for he had gone off there, with Mikey perched on his shoulders and snacking messily off his head. Even he was starting to wilt now; and Michael glistened with the varnish of melted popsicles.

But worst of all, the crowd had turned mean in the heat. "Now you're in trouble!" one adult snarled, grabbing one of my kids' arms before realizing she wasn't his.

"I'll take off my belt!" snapped another to his 12-year-old son.

"You're not wearing a belt, Dad," observed the boy.

"By God, I'll buy one!" the parent blustered.

It was just too hot. The summer, which had blossomed and borne fruit, had ripened nicely for us, and now it had started to rot. It was time to go home.

Fall waits in the wings today, with its attendant responsibilities. Around these parts, school is already starting. I guess most of us are about ready.

Underdog Home Team wins A League trophy

Realty team beats Winchester Wine & Spirits, 6-5, in a four-hit rally

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Home Team Realty completed its Cinderella season last week with a thrilling come-from-behind, 6-5, victory over Winchester Wine & Spirits to win the Winchester Men's Softball A League championship.

Gary Floyd had the game-winning hit as he lined a single to right-center field against an overshifted outfield in the bottom of the ninth inning. The hit capped a four-run rally for Home Team who won three games in a row after losing the first game of the series to Wine & Spirits.

Wine & Spirits went into the contest looking to improve their offense after scoring only three runs in the previous game. Player/coach Mark Lawson led by example as he opened the game with a line drive home run. One out later, Mike Walsh smacked another home run and the new found power gave Wine & Spirits an early, 2-0, lead.

Home Team got the runs back in the third inning using some two-out fireworks. With Rudy Fiore on first, Kevin Scully lined a ground-rule double over the wall in right field. J.C. Forbes, who carried the hot bat in game three of the series, came through again as he laced another ground-rule double to score Fiore and Scully with the tying runs.

Both teams played stingy defense after the third inning as neither team had any scoring oppurtunities until Home Team threatened in the sixth. With two outs and Fiore again at first, Ed Osterberg roped a double down the left field line. The ball bounced off left fielder Tommy Datillo and out of play, allowing Fiore to score all the way from first. But the home plate umpire ordered Fiore back to third because he ruled the ball was not deliberately knocked out of play, thus, it was a ground-rule double. A heated argument ensued an Home Team coach Kevin Floyd was ejected from the game for pressing his point too far.

As the game wore on and the tension began to mount, more tempers flared. In the bottom of the seventh inning, Jerry Scully hit what appeared to be a single but the umpire ruled he stepped out of the batters box too soon and he was called out. As teammates restrained Scully, Fiore got into it with the umpire and he was thrown out of the game as well.

With Home Team now playing short handed, Wine & Spirits made its move to square the series in the top of the ninth inning. With the bases loaded, John Gannon hit into a fielder's choice to score Jeff Lawson. An error on the play allowed Walsh to score and Wine & Spirits led 4-2. Ron Askin followed with a single to drive in Doug Lawson and it appeared the series was headed for a fifth game.

However, Home Team was not finished yet as they had proven in game two of the series. They immediately loaded the bases as they had two nights earlier. Nick Mastromarino walked and Osterberg came in with the first run of the inning. Jerry Scully then lashed a single to deliver Forbes and suddenly Home Team was within a run, 5-4. The key play in the rally occurred next as Bob Alberigi's grounder to third was scooped up by Doug Lawson who threw home to force Kurt Ellis for one out but Jeff Lawson's throw down to first base pulled Wayne Lawson off the bag. Mastromarino, running from second base on the play, never slowed up and came on to score the tying run. Paul Collins single moved Alberigi over to third setting up the moment of truth for Home Team.

It was all up to Gary Floyd. In the seventh inning, Mark Lawson had embarrassed Floyd by throwing him out from short center field on what would normally be a routine single. Lawson had shifted from his right-center field position into a short field position behind second base. This time, Floyd had the last laugh as Lawson's shift backfired and he laced a single into the vacated area to score Alberigi with the winning run.

The win capped a storybook season for Home Team who had been mired in the middle of the pack all season long until they found new life in the playoffs. The road to the championship was a tough one as Home Team went through three of the top A League teams including stunning series upsets of Dairy Barn and the Kings to reach their final destiny against Wine & Spirits.

Country club loses in Tucker Anthony golf tourney semi-finals

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester Country Club advanced all the way to the semifinals in the Tucker Anthony Golf Classic before being ousted by Tatnuck Country Club, 26-19.

The match took place last Sunday at the Holly Ridge Golf Club in South Sandwich, Cape Cod and was aired the same night on New England Sports Network (NESN). Representing the Winchester Country Club were professional Jim Lane and amateur partners Patty Sheehan and Winchester Country Club President Robert Connelly.

The pros are competing for $6,800 in prize money and for any amateur making a hole in one, $10,000 will be donated to the Francis Ouimet Caddy Scholarship Fund.

Both teams seemed to have some jitters early on as the players not only had to deal with the pressure of the semifinals, but they also had to deal with television cameras and the presence of renowned PGA touring pro Bruce Devlin who was on hand to give commentary of the action. Winchester CC trailed after the first hole 14-10.

They settled down in the second hole but unfortunately so did Tatnuck CC as they advanced to the final where they will meet Hyannisport Country Club.

The semifinal match will be rebroadcasted tonight on NESN at 7:00 p.m. In addition to Devlin, the commentators for the series include the peculiar combination of Fred Cusick, Derek Sanderson and Clive Fazioli.

Ward's Has A Gift For Any Occasion

For more than forty five years Ward's Gift Shop, located at 24 High St., Medford, has supplied that special something for many occasions from weddings and showers to birthdays and anniversaries.

For around thirty of those years the shop has been managed by one person who is on a first name basis with most of Ward's customers—they know her as Dorothy.

Ward's strives to give what they call "that personal touch" to the service of it's customers and Dorothy is always on hand to offer gift ideas and assist them in finding the appropriate present for a friend or relative.

Ward's carries one of the largest selections of Waterford crystal in the Boston area, a collection to which even more pieces have recently been added.

They also have more than 300 Patterns of china including such well-known names as Lenox Royal Doulton, Pickard, Wedgwood and Noritake.

Among the 15,000-20,000 items in the store is one of New England's widest selection of figurines, collector's dolls, and limited-edition plates featuring such well-known names as Lladro, Royal Doulton, Hummel, Kaiser, Anri, Sebastian, Francis Hook and Precious Moments.

FLASHBACKS

A special look at Winchester schools 5 and 10 years ago...

5 years ago: 1982

Winchester Schools strive for complete computer education in five years. The goal is to have students become familiar with the rapidly advancing technology to prepare for careers after high school. They will be able to converse in LOGO and other computer languages, and will become comfortable with their ability to understand and solve problems on their own with computers. The money appropriated in the town's budget for the computer plan to be enacted in the fall of 1982 is $49,000. The money will be used for computers, programs, and instructors.

The five-year plan outlined is to fill in the gap between seventh grade and senior year in high school, as well as to expand the role of the computer in the elementary schools. The seventh grade computer course that is now mandatory will be expanded to the eighth grade. In the high school, virtually every subject will have access to computers, making the writing lab course strong with word processors, and advancing the computer science program with Apple 2e computers. In the elementary schools, basic skills, such as learning to tell time, will be taught with computer programs. At such an early age in elementary school, children will learn quickly the advantages of computer programs and grow accustomed to them in preparation for high school.

Four new projects get underway at the Winchester High School, all related to the problems and procedures of administration. Three of the projects involve committee establishments made up of parents, students, and staff to review scheduling and disciplinary procedures, and to establish new rules if deemed necessary. The fourth is a request that each department of the curriculum be directed to review teaching methods and student feed back and establish necessary changes. All four projects are deemed imperative to cover the eventuality of the three-year high school expansion to four years.

The new humanities course tops the list of courses at the high school. First proposed seven years ago, the humanities course is to involve four teachers and about 50 students in the coming year. The full-year course is designed to offer students an interdisciplinary look at the progress of Western culture through the ages, with main emphasis on social studies, music, art and English.

Other new courses being offered are family relations and child growth and development, both offered through the home economics department; Project Adventure, a new physical education section at WHS emphasizing values of self and group reliance in which students will be working with ropes and climbing, both in and out of doors.

The English Department of WHS initiates writing laboratory courses in grades seven through nine at both junior high schools, and as a requirement for 10th grade. Both students and teachers indicate that the 10th grade labs are highly successful in improving writing skills and creativity.

Due to the lack of parking spaces at the high school campus, and because of the problems that arise as a result of the demand for parking, a towing policy for illegally parked cars is initiated by the high school administration. The cars that are found in fire lanes surrounding the building, as well as the student cars parked in the visitor parking area, on lawns, and in the staff parking lot are termed illegally parked and are to be towed at the owner's expense.

Winchester High School Class of 1977 enacts the school's name on the front of the building, along with the red and black Sachem symbol previously mounted in early spring. In 10 years, the Sachem has become the emblem for all sports gear and uniforms, as well as the articles sold in the WHS school store.

had been forced open and that someone had been in the house, police said.

While standing in front of the house, the man told police he heard noise from the wooded area across the street. A man then exited from the woods. He told the resident that he had been chasing two youths he had seen in the yard of the North Border Road residence, according to police.

The resident asked the man to stay while he called police, but he did not, police said.

The man described the suspect as 5-feet-10-inches tall, fat, with brown hair, possibly blue eyes, in his mid-20s, with a fair complexion and a tan, a wearing a gray shirt and blue jeans, police said.

When police arrived, they found that all the rooms in the house had been ransacked. A search of the woods turned up two pillow cases full of items the resident identified as his, police said.

The man's front door and door frame had been damaged so that they did not close properly, according to police.

Police found fingerprints on the items in the pillow case, and with the help of a partial license plate number from the North Boarder Road man, police traced the suspect.

No decision yet on ALS

costs, and equipment, although he said the firemen's union would disagree with him.

Another problem with operating a paramedic squad is maintaining currency. Choate-Symmes Hospital's Neil Strohman said paramedics must practice their skills on a regular basis and he did not believe Winchester had enough of a call to keep the paramedics current.

Selectman Mark Lombardi said he wanted to hear from the firemen and policemen's union before making a decision, because they are the people who will have to work with ALS.

Board member Robert Deering was in favor joining the consortium. "Any time anybody is going to give us a service that may save one life, I'm willing to take the risk," he said.

But Sopper countered, "There's no such thing as a free lunch. When someone offers you something for free, be careful."

Winchester Hospital's Dr. John Jenkins said that under the current system, if a person is trapped in his car after an accident and is bleeding, it can take 20 minutes to get the person to a hospital, and it may be too late. Paramedics are authorized to start intravenous lines to administer drugs and blood transfusions.

Housing articles to go on TM warrant

The Department of Community Development will deal with more than just housing issues. Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia supported the article. "It is never too late to indulge in professional planning," she said.

She said she sees the position as a way for one person to keep track of all planning issues in the town so Winchester will be better able to make long-range decisions.

Sopper suggested hiring someone on a temporary basis due to financial constraints. "We have to look to save money, not to spend it," he said.

Lombardi shared Sopper's concern with expenses. "Do we really need it and can we afford it?" Lombardi asked about the department.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer said the Director of Community Development position would cost the town no less than $50,000. Winchester would be eligible for a Massachusetts incentive aid grant to fund the position for three years. If Winchester received a grant, the state would pay 75 percent of the expenses for the first year. The aid would decline for the next two years and then end.

Maurer said if the town did not get the grant and the position were created for fiscal year 1988, the finances would have to come from free cash. "We have a problem with free cash," Maurer said. "That is a limiting factor." He said he favors the position, but that from a budgetary standpoint, there are problems with it.

Schmitt argued that by filling the position with a skilled community developer, the town is bound to save money. The director, he said, would be able to help the town take advantage of all available grants.

Sopper said Maurer receives notice about all available grant money. He called the proposed directorship a "pork barrel position."

The filing of the Department of Community Development article on the warrant also passed 3-2 with Sopper and Lombardi the minority voters.

The articles have not yet been written. The board will vote on the articles' exact wording when final drafts have been written.

Police dispute lands in court

An internal dispute in the Winchester Police Department has led to a hearing at Woburn District Court today.

Police Chief John McHugh would say only that there was an assault and battery charge pending involving some members of the department.

No one in the department besides McHugh would comment on the case.

200 lose electricity

About 200 Winchester residents lost electrical power early Wednesday morning due to the failure of an underground line in Woburn.

Boston Edison spokeman Michael Monahan said residents of the area around Johnson Road and Ridge Street lost power at 2:41 a.m. All Winchester service was resumed by 5:05 a.m., Monahan said.

There is only one ELVIS:

the king of rock and roll

There were poodle skirts and bobbie socks, slicked back hair and white buck shoes. And there was Elvis Presley

Although Presley has been dead 10 years this month, his memory carries on. He rose from obscurity to fame in less than a year, amazing some and inspiring others in the process. He gave cadillacs to his friends, a house to his parents, and music to the world.

As a 20-year-old Memphis truck driver, Presley dreamed of being a star. Little did he realize that his fame would be greater than he ever imagined, creating a legend.

Before 1956, Presley and his band were unknown. In the latter part of 1955, however, their music was beginning to attract attention. They were creating a new sound by blending country music and rhythm and blues — rockabilly. The fires of rock and roll were beginning to flicker.

Songs like Mystery Train and That's Alright began to play down south. Colonel Tom Parker heard Presley play, and recognized his potential as a singer. He offered him a management contract. This was to be the beginning of a life-long relationship between the two.

On January 10, 1956, Presley recorded his first RCA release, Heartbreak Hotel. The song was a hit, selling two million copies and giving him the first gold album of his career.

The demand was so great that RCA had to use the pressing plants of other record companies to fill their massive orders. Within a year, he would have five gold records, and would not be able to walk in the street without being recognized.

Presley was a controversial figure in the 50s for two reasons. Firstly, he was a white man singing black music. Racial tension was high, and many radio stations refused to play his music. However, when he sang Little Richard's Tutti Fruiti on national television, Presley crossed racial barriers in music and opened the door for others to follow.

Secondly, some felt his girating hips, which caused him to be dubbed "Elvis the Pelvis," were obscene. Efforts were made to stop his suggestive movements. Some, like Ed Sullivan, resorted to filming Presley from the waist up.

However, try as he might, Presley couldn't stop moving. As he himself said, "Rock and roll music, if you like it and if you feel it, you can't help move to it...I have to move around. I can't stand still. I've tried it and I can't do it."

Despite controversy, Presley continued to climb the record charts, with songs like Baby, Let's Play House and I Want You, I Need You, I Love You. He had a total of 45 top ten hits in his career.

By the middle of 1956, Presley's face was on everything from charm bracelets to bubblegum cards. In addition, he was beginning to fulfill his dream of being a movie star.

Presley became frustrated by the scripts he was given because he felt that they were not testing his abilities as an actor. In addition, he wanted an acting career separate from his singing career, but the two were combined. Presley made a total of 33 films in his career.

In 1958, Presley was inducted into the army, just as he was to begin filming King Creole. When his studio raised a fuss about their investment going into the service, he was given a deferment for a few months.

People began to grumble about "preferential treatment" for the star. However, Elvis soon announced that he wanted to protect his country and do his share. He was quickly reinstated, not only into the army, but into the hearts of much of the adult population, gaining their respect for being "one of the boys."

He rose from obscurity to fame in less than a year, amazing some and inspiring others in the process.

Presley was, for many teenagers in the 1950s, a hero. Whether it was his sexy voice or good looks, his hip-swaying movements or homeboy personality, he was on his way to being a star. Girls screamed for him, guys imitated him, and some just shook their heads, claiming he was causing juvenile delinquency.

Overall, however, America and the world accepted Presley, and he accepted them. Singing was his life, and he used to say that if he couldn't sing, he didn't want to live.

Presley's music evolved with the times. Although he retained his country and blues roots, the instrumental backing was constantly updated. In addition, he served as inspiration for a tremendous number of rock musicians.

Some, like musician Billy Pezzulo, thought of Presley as a "supreme idol."

"Back when I started singing, my mom told me, when I got frustrated, 'Look at Elvis, Billy, how he made it. His mother always supported him and I'm going to support you," recalls Petruzzo. "He was my goal — I wanted to be just like him."

Throughout the first ten years of his singing career, Petruzzo patterned his voice after Presley.

"Then it got to the point where I decided I had to do my own thing. Elvis was awesome, but there's only one Elvis."

For many who grew up in the 50s, Presley represented an age, a time when friends would gather at each others houses to play 45's and dance; when a guy gave a girl his ring to wear on a chain around her neck; and when nights were spent listening to American Bandstand and going to sock hops. Presley represented the past, with all of its magic moments.

Joann LoRusso remembers the first time Presley was due to appear on the Ed Sullivan show. Although Sullivan had refused to have him as a guest in the past, his increasing popularity forced him to change his mind.

"I remember Elvis was going to be on t.v. and we went for a ride in the car with the family," recalls LoRusso. "My father got lost and we were so afraid we wouldn't get home in time to see him. We were crying in the back seat. All we could think was 'Oh my God. We're going to miss Elvis Presley.'" Luckily, adds LoRusso, they made it home.

In place of bobby socks and ponytails came marriages, children, and mortgage payments. The youth of the 50's was growing up.

Presley grew as well, says fan Ann Simmons. And as he progressed, "He gained more fans; not just young kids, but grandmothers — everyone. He could fill stadiums right to the end," she notes.

When Presley died, the symbol of carefree youthful days was gone for some. Many fans, however, sought to keep his memory alive.

In Memphis, Tennessee, fans gather each year on the anniversary of Presley's death to pay tribute to the king. The week-long tribute includes a trivia contest, candlelight vigil, nostalgia concert, and memorial services, as well as visits to Presley-related places of interest, such as his home at Graceland and Tupelo, Mississippi, his birthplace.

Simmons and her husband, Joe, are just two fans who attended the 10th Annual International Tribute Week. Despite the 90° heat, it is estimated that 50,000 people from all over the world traveled to Memphis to pay tribute to the king.

Simmons noted that she became an Elvis Presley fan later in his career, after seeing him in a documentary in 1972, then in the concert televised from Hawaii in 1973.

"I just went crazy, and have been a fan ever since," she said.

For the past seven years, Simmons has traveled to Memphis for the tribute week.

"It's hard to explain why I go back every year," said Simmons. "Once you go, it's like a magnet that draws you back. You get all worked up."

Her husband agreed. "It's not a feeling you can put into words. You have to be there and experience it to know what it's like."

He went on to note that Presley had a similar affect on his audiences when in concert. "It (seeing him in concert) is like ten times the biggest chill you've ever experienced."

In Memphis, Simmons noted that while seeing the sites is sad, "It makes you feel better to know he lived for something. You feel good knowing he's still remembered."

Part of Presley's charm, says Simmons, was his ability to relate to people from all walks of life. She noted that as a poor-boy-turned-rich, "he never became cocky. He stayed the same when he became a star." That, feels Simmons, is one of the things that keeps his memory alive today.

Presley's attitude is what made many admire him. Some of these people return each year to Memphis. Simmons recalls the tribute week two years ago when Muhammed Ali came to pay his respect.

"It was really touching that he came, because he didn't look too well himself. He said his favorite song was Don't Be Cruel because it was the prettiest sound he ever heard. Then he said, 'Elvis and I loved and admired each other because we were both kings at what we did,'" recalls Simmons.

She noted that there were countless other stories at this year's nostalgia concert. Chet Atkins remembered asking Presley if he had minded going into the service, to which Presley replied that he still had splinters under his fingernails from being pulled off of the porch.

The Jordannaires, who sang back-up for Presley in the beginning of his career, reminisced about Presley's warming up at the studio with gospel songs. The studio managers would get upset, trying to make Presley get down to business. However, they soon realized that this was just his way of warming up.

> Singing was his life, and he used to say that if he couldn't sing, he didn't want to live.

While vendors lined the streets selling Presley paraphenalia, stories, songs, and tears were shared by the many who traveled to Memphis.

"People walk around and cry," said Simmons. "There are impersonators, even five year old kids dressed up like him. But a lot of people just go because they like Elvis. Not all Elvis fans are freaks."

Simmons noted that the atmosphere is bonding in Memphis. "It feels like the United Nations. Being an Elvis fan gives you a connection to people you otherwise not have anything in common with."

The tribute week climaxed with an all-night candlelight vigil. Fans gathered at Graceland to pass by Presley's grave. As they entered the gateway, their candles were lit by members of the national fan club, with flame from the eternal torch which rests by Presley's grave. It is estimated that 25,000 people walked by his grave this year.

The final event was a memorial service held at Memphis State University on August 16, the anniversary of his death. Speakers included friends and relatives of Presley, sharing more stories, more memories.

"It's sad to think he could give so much love and no one could save him," said Simmons. "He was so alone, but he had to keep up his image."

Many cannot understand the dedication these fans have to their hero. For some, he was a star who became a pill-popping junk food addict and died at an early age.

For others, however, he is a hero. And ten years after his death, Elvis Presley still holds a place in their hearts.

Studebaker performs at New Ehrlich

Boston's Studebaker Movement Theater Company and New Ehrlich Theatre will co-produce Studebaker's fall performance series featuring the critically acclaimed, Saltimbanques, Sept. 9 through Sept. 20

Peformances are Wednesday through Sundays at 8 at the New Ehrlich Theatre, 539 Tremont St. in Boston's South End. Tickets are $10 general admission and $6 for seniors and students. For ticket information call 482-6316.

The fall performance series features Studebaker's critically acclaimed Saltimbanques, inspired by the painting by Pablo Picasso.

In the last ten years, Studebaker MTC has travelled over 100,000 miles throughout the U.S., Canada and Europe. In 1986, Studebaker was invited to Czecholslovakia as the first American performing group to officially tour the country in five years.

In its ten year history, Studebaker's performances have engaged audiences with high energy imagery and comic relief.

Ferron will sing at the Folk Tree Festival.

Sheboppin opens at Wilbur

Sheboppin, a new '60s musical featuring many of the most popular songs of the era, will have its world premiere at Boston's Wilbur Theatre, opening a six week engagement on Tuesday, Sept. 15.

The 25-song book musical was conceived and written by Fran Charnas, Michael Oster and John B. Welch. Directed by Charnas, Sheboppin is being produced by Mark Ammons and Sandra Pascal and, for this production, the Wilbur has been converted into an intimate 499-seat cabaret environment.

Set on a Saturday in the early 1960s, Sheboppin is the story of four women working at Coiffures by Cookie. Although Dolores, Arlene, Betty and L.T.D. range in age from 15 to 24, and come from different ethnic backgrounds, they all share one thing in common: the Music.

The tunes of the times tell everything about these girls anyone needs to know, from fantasies of Elvis, Frankie or Troy, to their real-life boy problems.

Among the nearly two dozen classic hits in the show are : One Fine Day, Twist & Shout, Dedicated to the One I Love, Happy Birthday Sweet Sixteen, Heartbreak Hotel and Wishin' and Hopin'.

Fran Charnas conceived, directed and choreographed the long-running musical hit The All Night Strut! which, in 1979, ushered in the era of the Boston musical revue.

The performance schedule beginning Sept. 15 will be Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 6 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., Sunday at 3 p.m., and Thursday at 2 p.m.

Tickets are priced at $19.50, $24.50 and $27.50 and are on sale at the Wilbur Theatre box office, all Ticketron outlets, or charge by phone at Teletron by calling 720-3434 or 1-800-382-8080. Robertson headlines at Catch

Harvard alumnus Ron Robertson kicks off September comedy as the headliner at Catch A Rising Star through Sept. 5. Along with Robertson are local favorites Dana Gould and Laura Kightlinger.

Ron's history of success includes playing major league baseball for both the Oakland A's and the Atlanta Braves ("I began in the Oakland A's chain, but was traded to the Braves for some Stevie Wonder tapes.") Ron later received his MBA degree from Harvard Business School and then went on to become a leading consumer products marketing executive.

Ron launched his career in comedy by secretly leading a double life; executive by day, comedian by night. As he puts it, "The last thing someone wants is a person who is a clown by night handling their money!"

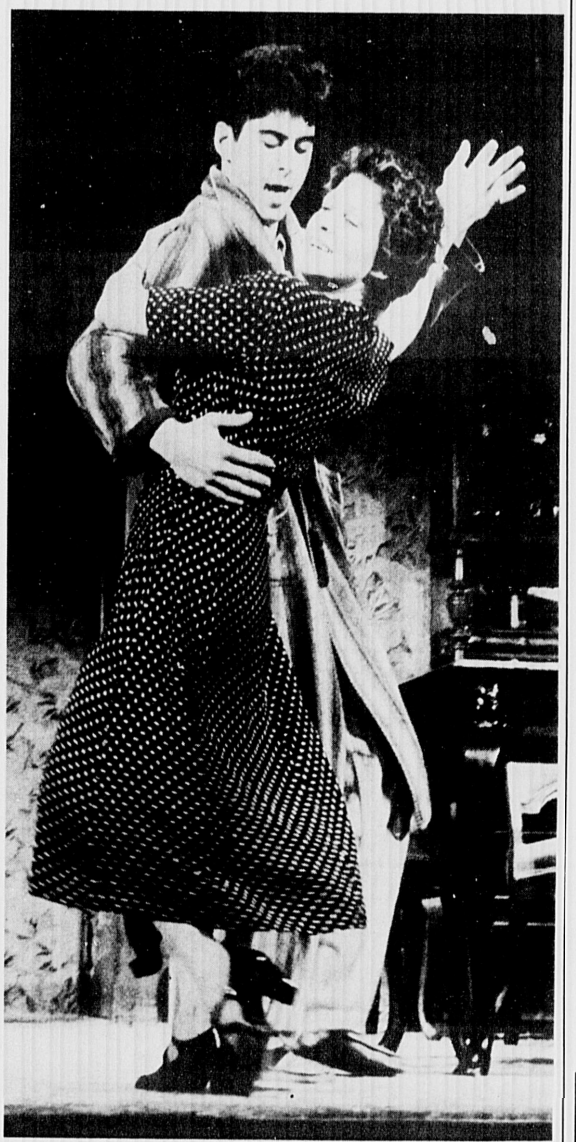
Whimsical comedy a loving tribute



Jonathan Silverman and Linda Lavin star in Neil Simon's play Broadway Bound at the Broadhurst Theatre, New York City.

Broadway Bound, a two act play by Neil Simon; directed by Gene Saks; scenery by David Mitchell; costumes by Joseph G. Aulisi; lighting by Tharon Musser. At the Broadhurst Theatre, 44th St. West of Broadway, NYC. With Linda Lavin, John Randolph, Jonathan Silverman, Jason Alexander, Phyllis Newman and Philip Sterling.

Review

Picture this! It's the coldest day of the year. A couple are kissing on the corner of the street. Their lips become cemented together and the local tailor has to be summoned to use his steamer to pry their lips apart! Who, other than flip-witted Eugene Morris Jerome (the surrogate Neil Simon), could conjure up so hilarious a moment?

For the past nine months the Jerome family, with likeable Eugene as their spokesman, has been delighting capacity audiences at Broadway's Broadhurst Theatre in Broadway Bound, the third chapter in Simon's semi-autobiographical trilogy.

If you recall, Eugene, the whimsical Brooklyn youth, struggled through a silver-lined Depression while stumbling into manhood in Brighton Beach Memoirs. Then, in Biloxi Blues, he was exposed to boot-camp bigotry. Now, in Broadway Bound, Eugence is poised and ready to make his mark as a comedy writer, a career that would catapult him to the top as the world's best-known and highest paid writer in his field.

Brighton Beach Memoirs won the New York Drama Critics Circle Award; Biloxi Blues copped the Tony Award; and while Broadway Bound lost out to Fences for Best Play in this year's Tony competition, it did garner the coveted awards for Linda Lavin as Best Actress and John Randolph as Best Supporting Actor. But then, the entire cast is socko and, as with its forerunners, talented Gene Saks is again at the directional helm and his staging is brilliant.

The three plays have made it easy to follow Simon's emotional growth as a writer and Broadway Bound is the best play he has ever crafted. The interaction between characters is far more complex than anything he has ever done. It abounds with universal appeal. You will roar with laughter as tears of compassion roll down your cheeks. It is funny, heart-warming, sensitive and touching, and just plain wonderful!

Broadway Bound signals the demise of one generation and the coming of age of another. It chronicles the agony of the neophyte writer...what Eugene and his brother Stanley, three years his elder, go through trying to create comedy material.

Although Eugene has matured, he still retains that endearing innocence, and he still comes front and center to address the audience with his innermost thoughts. But in Broadway Bound Eugene, in a sense, is a peripheral character, commenting on the action.

The play is, in actuality, a loving tribute to his (Simon's) long-suffering mother, a woman who assiduously managed the finances during desperately lean years; whose inner strength kept the family together; and who was always burdened with overwhelming responsibilities.

Broadway Bound covers a month's time, opening in late February of 1948, and is set in the same familiar house we grew to know in Brighton Beach Memoirs; but the mood is darker and more dramatic.

Abyssinia extended

Due to popular demand, the new musical Abyssinia has been extended for an additional week, through Sunday, Sept. 13, at Goodspeed-at-Chester/The Norma Terris Theatre.

This joyous, dramatic tale with a glorious gospel score is now playing to capacity audiences at Goodspeed's satellite theatre for musical premieres, located in Chester, Connecticut (exit 6 off Route 9).

Set at the turn of the century in an Oklahoma Baptist church community, Abyssinia tells the story of a young girl blessed with the gift of song and the more dubious gift of healing. Young Abyssinia Jackson must overcome a crisis of faith in order to truly claim her gifts and rejoice in life. Universal and deeply appealing, Abyssinia is a moving testimony to the spiritual power of music.

Produced by Goodspeed's Associate Artistic Director Dan Siretta, Abyssinia has music by Ted Kociolek and lyrics by James Racheff. Based on the novel Marked By Fire by Joyce Carol Thomas, the book for Abyssinia was co-authored by both Racheff and Kociolek.

Directed by Tazewell Thompson with musical direction by Daryl Waters, Abyssinia has scenery designed by James Leonard Joy, costumes by Amanda J. Klein and lighting by Allen Lee Hughes.

Curtain times for Abyssinia are Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 5 and 9; and Sunday at 5, with a Wednesday matinee at 2:30.

Talk Back discussions with the director and authors follow each Tuesday and Thursday evening performance.

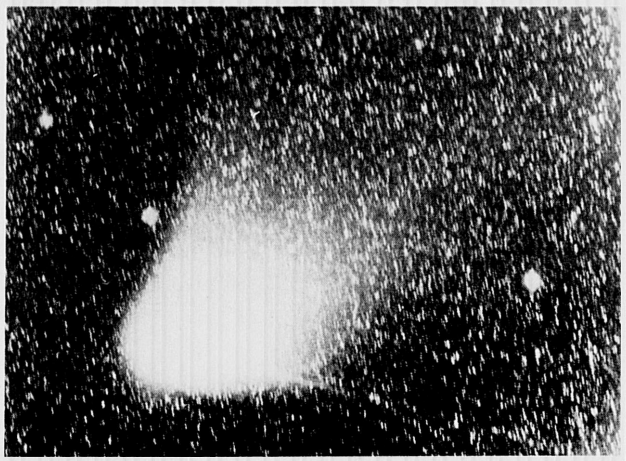
What About Art?

By Meredith Fife Day



Time lapse exposures light up the night skies in the many of the 72 pictures in an astrophography exhibit in Chestnut Hill.

(Photo courtesy The Gallery at Creative Framing)

Looking at the sky

Anyone who has ever experienced the beauty, awe and immensity of the northern lights knows the magnetism of a cosmos that reveals a minuscule portion of itself in the evening sky.

Six photographers who have given themselves over to the wonder of the heavens, aided by sophisticated technological knowledge and equipment have hitched their cameras to telescopes and put the resulting pictures on display at The Gallery at Creative Framing, 815 Boylston St., Chestnut Hill.

Kenneth Fye, Ph.D., amateur astronomer and head of the media center at Boston University, combines negatives with an instinct for the drama and surprise of incongruous scale. In Whale Watch, the animal's curved "T"-shaped tail lifts with monumental grace from the dark, finely textured water. The picture is halved by the ocean's horizon on which rests a round moon so enormous that it is cropped by both the picture's edges and by the horizon line. The oversized celestial body appears to be sinking into the waters as the big whale submerges himself. Augmenting the moment's drama is a thick black void behind the telescopically-photographed moon.

Fye also takes advantage of double images and transitory reflections in creating his ethereal juxtapositions. The startling image of the moon appearing to be going down behind the sun's burst of white light is effected in Eclipse Inverted by a light reflection caught and, along with a negative overlap, used by the photographer.

The photographs of David C. Jewitt and Karen Meech, both Ph.D.s in MIT's department of earth, atmospheric and planetary science, are different in intent and presentation from Fye's. In a series of sequential frames — in groups of 16 to 20 — the two trace and document the history of the 1986 romp of Halley's Comet through our solar system. These clear and amazing frames graphically articulate the growth of the comet's tail as the heat of solar radiation changes its frozen state into a gaseous one.

Dennis diCicco's photographs are documentary, too. But unlike Meech and Jewitt, diCicco, associate editor of Sky and Telescope magazine, places his scientific probing of the heavens in the visual context of his earthbound point of observation. Meaning and content are given to the role of place in looking skyward. Almost all of diCicco's photographs are titled by geographical location, as if in acknowledgement of its importance and in anticipation of viewers' curiosity about where the photograph was taken: Halley's Comet lights a wavy picket fence in Duxbury, Mass., extending scientific phenomena into a mysterious presence; golden columns of Luxor, Egypt tower into a vast night sky where Jupiter and Venus are tiny but recognizable specks; craggy trees and landforms of Australia are silhouetted against the Milky Way's filmy beauty.

The photographer's own Sudbury, Mass. house is the foreground for the pale purple swirls of an aurora borealis. The same rooftop appears in diCicco's best-known work, Analemma, a one-year timed exposure of the sun in which the fiery ball's path forms a connect-the-dots figure eight over orange shingles and a brick chimney. Analemma hangs in the British Museum's permanent collection of The 100 Most Significant Scientific Photographs in the 150-year history of photography.

Exhibit curator Robert Ross, like Kenneth Fye, uses darkroom manipulation to combine images, giving the sky a surreal and sometimes theatrical role.

Working as a collage artist might, Ross uses masks, cutouts, double exposures and false color, combining two to five steps and photographs for an individual picture.

Ross's use of color is especially effective in Two Moons. Here the two muted blue spheres are scaled down so that the sky's largeness is felt. Delicate color seems less applied than dispersed through the air of space.

Finally, three photographs by Dan Smoody round out this very full show. Strong dark-light contrasts give the moon's cratered, spherical form an eerie and dramatic presence. In another context, the same emphasis on contrast gives Orion Nebula and Horse Head Nebula a bright and exciting energy that makes clear how superior nature's fireworks are to our own.

The Astrophotography Show is on display through Sept. 29. The fascination of the subject and expertise of the photographers compensate for crowding of the more-than-72 works and harsh lighting. Ross is an informed and enthusiastic gallery host and viewers are bound to come away from the show with a "broader view." The gallery opens at 10 a.m. Monday through Saturday and closes at 8 p.m. Thursday, 9 p.m. Saturday and 6 p.m. all other days. Call 277-0441.

American Rep to host imaginary circus

Whereas Brighton Beach Memoirs focused on the unity of the family, everyone sticking together, Broadway Bound concerns the disintegration of the family; mother and father are having their problems and everyone is going their separate ways.

Eugene (Jonathan Silverman) has been out of the service two years now. He is mooning over a girl who's already engaged to a Harvard boy. He has a special rapport with his live-in grandfather Ben (John Randolph), a dyed-in-the-wool socialist who hasn't laughed since the crash. "Pop...you want wine?" asks Eugene. "No," he replies, "too much acid...I'll have a beer." Counters Eugene, "We're out of beer. So Pop queries, "You got wine?"

Eugene works in the stock room of a music company and Stanley (Jason Alexander), in the boy's clothing department of Abraham & Strauss. The pair dream of becoming comedy writers, biding time until the big opportunity arrives. Eugene has obvious talent but needs to be pushed.

Stanley gets them an audition for a job writing for CBS radio; the only hitch is that they must write and deliver a sketch by 11 a.m. the next morning. But Eugene is consumed by his plight of unrequeted love and suffers a massive mental block. And, as the team work together throughout the night, desperately trying to come up with an idea for a skit, the household is falling apart around them.

But when things are most bleak, there's always Eugene. At dinner he complains to his mother, "What did you do to the meat?" She replies, "I killed it!"

The strained relationship between the parents Jack (Philip Sterling) and Kate (Linda Lavin), has the brothers taking opposite sides, and the revelation of Jack's infidelity tears the family asunder. There are stunning confrontation scenes between Jack and Kate's sister Blanche (Phyllis Newman), and Jack and Kate, with all communication coming to a dead halt.

The script is finished and delivered...three days late, but CBS puts their work on...a radio show at 6 p.m., at a time Eugene notes..."when people are getting dressed!"

But the highlight of the play, a heart-wrenching, luminescent moment in theatre, comes in a second-act monologue that Simon has given Lavin, that Saks has staged exquisitely, and which Lavin turns into a gorgeous, transcendent tour de force!

Eugene is seated at the dining room table and prods Kate into recounting a fleeting moment of reverie in her life. And while her marriage crumbles, Kate recalls an evening in her youth when she disobeyed her parent's strict rules, stayed out late, and danced with George Raft in a nightclub. Eugene, looking on with bewilderment, rises and takes his mother into his arms, and with Kate's eyes gazing into the distant past, the two dance a rapturous tango. A moment indelibly inscribed!

A.R.T. presents fall festival

Robert Brustein, artistic director of the American Repertory Theatre, has announced the company will present its fall festival of theatrical offerings from Sept. 8 through Oct. 10.

First, the theatre will present Le Cirque Imaginaire (The Imaginary Circus). This is the two-person circus created and performed by the husband and wife team of Jean Baptiste Thierree and Victoria Chaplin.

It plays for twelve performances only, from Sept. 8 through Sept. 20. Because of Le Cirque's special appeal as a family event, evening performances will begin at 7:30 p.m. (approximate running time is two hours), with matinees on Sunday at 2 p.m.

Following Le Cirque Imaginaire, the resident company will revive two productions from its repertory — twelve performances of Robert Brustein's adaptation of Luigi Pirandello's Six Characters in Search of an Author (Sept. 24-Oct. 10) and seven performances of Andrei Serban's production of Bertolt Brecht's The Good Woman of Setzuan (Oct. 2-Oct. 10), with music by Elizabeth Swados.

Le Cirque Imaginaire achieved enormous success around the world since its premiere at the Avignon Festival in 1971.

In Le Cirque Imaginaire, Victoria Chaplin assumes the roles of aerialist, equilibrist, and acrobat, while doubling, through the use of masks, props, and costumes, as all the tame and wild animals of a three-ring circus. Jean Baptiste Thierree plays the clowns and conjurers, delighting the audience with his juggling, verbal gymnastics, puppetry, and magic tricks.

Artistic director Robert Brustein has taken Luigi Pirandello's twentieth-century masterpiece, Six Characters in Search of an Author, and turned it into ninety minutes of suspense and mordant comedy.

Due to the popularity of last season's The Good Woman of Setzuan, the A.R.T. is extending the life of this boldly controversial production.

Directed by Andrei Serban, with music by Elizabeth Swados, and movement by Thom Molinaro, The Good Woman is the story of a warmhearted prostitute who is enjoined by three visiting gods to be virtuous in a world of harsh economic reality. An earthy fairy tale, combining the charm of Oriental theatre with the gritty strength of the German music hall, The Good Woman opens Oct. 2 and plays through Oct. 10, for seven performances only.

Evening performances of Le Cirque begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, with a matinee on Sunday at 2 p.m.

Curtain times for Six Characters and Good Woman are at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday, with matinees Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

What To Do

Take me to the river

Imagine a crisp fall morning on the Ipswich River: the beautiful fall foliage, the early morning sun warming the water surface, your canoe gliding quietly through the mist, and landing along the river's shore for a hearty breakfast served by your river guide.

Or, imagine the river under the moonlight. Fish rising to a hatch of mayflies, deer dashing and splashing through the shallows, and black-crowned night herons croaking in overhead flight.

You don't have to imagine! Mass. Audubon's Ipswich River Wildlife Sanctuary in Topsfield is offering a series of river float trips where such sights and experiences are commonplace.

The sanctuary's early morning trips start at 7 a.m., and are scheduled for Saturdays Sept. 5 and 19 and Oct. 3 and 17. These six-hour trips include a hearty breakfast, and Audubon river guides help you explore and understand the natural history and ecology of the Ipswich River. The cost of a river ecology float trip is $35 for Mass. Audubon members, $45 for non-members. Each trip is limited to 20 participants and require reservations.

The sanctuary's moonlight trip is scheduled for the full moon date of Monday, Sept. 7, and starts at 7 p.m. The nighttime trip is limited to 15 participants, is two to three hours long, and costs $15 for Mass. Audubon members and $20 for non-members.

For information and reservations, call the sanctuary office between 9 a.m. and 12 noon, Tuesday through Friday, at 887-9264.

Both trips depart from the sanctuary's canoeist's access in Topsfield. Reservations are required and can be made through the sanctuary office by calling 887-9264, Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m. - 12 noon.

On Sunday, Sept. 13, from 1 to 4 p.m., canoeists will explore the river, with a focus on trees and shrubs along the river.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, from 6:30 to 10 a.m., the focus will be on birds. Bring your binoculars, a breakfast snack, and search the river and adjacent wetlands for herons, egrets, waterfowl, kingfishers, and warblers. Canoeing experience is recommended for the birding trip.

The cost for each mini-trip is $14 for Mass. Audubon members and $18 for non-members. Space is limited, so make reservations early. For additional information, call the Ipswich River Wildlife Sanctuary at 887-9264, Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m. - noon.

CAR CARE CORNER

By Dan Hogan, Service Manager

Dirt on your car's finish can damage the finish. Salt sprinkled on the roads during winter months can cause the metal on your car to rust. The best preventive maintenance for finishes is to wash the car every time it gets dirty. If you have been driving the car on salted roads, the car should be washed weekly at a car wash. Your car also should be waxed at least twice annually—in the spring and fall. Don't overlook cleaning the inside of your car also.

The technicians at PETER FULLER OLDS are ASE certified. We keep a computeried history of all cars serviced here to notify you of preventative maintenance. Open 8-5. Tel. 924-8100. M/C, Visa & A/E accepted. We are located within walking distance to public transportation. Come to PETER FULLER OLDS, Watertown Sq. "Olds National Service Award Winner."

Quail Run project makes progress

R.W. Granger & Sons of Shrewsbury has recently completed phase one of the $12.5 million Quail Run construction project in Woburn.

Quail Run has been developed and designed by Unihab Inc., a Cambridge-based architectural and real estate development firm.

Phase one consists of 28 wood-framed clapboard townhouses. Construction has now begun on phase two, which will include two clusters totaling 33 townhouses, plus a recreation building, pool and tennis courts.

Unihab partner-in-charge Gwen Rono said that phase two will be offered to the public in June. Prices will range from about $200,000 to $260,000. A final phase is planned for 33 additional units for a total of 94 homes, scheduled for completion next summer.

Phase one townhouses are now all under purchase and sales agreements, and more than half are occupied. Phase two is scheduled for occupancy starting in September.

Three choices of floor plans are available with up to 1,550 square feet. The clustered, gabled-roofed homes offer a contemporary flair to the traditional New England style architectural design.

"All homes are entered from a village green. There is emphasis on quality and detail at Quail Run, in everything from the design and construction to the gourmet kitchen and other interior finishes," said Rono.

On the 48-acre wooded site at Quail Run, only 22 acres will be developed, with the remaining land held as a conservation easement. Quail Run is located on Russell Street in Woburn, near the Lexington line. The location provides both privacy and accessibility to major highways.

R.W. Granger & Sons provides both general contracting and construction management services and was recently ranked 253 in ENGINEERING NEWS RECORD's "Top 400 Contractors" list. Its projects are located throughout New England and range from commercial and industrial facilities to hotels, hospitals, condominiums and other private and public developments.

Amaprop starting condo development

Gregory J. Rudolph, president of Amaprop Developments Inc., has initiated construction on a 13-story, $13 million condominium development at 931 Massachusetts Ave. in Cambridge, designed by Bruner/Cott and Associates.

The building, marketed by The Condominium Collaborative of Boston, will offer 56 one- and two-bedroom residences.

Most will offer corner exposures and expansive views over Cambridge, the Charles River and Boston's Back Bay.

Each unit will be sold with a covered, secured parking space. Also featured in the building are 24-hour concierge service, two elevators and a landscaped roof terrace.

After welcoming remarks by Cambridge Mayor Walter J. Sullivan, Amaprop Chairman David Colville-Reeves thanked the people directly responsible for the project.

"Your vision, skill and capacity to dream have made this magnificent building a reality," he said.

"The 931 Massachusetts Avenue project represents the first premier residential condominium to go up in the area in many years," said Leland Cott, architect. "We have achieved in this design a building that fits into the neighborhood, both in its use of brick and granite and in its direct contribution to the streetscape. It promotes an informal feeling while achieving a sophisitication in the high level of finish and detail."

The building, which was designed within existing building codes, required no variances from the city. Construction will be completed by early next summer, according to the developers.

Purcell voted in as Muraco headmistress

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Andrea Purcell will begin a new job Monday morning at the Muraco School: the job of principal.

Last Tuesday night, after hearing that the School Committee chose her, she accomplished her first official act as a Winchester School Department employee; she wrote a letter to parents, teachers and students at Muraco.

"I feel badly that there's no principal there for school opening," Purcell said at the hearing.

When she does start, she has her job cut out for her. Filling the shoes of former Muraco, now Vinson-Owen principal Richard Young will not be easy. Many Muraco School parents expressed concern that their next principal would not be as open and have the rapport with students that Young had.

But a recommendation from Superindentent of Schools Charles Mitsakos and a unanimous vote from the School Committee without discussion Tuesday night showed that in their judgement Purcell has the right qualities to get the job done.

She certainly is happy about her new position. "It's unbelievable. This is such a thrill," Purcell said. "It's so exciting."

Purcell has been an elementary school teacher in Needham for 17 years, where she has taught both fifth and second grade. She was awarded a Horace Mann grant and used it on a program to encourage children to read at home for enjoyment.

Her academic achievements are numerous; she has a Boston College bachelor's degree in primary education, a master's in guidance and counseling and a master's of business administration with a marketing concentration from Babson College in Wellesley.

As the new principal, Purcell said she will not implement any changes at Muraco. Her first task, she said is affecting a smooth transition. She said she will spend a lot of time with teachers and in classrooms getting to know the faculty and the students. She says she will continue what School Committee Chairman William Jervey called Young's "open-door policy."

Jervey, once a Muraco parent, likened losing Young to losing a friend and asked how Purcell would deal with that feeling among parents and faculty. She said it would take time, but that she would be available during and after school to meet with parents and learn about their priorities.

She also wants to spend a lot of time with teachers and in the classrooms getting to know the students and the faculty members' different styles.

Purcell is aware of the challenges of stepping in to fill the shoes of a man

Ledges phase II goes on sale soon

Luxury condo complex caters to mature families

By ROGER L. KAY
Star Editor

Mahoney's Rocky Ledge Farm and Nursery comes by its name honestly enough. The rocky ledges are right there at the back of the parking lot in plain sight.

And it is upon these same outcroppings that Alan Green is planting his new, upscale condominium development, "The Ledges."

The 60-acre parcel that sits atop the sheer face presented an enigma to its former owner, George Whitten. He was unable to overcome the technical problems of building on solid rock.

But the Green Company saw an opportunity in the high ledge and, bringing its extensive construction experience into play, blasted out passages for the roads, utilities and house sites. Now curving drives lead to house lots with long vistas of the surrounding countryside.

When the development is completed, it will contain 110 two and three-bedroom units, and while that may sound like a lot for the size of the parcel, Green has put his cluster design concept to work to maximize the use of the land. Groups of four to eight units are attached to each other, and the land around them is kept open.

Of course, it was necessary to remove a lot of trees to improve the site, but the company plans to replant in abundance, Green says. The plans call for plantings that will entirely screen off the clusters from the access roads, so that an unwary passerby would not even know a development was there.

Green says he has tried to "preserve the natural features" of the parcel and create a "buffer to the outside" around the development.

The individual units are designed spaciously on an "open plan" that implies a small number of family members per unit.

Green says that his development is aimed at the "empty-nesters" of Winchester, those who occupy large homes now, whose children have gone or are going, and who want to move into a well-appointed space that is somewhat smaller than the one in which they live.

To make the development more appealing to this group, the company has included swimming and tennis facilities on the premises. Various levels of service will be available to the purchasers, who can pay in their condo fees for whatever level they choose up to "full service." Security is also a priority. A gatekeeper will greet all who enter at the main entrance.

There were some initial objections on the part of neighbors on Wainwright Road and Red Coach Lane, but Green was able to convince them that his development would improve the quality of their lives.

Abutter Marty Fuller of 33 Wainwright Road says that while she was not sure at first the development could be "done right," she is glad the "green space behind my home will be preserved."

"I think they're doing a great job," she said. "It's a very nice addition to the town." However, speaking of the construction, she says she will be "happy when it's done. It's very noisy."

Joseph Arigo of 416 Cambridge St., a 31-year resident of the town and also an abutter, says, "I didn't object to it from the start. I'd rather see what's up there now than something...inexpensive. I think it's going to shape up pretty good."

Green is on the Conservation Commission in his home town of Newton. He says he "believes in preserving public lands." And private lands, too. He has surrounded the Ledges with a wooded buffer zone, a feature that is standard in his projects. "Land is a precious commodity," he says. "Each parcel is a little jewel and has to be treated differently."

And like jewels, the units are not going cheap. The first batch of 18 sold at prices between $325,000 and $500,000. The next 25 to 30 will go on sale in October at prices higher than that.

Green eschews the normal sales channels, preferring to let word of mouth do most of the work. As an indication of how well this method functions, 50 people are on the waiting list for the next batch.

Green says he has had a good working relationship with the town. His permits sailed right through town boards, unlike some other towns, like Wayland, which have held up permits for other Green developments on conservation and health regulations.

The company is also participating in the "linkage" program that makes developers help in providing low and moderate income housing in the town in which they are working.

Green has committed $50,000 to Winchester's housing problem, to be paid in installations, and has also offered "direction and time" in planning the program.

He says he has turned down opportunities to develop environmentally sensitive parcels that others went ahead and built on. That was okay for them, but not for him.

"I practice old-fashioned values toward people and customers," he says. "I'm living proof that nice guys don't have to finish last."

Tennis courts to be used for parking lot

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Within a few days, students at Winchester High School will be parking on the school's tennis courts, or what used to be the school's tennis courts.

Those courts, which were closed because the land was settling, will be converted into a student parking lot as part of the solution to the Spruce Street boulder problem. The Board of Selectmen blocked off the school's Spruce Street entrance, and, therefore, the back parking lot, because of complaints by the neighbors that the traffic problem on their streets was caused by student use of the entrance.

The School Committee approved the selectmen's plan, and the added suggestions of Police Department Safety Officer Kevin Mawn.

Mawn told the committee he was not opposed to creating the new parking lot, but, he said, it would exacerbate the current safety problem of cars pulling around buses that are loading students for the trip home. He suggested placing a gate at the Nelson Street entrance, where there are currently boulders, to allow buses to line up parallel to St. Mary's School instead of at the school's front entrance.

The gate would be open only for the 10 minutes it takes the buses to arrive after school, Mawn said. They would exit through the front entrance. This system would eliminate the danger of cars passing the loading buses, he said.

In the morning, when buses drop students off, they would enter through the front. The safety problem only occurs when the buses are lined up after school, Mawn said.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer had no problem with the idea, but said the gate would have to be very sturdy.

Mawn also said he was in favor of the new parking lot if a speed bump were built at its entrance. Students exiting the lot will speed up if they see a yellow light in order to make it through the light if a bump is not there to impede them, Mawn said.

Students should be told, Mawn added, that when they are leaving the new parking lot, they should yield the right of way when the buses are leaving the school grounds.

Maurer said the parking lot is only the beginning of the solution to the school grounds problems. He said he will make a number of concerns of the committee a part of the capital budget in fiscal year 1989: building

Doctor in fraud case seemed credible to patients he treated

A former Winchester resident charged with holding a fraudulent medical degree while treating patients in Arlington and area hospitals waved his right to a grand jury hearing last week and will have to enter a plea in U.S. District Court.

Thomas R. Theodore, 41, whose last address was Eastern Avenue in Arlington, was charged with mail fraud last week. Officials say he misrepresented himself as a graduate of a Caribbean medical school in order to become licensed at medicine.

Fraudulent use of the postal system occurred when Theodore mailed a request for a medical license to a Massachusetts licensing board in 1981, officials said.

Theodore claimed he was a 1980 graduate of the Universidad Centro de Estudios Technologicos in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republican.

The school was closed by Dominican authorities in 1984 following allegations that school officials had been selling medical degrees and letters of recommendation.

After obtaining a license, Theodore was apparently granted courtesy rights at three hospitals, including Sancta Maria Hospital in Cambridge. Theodore then formed PMS Physicians Associates on Eastern Avenue in Arlington and Northshore Internal Medical Associates in Wakefield, officials said.

There have been no allegations that patients treated by Theodore suffered any harm, according to the U.S. Attorney's office in Boston.

After being charged with mail fraud, Theodore agreed to waive his right to have his case presented to a grand jury and will probably plead guilty to the mail fraud charge, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Stearns.

A U.S. District Court judge will now order a summons requiring Theodore to appear in court and enter a plea, said Stearns.

Although he waived his right to a grand jury hearing, Theodore is not required to plead guilty, Stearns said.

The charge carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

He faked a Caribbean medical degree.

No date has been set for Theodore's court appearance.

Last week, it was reported that the state had information in 1984 that Theodore's medical degree was not valid, yet allowed him to continue to treat patients for 20 more months.

The state Board of Registration in Medicine issued an order last week barring Theodore from ever attempting to renew his Massachusetts license, and the state can also warn other states that Theodore was found guilty of practicing medicine fraudulently.

Although Theodore had no medical school training he was apparently able to learn enough about medicine to pass required license tests and treat patients without being suspected.

Theodore also appeared on a Channel 7 medical segment with Dr. Alan Xenakis dealing with premenstrual syndrom (PMS) in August of 1985.

Theodore, who had been treating patients in Arlington and Wakefield for PMS, appeared on the segment briefly and spoke about being aware of PMS symptoms, but did not offer any medical advice.

School Committee to hire two new teachers, eliminate split classes

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

School started this year with the accomplishment of a goal the School Committee has had on its agenda for a long time, according to committee member Michael Ronayne: split classes have been eliminated.

Superintendent of Schools Charles Mitsakos announced at Tuesday night's committee meeting that he needed the support of the committee to hire two more faculty members, one at the Ambrose School and one at Vinson-Owen, to accomplish this goal.

He said the budget would allow for the hiring of the new teachers because of two last-minute resignations.

"You're to be congratulated for this," Ronayne said. "You've done a very, very excellent job, Charles. These are the kind of class levels and populations this town has wanted to

POLICE LOG

Monday, September 7

At 3:07 a.m. police received a motor vehicle complaint from a Canterbury Road resident.

The man said a maroon, compact car was "racing around" the street. The man stopped the car and spoke to three youths, according to police. He also got the license plate number of the car.

A check of the license plate showed that the car was owned by a Medford woman, police said.

Medford police went to the woman's home. The car was in the driveway. She told the officers that her car keys had been stolen a month ago and then returned to her front stoop, according to police.

The car, a Hyundai, had apparently been stolen from the woman's driveway and returned after the three youths were stopped by the Winchester man, police said.

Friday, September 4

At 9:15 p.m. police were dispatched to the scene of an accident at the intersection of Church and Cambridge Streets.

A 1987 Nissan and a 1980 Chevrolet Chevette collided in the middle of the intersection, according to police.

The Chevette, driven by a Somerville man, was headed north on Cambridge Street and was unable to stop after entering the intersection, police said.

The Nissan, driven by a Wyman Court man, had already begun a left-hand turn onto Church Street when the Chevette hit him. He had been headed south on Cambridge, according to police.

The Somerville man was taken to Winchester Hospital for treatment of facial and head lacerations and released, police said.

The Wyman Court man was driven to the hospital by his girlfriend with a swollen and possibly fractured right ankle, according to police.

The Somerville man was given a citation for failure to yield the right of way, police said.

Both cars were totalled, police said.

At 11:06 p.m., police received a call that money had been stolen from Bellino's Pizza on Main Street.

The owner's sister told police Doreen Bellino and another woman were counting the day's delivery receipts in the dining room. They left the money, about $1,000, on a pizza table in the back room in a brown folder, according to police.

When Bellino returned to the back room to get the money, it was gone. She said she was out of the room between 10:45 and 11 p.m., according to police.

A check of the surrounding area did not turn up the folder. The back door was open and the back, screen door was closed, police said.

The sister said she left the store at 10:15 p.m. and saw a clean-up looking male sitting in a car on Water Street near the shop. She said she called the shop and the police station to inform them, police said.

When police checked the area between 10:20 and 10:30 p.m., they did not see the man, according to police.

Thursday, September 4

At 10:45 a.m. a steam roller driven by a Hartford, Conn., man, stalled and could not be stopped, according to police.

The vehicle rolled over the driver's side of a parked 1981 Audi Sedan before it came to a stop, police said.

At 4:02 a.m. police noticed tire tracks on the Symmes Corner rotary.

They said it appeared that a small vehicle, possibly headed north on Main Street, went up the rotary bending a short, yellow pole over. The vehicle also hit a light pole, breaking the bulb, police said.

A Darnella Davis painting

Levine and Davis join Studio Guild

The Studio Guild begins classes this fall with two new professional instructors.

Rona Levine will teach the Tuesday evening sessions, starting Sept. 29, and Darnella Davis will instruct the Thursday morning classes, beginning Oct. 1.

Davis has a rich background in the arts spanning 20 years. Experienced in graphic arts and fashion illustration, with a master's of fine arts degree from Massachusetts College of Art, her particular interest now is the exploration of the human form in oils.

Davis also has a strong interest in watercolor. She spent four years in Morocco addressing this medium, and exhibited there to excellent reviews. She has also exhibited recently in the Boston area.

Levine is very active in the art community with a large number of recent exhibitions. She works in-depth in oil, pastel, and watercolor and is a graduate of the Massachusetts College of Art with a bachelor of fine arts degree.

Classes are held at the Parish of the Epiphany. Members may attend both classes each week. For information on Studio Guild membership, please call Elaine Chipman at 729-6260.

Realty World kicks off Cerebral Palsy drive

Realty World - Winchester Properties is participating in the New England company's second annual fundraising drive for United Cerebral Palsy during which a trip for two to Hawaii will be given away in a raffle drawing Nov. 19. The drive is currently underway.

The collection of Realty World offices that participated in last year's New England-wide raffle raised nearly $25,000 for their corporate sponsorship to Cerebral Palsy and are hoping to top that figure with the second annual drive. Realty World offices from Bangor, Maine to Stamford, Connecticut will be distributing raffle tickets in return for donations to UCP.

Cerebral Palsy is a neurological disorder which can be congenital, or caused by head injury. United Cerebral Palsy provides education, therapy and health care to victims and their families. Proceeds will be returned to the area from which they were collected to help cerebral palsy victims in the community.

Chances are being distributed by Realty World - Winchester Properties, a residential real estate brokerage firm located at 831 Main St. Sales associates will canvass Winchester neighborhoods soon with raffle chances.

Registration for music classes to begin

The Winchester Community Music School is currently accepting registrations for the fall semester, which begins Sept. 23.

In addition to private lessons in 16 instruments and voice, the school offers music theory, a jazz ensemble for high school students, and eurhythmics classes for pre-school children as well as recorder class for senior citizens at the Jenks Center.

Scheduling is now in progress for private lessons, and there are still some spaces in the eurhythmics classes, which are offered for 3, 4, and 5-year-olds. A class for 3½ year-olds is also being considered.

Music School Director Corie Nichols, 10 Oxford St., would be happy to answer inquiries about eurhythmics and says the school welcomes beginning and continuing students of all ages.

Jazzerobics begins Sept. 21

The fall session of jazzerobics will begin this month. Teenagers and adults are invited to join this aerobic exercise program that combines fun and fitness development into choreographed routines. Jazzerobics will firm and tone muscles, improve flexibility and condition heart and lungs.

Beginning Sept. 21, class meets Mondays and Thursdays from 6:10 to 7:10 p.m. at the Lincoln School gym. A 10 week session costs $35.

Winchester Recreation will also be offering an Easyrobics program designed for the beginner. This choreographed fitness class incorporates low impact tecniques into simple, easy to follow routines. This class meets Mondays and Thursdays from 7:15 to 8:00 p.m. A six-week session costs $20.

Judy Whitney, a certified instructor, will be teaching the classes. Please call the Winchester Recreation Department at 721-7125 to register.

Costs drive orthopaedists from Mass.

By NANCY RABINOWITZ
Special to the Star

The number of orthopedic surgeons in the state of Massachusetts is declining at a rapid rate, according to Dr. Barry Dorn, an orthopedist at 955 Main St. and a board member of the Massachusetts Orthopedic Association.

High malpractice insurance premiums (and retroactive fees), coupled with a cap on insurance billing fees controlled by the state which prohibits billing above a maximum fee, and the state's mandatory Medicare assignment, are the leading causes of the severe loss of orthopedic surgeons and other specialized physicians in the state, according to Dorn. "We resent the state saying to us: You must participate," Dorn said.

Many surgeons have opted to move their practices to other states. "They go north to New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont. They go where they think they are not going to be restricted. There is not a frank hope right now that things willl change," said Dorn.

Orthopedic surgeons in the state also face the problem of reimbursement from Blue Cross-Blue Shield, which operates under Massachusetts' unique Balance-Billing Law.

Dorn summarizes that law by saying, if "a physician is not a member of Blue Cross-Blue Shield, then neither the patient nor the physician will be reimbursed."

According to the Massachusetts Orthopedic Association (M.O.A.), the Bay State has lost 90 of its orthopedic surgeons since 1983. According to the M.O.A., "the number represents 20 percent of those practicing in 1983 and includes 36 who moved out of state, 20 who retired, 30 who have ceased performing surgery and five who are deceased."

"Each year it makes more of an impact. We actively lobby our legislators, and we try to educate the public through our patients," said Dorn. "If things get worse, I would leave," he added.

According to Paul J. Wetzel, spokesman for the Massachusetts Orthopedic Society, there are approximately 25 to 29 graduates of medical training programs in Massachusetts each year. "Historically 21, 22 or 23 stayed on. In the past four or five years that group has averaged from 10 to 12," said Wetzel. "They have always been the natural source of replacement for the natural attrition through death and retirement," he said.

In addition, said Wetzel, the rising attrition rate, "diminishes public access to orthopedic surgery. It takes longer to get an appointment, up to four or five weeks."

Said Wetzel, "there is not an orthopedic surgeon on call 24 hours a day. We are aware of cases where a patient is brought to one emergency room and then transferred to another, because there was no one to treat them. There is concrete evidence of a shortage."

"There is a brain drain right now," said Wetzel. Lack of newly trained physicians has a negative impact on the medical community, according to Dorn. "If you do not attract people into the community who are newly trained, the level of care tends to go down, "said Dorn.

REACHING THE RIGHT BUYERS

It's true that today is a great time to sell your home. Financing is affordable and buyers are out in droves. Unfortunately, many sellers mistakenly assume that the difficulty in finding the RIGHT buyer for your home has decreased as dramatically as the outer-space interests rates. Not so. If you try to sell your home yourself today, you still must face plenty of difficulties. One of them is attracting the right people.

Can you weed out "Lookers"? It takes a seasoned professional eye to spot the truly interested and qualified parties. If you don't have one, you'll find yourself wasting a lot of time on people who are no more househunting than they are deep-sea fishing. They're just passing the time because — unlike you — they don't have anything better to do. Today's seller's market has brought them our in force. If you sell through a Realtor, you can be sure that the prospects he or she will bring will be really in the market for a home.

The young, untested woman turned out to be a perfect teacher

By MARY JEAN WEYLMAN
Special to the Star

This story is part of a series of articles on Elsa Wittet by Mary Jean Weylman, a Winchester resident and friend of the Wittets.

It was a hot summer day in 1931. The superintendent of the Winchester school system, Mr. James Quinn was perspiring through his stiff collar, feeling the oppressiveness of the day with the weight of his coat and spats, as he stood on the Winchester train platform.

As he waited for the incoming train, he pondered about the reason for his standing there, to meet a prospective teacher for the Highland School. The young woman who would shortly arrive was perfect for the third and fourth grade position at the small two-teacher school house, except for one thing: she was very young, right out of Framingham Teacher's College, with but one year of experience.

Yet when he had observed her in the spring he was struck by her natural teaching ability. "Would she be right for Winchester?" he pondered as the train rounded the bend and came into view. He spotted her at once, a strikingly beautiful, blonde young woman wearing a hat and immaculate white gloves.

When he offered Elsa Nelson the position later that afternoon, Mr. Quinn would have been amazed at the wisdom of his choice and influence that this fledgling teacher would have in the education of Winchester children. This young woman was not only to teach in the tiny school on Highland Avenue, but also later at the Wyman and Washington School, where she and Dr. Leonor Rich taught fifth grade across the hall from each other.

But the thing she would be most remembered for was the founding of one of the most unique nursery schools in the area, Forest Crest Farm School. Animals and children would meet at that school for 24 years, each benefitting from the other's company.

And in the summer of 1987, 56 years after that train ride, Mrs. Elsa Wittet would publish her first book, a collection of narrative poems, true adventures of ponies and horses that made their home at the Forest Crest Farm, animals ridden and petted by children in Winchester and the surrounding towns for a quarter of a century.

"Hoofbeats from Forest Crest Farm"

That young Elsa Nelson in 1931 had always been an animal lover, but as a girl had very little real experience with them. Born in Boston, living for a brief time in Dorchester, her young life was filled with travel.

Her father, Hugo Nelson, was a Swedish immigrant, a highly successful masseur whose clients included John L. Lewis, the famed labor leader; she once lived in his wife's glass house on a mountain top at Bear Creek, Pa. When a mere six months of age, Elsa, along with her mother and brother, accompanied her father to Newport where he had other famous clients. At four, she crossed the Atlantic with them to live a year in Sweden. St. Augustine, Fla., was another spot she called home briefly. This well-traveled small girl only dreamed of the horses she saw others ride.

Life settled down in Southboro, the home of such names as the Kidders, Peabodys, Choates and Burnetts, where she began her formal schooling at age six without kindergarten, which was common in that day. Kindergarten and often nursery school education are considered essential today, and indeed Mrs. Witfelt felt it handicapped her, but the school didn't see it that way. After half a year of third grade, she was moved to the fourth grade, and at the end of that one year, she was promoted to fifth grade.

Her scholastic excellence continued through her days at Peter's High School. She graduated valedictorian of her class. Her graduation address given May, 1926, foreshadowed her future vocation and avocation. Destined to run a farm, establish a nursery school using a rural setting and to become deeply involved with the MSPCA, this 17 year old wrote, "If we teach little children, at the age when they are plastic, to treat their dumb friends with compassion, we shall evolve a splendid type of youth...By placing in the mind of a child the idea of justice and mercy to his most unselfish friends, the animals, there will eventually develop in that mind the thought of sympathizing with all humanity and seeing all phases of life in their correct light."

A young child grooms a pony while the pony's mother grazes nearby at the Forest Crest Farm school. The photo was taken in 1956.

ABOUT TOWN

Library offers remote series

The Winchester Public Library has an array of services and resources, many of which are available to residents who never set foot in the building. Book delivery to shut-ins, telephone reference and information services, and a storyline for children are a few examples.

Residents unable to come to the library may have books delivered to their homes on a monthly basis through the shut-in service. Books are selected by professional librarians based on the patron's requests and preferences. Books, large print books, books on tape and other sound recordings are all available. Delivery and pick up of materials is handled by volunteers from the Friends of the Winchester Public Library. Information and applications for shut-in service are available by calling the library at 721-7171.

The reference staff at the library exists to answer questions, whether about town services, current events, or the availability of a specific title in the library or the Minuteman system. All of these questions can be answered on the telephone as well as in person. Books or museum passes may also be reserved by telephone. The number to call is 721-7171.

The Junior Library offers a storyline on its telephone line (721-7140) whenever the Junior Library is closed. The stories, which change every week, are recorded by members of the Junior Library staff.

COMMENT

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

One life is worth the fiscal gamble

Winchester's Board of Selectmen is debating about joining a group of nine area towns as members of the Advanced Life Support consortium.

This system would give the town access to paramedics for emergency situations. Winchester now relies on fire personnel trained as Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs) to handle emergency medical problems. EMTs do not have the training and are not authorized to perform tasks, such as starting an intraveous line, that can save an accident victim's life.

Representatives of ALS say the cost to the town will be a goose egg, but Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer is concerned that the burden will fall on the town in future years.

ALS charges the patients directly for their service, and Winchester Hospital, Choate-Symmes Health Services and the Lahey Clinic have agreed to pick up the slack.

Maurer has voiced the valid concern that the hospitals can pull out of the agreement at any point, leaving the town with the responsibility to pay for or lose a life-saving service.

The key words are life-saving service. The town has been offered the opportunity to save lives, whether it be one, five, or 100, at no cost.

If a time comes when the hospitals decide to pull out of the program, Town Meeting can decide whether or not the cost of the service is worth the benefits it brings to Winchester residents. That time may be next year or it may be never.

So the question becomes, is it right to deny an accident victim the best medical care available because at some time in the future the town may have to pay for the care or drop the service? No.

The specter of financial responsibility in the future should not be the town's main concern when dealing with the health and safety of its residents.

The fiscal and medical constraints of creating a paramedic corps out of whole cloth in Winchester are considerable. ALS representative Neil Stroman does not believe there are enough situations in which paramedics are needed to keep their licenses current, a blessing to be sure. The cost of training and maintaining a crew of paramedics, according to Maurer, is approxmately $250,000.

But does the town need a paramedic service at all? From the testimony of Winchester Hospital's Dr. John Jenkins, the answer is yes. The reasoning is simple; it may save a life.

The selectmen have not yet heard from either the fire department, which runs the current emergency system, or the police department, which shares the dispatch system that would be used to call the ALS vehicle.

These departments must also have a say on the need for the service. The selectmen used good judgment in deciding to wait for the input of the two chiefs.

Two other groups should be considered, as Selectman Mark Lombardi brought up at the board's Aug. 31 meeting. He asked if the firemen's and policemen's union had been consulted. After all, Lombardi said, they are the people who will have to work with ALS.

Lombardi is right. The feelings of the two department chiefs and the two unions should be weighed heavily in the selectmen's decision. They are the ones who deal with emergencies on a regular basis and they are the ones who will know best whether the system will work in Winchester.

If the unions and chiefs agree the idea is a good one, the selectmen should go along with them and vote to join the consortium. It will cost the town nothing now and may save lives.

There are no guarantees in this life, and ALS is no exception. Right now the ambulance service (Armstrong) and the three health organizations involved are losing money. Winchester Hospital's James Higgins says the hospitals knew all along they would not make money, that they were not in it to make money, but to save lives. But Higgins and Stroman were not ready to guarantee that the service will be funded as long as the community might wish.

Perhaps the hospitals will not want or be able to continue funding ALS in the future. If that occurs, the town will have at least had some experience with the service and can decide how best to solve the problem.

To deny a resident a chance at survival because the financial backers of the service will not guarantee their support indefinitely would be a case of confused priorities.

LETTERS

Resident says Viet soldiers should be remembered

TO THE EDITOR:

There is more to the Board of Selectmen's resolution to fly an MIA/POW flag than meets the eye. Their visible support and honor to our MIAs and missing POWs also creates an understanding within our Town that we will not forget these fellow Americans and the lessons they helped us learn.

It is unfortunate that support for the resolution was not unanimous. The Winchester Star report of the board's Aug. 24 meeting indicated that Selectman Schmidt was present but abstaining from voting. To abstain from taking a position on a rather straightforward up or down vote is to avoid responsibility. To disclaim any intent to offend veterans is to mistakenly believe that only veterans, rather than a wide group of citizens, have reason to take offense. Rather than forgetting what happened 15 years ago, as Selectman Schmidt apparently preferred, we need to remember those years and the lessons taught if we want to avoid repeating the mistakes.

A basic lesson learned is that when we, through the action of our elected leaders, send military forces to support another nation in its fight for freedom we can not quit when the going becomes tough. This lesson was re-learned in a "time that is 15 years behind us." It is a hard lesson, but one which should be easy to remember: 2,400 U.S. soldiers unaccounted for, 56,000 U.S. soldiers dead, millions of South Aisans killed (3,000,000 in Cambodia alone), and millions more in the daily slow death of the loss of freedom under a totalitarian politial system. When our soldiers are sent to carry out political objectives, we and our politicians must be as fully committed as the soldiers we send, and must remain so.

We learned over 200 years ago that the price of freedom is eternal vigilance. "Eternal" does not mean forgetting the lessons of Southeast Asia after 15 years or the lessons of Korea after 35 years, or the lessons of WWII after 45 years. We must continue to support the struggle for freedom, and we must nourish freedom wherever found, wherever denied, or wherever hoped for.

The board is to be thanked for helping this town remember our missing soldiers, and for being a part of the American political system, which recognizes the importance of remembering the past in order to be prepared for the future.

Student thanks foundation

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to thank the Winchester Scholarship Foundation for its financial award toward the cost of my sophomore year at M.I.T.

With costs rising every year, it is impossible to meet tuition without help. The selection of scholarship money recipients must be extremely difficult and I am greatful to have been chosen by the foundation.

Kraus says what the voters voted is law

TO THE EDITOR:

"Don't touch the people's tax cap!"

During the past eight months, all one had to do to produce these words was to place a camara, microphone, reporter or editor in front of Barbara Anderson or Howard Foley.

This warning, this threat, has a great political ring to it. Wherever slogans substitute for thought, these six words surely have a bright future.

The message is clear: "Don't think about what is adopted at referendum; just do it, exactly. Don't look for mistakes and try to fix them. Just do exactly what the voters voted. If they didn't want to do precisely what was on the ballot, they would have voted against it."

This message of course is patently absurd. Voters vote at referendum on an idea, not for precise words. Referenda almost always have mistakes in them, if for no other reason than the people who drafted them could not foresee every event that will happen after the approval of a specific set of words that will much later appear on the ballot. Virtually every piece of "referenda" legislation has to be amended, probably even more often than does "ordinary" legislation.

But without amendment, what is the law? Is it the precise words the voters voted? Or is it the intent of the authors? Or perhaps the collective intent of the voters?

Today the authors of the tax cap initiative that was adopted at referendum are lambasting the auditor for deciding that the words that the voters voted is law. "No!" say they. "You should have enforced what we intended, not what we wrote and what the voters voted."

And they threaten to go to court. I hope they do. But my guess is that they will find some handy excuse for not doing so. Because the judges are likely to say that the law in fact is the words which the voters voted, just as the auditor has decided.

Dog lover alerts public

TO THE EDITOR:

Dog owners should be alerted to the fact that a recently formed Subcommittee on Dog Laws within the Committee on Counties at the Mass. State House will be holding the two final hearings on proposed dog laws Sept. 10, at the Hanover Town Hall at 7 p.m. and Sept. 14 at the Gardener Auditorium, State House, Boston at 1 p.m.

Among the bills proposed is H4978 about which I warned everyone last winter. That is the bill filed for the M.S.P.C.A. by Rep. Michael W. Morrisey of Quincy which would put the M.S.P.C.A. in charge of all animal control in Massachusetts, something that they have been fighting for (and we, and others, have opposed) for 14 years.

No one who really knows the M.S.P.C.A. can understand why they think that they can do this.

Although they are worth over $50 million, they have only eight shelters in the entire state. The only good-sized one is in Boston in a building that once housed the Cardinal O'Connell Seminary.

All of the others are small, on large land areas, and all are tax-exempt, though very valuable. Their Macomber Farm in Framingham with some 46 acres never had a shelter for lost or homeless dogs and cats.

Their Nevins Farm in Methuen has a small shelter on 50 acres of land. Their Brockton shelter on Pearl Street holds just eight dogs and is on two acres of land.

And so it goes.

They have no working dog officers as such, yet they want to train our public, and publicly paid dog officers.

What gives them the idea that they can run hundreds of public pounds paid for by the taxpayers, is anyone's guess.

The M.S.P.C.A. wants a statewide leash law (which would destroy Home Rule), they want a "dangerous dog law" (there is one already), they want "Regional Animal Control facilities" (their "dream child" set up in Chicopee was such a disaster, called a "death house for dogs," that, believe it or not, the M.S.P.C.A. was called in to clean it up!), they want a minimum of $15 per dog license fee unless your dog is spayed/neutered, and they want increased funding and comprehesive training program for animal control officers.

The "increased funding" won't come from the tax-exempt M.S.P.C.A., of course. It will come from the taxpayers. And the M.S.P.C.A. is in no position to train anyone.

One other thing that the M.S.P.C.A. wants and has fought for ever since 1973 is a shortened holding period for lost dogs in our public pounds.

They actually had the humane 10 day holding period cut to a cruel five days in 1973 knowing very well that dogs whose working owners couldn't possibly trace and claim them in five days, would all go to medical research under the hated Pound Seizure Law (Chap. 49A) then in effect.

They even claimed credit for the bill banning the hideous decompression chambers used by their pals, the Animal Rescue League.

My family and I, Dorothy O'Brien, and Esther Nowell spent a year at the State House fighting that bill through. The M.S.P.C.A. didn't help in any way whatsoever.

So, you see what you're up against, especially since the M.S.P.C.A.'s "Legislative Alert" says that Reps. Daniel Bosley and Shannon O'Brien are interested in immediately working to develop an animal control program at the state level. They co-chair the sub-committee.

Please attend these hearings, for the sake of your dogs and yourselves.

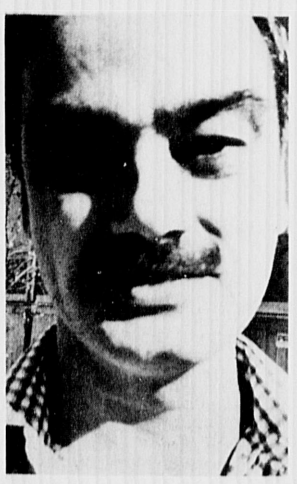
MAN IN THE STREET

Should the town join the Advanced Life Support system?

Arthur Donaghey
"I prefer to have as much emergency medical as we can get. And they should get extra pay for their endeavors. If the hospitals pull out, the town should fund it."

Patsy Kirk
"I think it's a good idea to know that if you're in an accident that there will be someone there who can treat you immediately, especially if it's a situation of life and death. The town should support things like this for the community."



Edward Benoit
"The matter needs to be studied a lot more. Especially when there's a question of two types of contracts, the first involving the hospital and their connection, the second being the town's obligation. If it's not a town and hospital venture, then no. If one party pulls out, the other should have the same option at that time, but it's an excellent idea."

Jessica Tobiason
"It's a good idea because if someone needs help, there should be someone qualified there. There definitly should be a long-term contract."

SCHOOL NEWS

Sean Innes of Mystic Valley Parkway is framed by St. Basil's Catherdral on Moscow's Red Square. Innes, a junior at Austin Prep, studies Russian language at the school.

Innes goes to Russia

Sean Innes of Mystic Valley Parkway was one of 13 members of the Russian classes and Russian club at Austin Preparatory School in Reading who recently returned from a four-week tour of the Soviet Union and Great Britain.

The Russian portion of the tour began in Leningrad, the site of the former imperial seat, St. Petersburg. Russian history lessons came alive as the students set up a picnic on the grounds of the Alexander Palace in Tsarskoe Selo, where Tsar Nicholas II and the Empress Alexandra spent their last years. In order to gain a first-hand view of the Soviet shopping system and to use their language skills in a practical manner, each student was required to purchase one item for the picnic. The students then explored the acres of imperial gardens ornamented with lakes, Chinese pagodas, fake ruins, pyramids, and other fanciful buildings.

Other higlights of the stay in the former capital were a boat ride on the Neva River and visits to the Winter Palace, St. Isaac's Cathedral, and the Summer Garden. The Austin group was in Leningrad during the White Nights, when the sun never really sets, and even at midnight milky twilight envelopes the city's river embankments, canals and palaces.

The students also visited the Baltic republics of Latvia and Lithuania. In Riga, capital of Latvia, students attended an organ concert in the Dom cathedral concert hall, and spent a day at Jurmala, a resort area along the Baltic coast, where pine forests meet a wide beach of white sand. Catholicism still plays an important roll in the lives of many citizens of the Baltic republics. The Austin students were forced to stand in the aisles due to the lack of pew space when they attended a Sunday morning Solemn Mass sung in Latin in a Riga church.

A night train from the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius brought the Austin Russian students to Moscow, where the tour began with a trip to Red Square to watch the changing of the guard at the Lenin Mausoleum. Later the group visited the mausoleum itself, and the Kremlin wall, the resting place of Joseph Stalin, Nikita Khrushchev, a series of more recent Soviet leaders, and Americans John Reed and Bill Hayward. The students saw the inside of the Kremlin, a fortress containing three major cathedrals (now museums) and numerous palaces, museums and gardens as well as the world's largest bell and largest cannon.

The students met Russians in private situations, too. While Russians can be brusque and ill-mannered on crowded city streets, they show the opposite characteristics in their own homes. Several Austin students made friends with Russians they met while on the tour and others visited old friends of their teacher.

Austin Prep, which has been offering a four-year Russian program for the past 20 years, arranges a trip to the Soviet Union about once every three years as a supplement to its academic language program. This year's trip was the largest ever arranged by the Austin Russian program.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy

YOUR HOME CAN STILL LOWER YOUR TAX BILL!

While tax reform has eliminated or is phasing our many popular deductions, owning your home still offers important tax benefits. If you are now renting, it might be a good idea to sit down with a professional Realtor who can show you just how much purchasing a home can save you each year.

Savings come in two ways. While most interest deductions are being phased out, you can still deduct the interest on your mortgage. You can also deduct your state or local property taxes. If you have a great deal of equity in your home, you may be able to deduct the interest on a home equity loan that is paying for home improvements or your children's education. Your Realtor can show you which savings apply to your situation. When you include tax savings in your comparison of owning a home vs. renting, you may be surprised by the results. And remember, when you're paying a mortgage instead of rent, your're building up equity as your home appreciates in value!

If you are considering a move, contact the professionals at The Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson Street in Winchester.

Griffin donates photographs to hospital

Internationally known master photographer and Winchester resident Arthur Griffin has donated to Winchester Hospital two of his framed photographs. One Aug. 4 Griffin personally supervised the hanging of one of them in the Parent's Lounge of the maternity unit.

The photograph, an early morning view of boats moored at Winchester Boat Club, is included in his book, "New England, The Four Seasons." The second photograph features the Boston skyline.

Weight loss center holds orientation

Being seriously overweight can have serious medical side effects. The Center for Nutritional Research, located at Winchester Hospital, has helped many to modify their behavior and eating habits and thus lose the weight necessary to restore them to a healthy life style.

To acquaint the public with its program and to encourage them to lose excess weight and keep it off, the center invites individuals who are 50 pounds or more overweight to attend a free orientation program Tuesday Sept. 22, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Kingsbury Seminar Room. Family members are welcome to accompany them.

Ray Mount, clinical psychologist, and Terry Dugan, R.N., will present information on the program. Registration is requested and may be done by calling the center at 729-9042.

Challenge for girls field hockey

By CYNTHIA PREE
Special to the Star

New challenges await Winchester High's field hockey team as the season draws nearer. Winchester must overcome some excellent competition to make their 1987 Fall season a success.

From Monday, Aug. 31, to Friday, Sept. 4, both the varsity and junior varsity teams endured grueling double sessions to prepare for the upcoming season. These sessions lasted from 9a.m. to 4p.m. and entailed many helpful drills and exhausting workouts in training for the tough games which lie ahead.

Returning this year for her fourth straight season as Winchester's varsity field hockey coach is Mary Brown.

"I have high hopes that we will do very well this year," Brown said. "We have a good nucleus of players with several returning varsity members and impressive new freshmen and sophomores."

Brown will be assisted this year by Ellen Verra, a former field hockey player for Northeastern University with both field hockey and lacrosse coaching experience. She also played two years for the U.S. National field hockey team. In addition to being Winchester's junior varsity coach, Verra is a special-needs teacher in Brookline.

The team this year will be made up of approximately 40 players, the largest squad Winchester has had in the last two or three years.

The twelve returning seniors this year include, all-star goalie Ritika Bowry, forwards Eileen, Colleen, and Katie O'Conner and defenders Laura Cipella and Terese Krajewski. A few varsity positions will still be available to juniors and sophmores.

"I've been impressed with the new freshmen and sophomores," coach Brown said. "They will be a great asset in the future."

Regular practices began on Tuesday and are held from 2:30p.m. to 5:30p.m. at Skillings Field. Once the season begins, games will be played every Monday, Wednesday and Friday and practice will be held every Tuesday and Thursday. All home games will be played at Skillings Field beginning at 3:30 p.m.

Winchester's first test takes place tomorrow at Skillings Field when the Sachemettes scrimmage with Tewksbury.

Girls team shoots for 10th crown

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester High Girl's Soccer team this Fall will be shooting for its tenth consecutive Middlesex League title and its second straight state title.

What should make this season doubly interesting is seeing how coach Chris Scanlon's talented but inexperienced team responds after losing most of their starting lineup to graduation.

"With the loss of 10 of 11 starters and 14 seniors overall, we've got a big chore ahead of us," said Scanlon.

Senior captain Debbie Nowell is the only returning starter from last year's team, which finished the season with an impressive 17-0-2 record. Nowell, an outstanding midfielder, scored seven goals and had as many assists in a season that culminated in her being named second team All-Scholastic.

After putting his troops through double sessions the last two weeks, Scanlon has been delighted with the team's attitude.

"I've impressed with their enthusiasm," said Scanlon. "With the type of attitude they have, I think we can accomplish everything we set out to do this year."

This year's team will feature speed in its attack. Some of the players Scanlon feels will play key roles include Beth Small, Amy Binding, Kara McDonough and Denise Chabot. Small is currently nursing a knee injury, but is expected to be ready for the season opener Tuesday afternoon against Wakefield.

The Sachemettes will also have to deal with a tough schedule. Scanlon thinks Wakefield and Belmont pose the most danger to Winchester's nine-year reign over the Middlesex League.

"Wakefield and Belmont should be tough this year since they're returning more starters," said Scanlon. "They have more experience."

In fact, Wakefield was the only team that gave the Sachemettes any trouble last year. The two ties the teams played to were the only blemishes on Winchester's near perfect record. Tuesday's matchup at Skillings Field could serve as a measuring stick for just how far this year's Sachemettes will go.

In addition to their Middlesex League rivals, Winchester has some challenging non-league games. Archrival Concord-Carlisle promises to be its usual menacing self while Andover and Division II powerhouse Foxboro will also try to wreak havoc on the Sachemettes.

When you consider the Sachemettes have never lost a Middlesex League game and have nine league titles in their nine-year existence, Scanlon and his team can not help but be optimistic about their chances. An early injury wave has hit the team but most of the wounded, including Ingrid Spanjaard and Julie Sexeny, should be back soon.

Boys soccer team defends state title

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester High boys' soccer team will be seeking to defend its Middlesex and State titles this fall with a big question hanging over their collective heads. Can they do it without All-America Chris Verhaegen?

Coach Eugene Bouley, in his 24th year of coaching the Sachems, is not too concerned about his team letting down this year.

"Yes, we lost Verhaegen and a few other key players," said Bouley. "But our offense should be as strong as ever."

"The scoring punch this season should be provided by the likes of Paul Erbafina and Rob Keene. The coach has also been impressed with the play of Vandy French at center-forward.

"This season should be interesting as the Sachems move from a strong defensive team with a more than adequate offense to a strong offensive team with an unproven defense.

"Last year, our defense was so strong that the ball was always in our offensive zone," said Bouley. "The goals were going to come."

The biggest dilemma this year will be rebuilding a defense decimated by graduation. Dave Ducharme will anchor the fullbacks and he will get outside help from Paul Capodano. Several starting slots are still being contested as Bouley continues to survey different players at different positions before the season opener Tuesday against Wakefield.

Bouley's biggest concern at this point is his team's transition game, getting the ball from the defensive zone into the offensive zone. This is where an inexperienced defense could have serious problems.

"All the defense had to do last year was get the ball to Verhaegen and let him handle it," said Bouley.

But this year, Verhaegen will be playing at Boston University and the Sachems will have to find a way to fill the void. In the meantime, Steve Reeve and Ken Fowler have played well and Bouley will have to wait to see how things work out.

As far as competition goes, Bouley figures Belmont will provide the biggest obstacle. However, Wakefield and Lexington always give the Sachems as much trouble as they can handle.

COMING EVENTS

Playground construction weekend set

Construction weekend for the playground at Ginn Field will take place Sept. 19 and 20.

Volunteers who signed up to help build the playground are requested to report to their assigned shift armed with a measuring tape and hammer. Shifts on both Saturday and Sunday are from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Volunteer organizers Donna Down, Sue Collins and Marty Wallace will be there to check people in. Light refreshments and sandwiches will be provided by Kris Montgomery, Sue Kemp and their crew.

Although the playground company, Children's Playgrounds, Inc., will supervise the operation, townsmen Jim Kemp, David Pywell, Les Herzog and Peter Wild will help direct the building shifts.

The Department of Public Works under the supervision of Dick Tofuri has already paved the way for the weekend, according to Playground Chairman Leta Kniffin. The DPW has prepared the land by leveling and building a retaining wall and will soon begin to drill holes for the foundation.

More than 150 volunteers from Wincheter will be participating in the "barn raising" types of construction. Parents are urged to not bring their children until the playground's completion.

The formal dedication ceremonies will be held at a later date.

Copy Deadline

Contributions for publication submitted by 4 p.m. Monday will be considered for that Thursday's paper.

Contributors are requested to submit typed, double-spaced copy.

OPEN LETTER TO POPE JOHN PAUL II

Dear Pope John Paul II:

During this Marian Year we join you in honoring Mary as Queen of Peace.

In 1982, Holy Father, at the United Nations you said that the building of nuclear weapons to deter the enemy was not an end in itself but only "a step on the way toward progressive disarmament."

The US Bishops' 1983 "Peace Pastoral" states "the moral demands of Catholic teaching require resolute willingness not to intend or to do moral evil even to save our own lives." At the same time US government officials testified that there is no such thing as a strategy of deterrence without clear intent to use the weapons.

Obviously your words are not being heeded, the policy of deterrence continues to fuel and promote the arms race. Under the guise of deterrence the world edges closer to disaster. (Current efforts to eliminate some short-range missiles from the huge arsenals are insignificant.)

WE PLEAD WITH YOU, THEREFORE, TO ISSUE A STRONG PROPHETIC STATEMENT MORALLY CONDEMNING THE POLICY OF DETERRENCE.

To honor your visit we will be in solidarity with Pax Christi members fasting and praying for peace on Tuesday, September 15, the Feast of Our Lady of Sorrows and also the International Day of Peace.

Yours Sincerely,
Pax Christi—Arlington/Belmont

The Shoppe: a new additon to the Jenks Center lobby

By LEONOR RICH
Special to the Star

Somthing new has been added to the lobby of the Jenks Senior Center within the past week. The germ of an idea about organizing a shop has been lying fallow for a long time and it took the ingenuity of Regina Karnilla to revive it so that it suddenly sent out healthy shoots and became reality.

The generosity and courtesy of Frank's Antiques on Main Street at the Winchester-Woburn line provided a very fine small showcase that has been in storage in a garage used by the store. Regina Karnilla was able to obtain it, and using the scrubbing arms of Angelo Giannetti, ways and means chairman, and Richard Fiore, custodian, prepare it for showing the beautiful, creative handwork made by seniors.

The Shoppe will be open every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10:15 to 11:30 a.m. and Thursday from 2:30 to 4 p.m. after the bridge games. Salespeople will be Regina Karnilla, chairperson of the Shoppe Committee, Mary Craven, Mary Devlin, and Anne Feuss. It is anticipated that this Ways and Means project will serve as a good fund raiser during the year.

Many articles are needed on a continuing basis to keep the supply of appealing stock ready for purchasers. The creative talent among seniors is abundant as evidenced by articles donated to the annual fairs, the beautiful display of hobbies last January, and the creations that appear weekly in the Crafts and Stitchery class instructed by Jane Norberg.

The Shoppe has all the earmarks of being a successful venture. Some of the adjacent communities having available space in senior centers have already developed gift shops, especially the Senior Center in Lexington. It was deemed advisable to draw upon this money-making activity to help to meet the increased operational expenses of the Jenks Senior Center, which will amount to approximately $75,000 a year with the new addition.

The cost of materials for items to be sold in the shop will be reimbursed if a bill is submitted to Regina Karnilla. Such articles as crewel pillows, hand-made quilts, babies booties, mittens, sweaters, afghans, and all types of handwork including children's clothing will appeal to buyers as time progresses. A financial arrangement will be made with people who submit materials for sale.

(Please see page 17)

Regina Karnilla, as a pioneer of the venture, has drawn upon the many beautiful items that she has created during the past months. Other seniors have generously supplied articles of many types that are calling people to the showcase in the lobby, where they enthuse about the needlework on display.

All seniors whose nimble fingers and creative imaginations can fashion articles during leisure hours are asked to add to the present supply of stock in "The Shoppe."

Seniors Association Bowling League starts again

The Senior Bowling League will be off to a flying start on Sept. 11 for weekly competitive games at the Woburn Bowladrome.

All seniors, age 55 and older, are welcome to join this active, enthusiastic group. With lazy summer days, joints may need to be flexed after weeks of relaxation, but it won't take long to get them limbered up and supple again.

Save Fridays from 9:30 to 11 a.m. to join with other league members for this pleasant healthful exercise.

The Bowling League was one of the first activities of the Winchester Seniors Service Corps. By nature of the bowling activity, it could not be an in-house program but had to be carried off the premises in a well-organized manner. There have been times when more than 90 members have met weekly to develop bowling skills.

Call Guy Mingolelli (729-1525), chairman of the Bowling Committee, for any further clarification of an activity in which congenial people enjoy getting together. New members are always welcome.

Bowling shoes are furnished to seniors without charge by the Woburn Bowladrome.

MBTA passes

A representative of the MBTA will be at the Arlington Senior Center Wednesday, Oct. 13, at 27 Maple St. from 9:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. to handle the distribution of passes. Each person desiring to obtain a pass must bring a driver's license, a birth certificate, or Medicare card. Social Security cards will not be accepted.

If the date suggested above is not convenient, registration can be made at the Washington Street Subway Concourse in Boston, or at Jordan's and Filene's. The desks are open from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 12:30 to 4 p.m. For Winchesterites, the location of the Arlington Senior Center will be much easier to reach than taking a trip to the city.

Day trip to Plymouth

A trip to Cranberry World in Plymouth of Ocean Spray fame is scheduled for Sept. 23.

There will be a guided tour of the factory and a slide show with a sampling of various products made by Ocean Spray. Lunch will be at the Barnside Tavern in Hanover with a choice of broiled schrod or Yankee pot roast.

The bus leaves the Jenks Senior Center at 10:30 a.m. and returns at 5 p.m. Agnes Blyth is in charge of arrangements.

Call the Jenks Senior Center receptionist immediately to make a reservation.

Notice on a change of time for movies

The starting time of the monthly movies on the third Friday of each month and the showing of the VCR (Video Cassette Recorder) tape on the first Friday will be advanced from 1 to 1:30 p.m.

The bus driver has to have time for lunch and then he picks up the people from Mt. Vernon House to get them to the Jenks Senior Center. They have often had to enter the Meeting Room in the dark with a film in progress.

Thus, for their safety and enjoyment, it is deemed advisable to change the starting time of the movies as a convenience for all concerned.

Movie of the Month

"In the Good Old Summertime," a 1949 classic in color will be presented at the Jenks Senior Center Friday, Sept. 18 at 1 p.m.

Starring Judy Garland and Van Johnson, it is another neglected MGM musical remake of a non-musical, "The Shop Around the Corner," (1940) and presented on the stage as "She Loves Me."

The score is comprised of a number of old tunes sung by Judy and comedy numbers by the great silent comedian, Buster Keaton. Supporting players include S.Z. Sakall and Spring Dyington with a very young Liza Minnelli making her screen debut in the final scene.

The public is invited to attend the showing of this film at the Jenks Senior Center Meeting Room. Refreshments are served during the change of reels.

Fall Fiesta fair alert

The annual Fall Fiesta Fair at the Jenks Senior Center is a month and a half hence and much must be accomplished in the next six weeks. The two-day fair is one of the events that helps to defray the operational expenses of the center and the intake must be a significant amount in view of a 37 percent increase in general expenses because of the expansion of the building.

Tickets are available for the raffle of the 1987 Ford Escort Pony. Someone will leave the Jenks Senior Center on Oct. 8 as the owner of a brand new car. Buy tickets now and be brave enough to take a chance on being a winner.

The dinner tickets for Oct. 7 will soon be on sale at the center for an Italian menu to be served continuously in the new auditorium between the hours of 5 and 7 p.m.

Donations to the fair may be brought to the center any time now at the convenience of the donor since they can be priced and stored in the new facilities, thus saving time as the fair dates approach. People who need pick-ups may call the receptionist, 721-7136, and arrangements can be made.

Counsel seeks temporary homes for foster care

Neighborhood Network is an emergency service that provides foster care for youths from ages 11 to 18 in the Mystic Valley area for a period of one to 45 days. These boys and girls are at risk of abuse, neglect or exploitation, and are experiencing serious family difficulties.

The Woburn Council of Social Concern, Inc., is in desperate need of more temporary homes for these young people. The council trains, pays, and gives round-the-clock support and guidance to all who open their homes to adolescents who must be removed temporarily from the turmoil of their own home environments.

For more information, contact Paula Giarrizzo or Claudia Dunn, 935-6495, or write to the Woburn Council of Social Concern, 19 Campbell Street, P.O. Box 523, Woburn, MA., 01801.

who has been principal since the school opened.

"I will certainly try to retain all the good things," Purcell said. "At first I will just try to be open and have open ears. I will spend a lot of time observing and then slowly try to integrate new ideas."

Parents of former students would describe her as structured, organized, available and communicative, Purcell said.

Although she has not held another administrative position, Purcell has definite ideas about how to run a school and how to work with the faculty. She said she would encourage teachers to attend courses and conferences to learn new ways to organize lessons and present material.

"I see myself as a middle person who can set things up between teachers," Purcell said. She said she would like to organize projects with teachers who have similiar interests that can benefit the school.

Parent-teacher conflicts should be resolved between the two people involved, but if necessary she would join in a three-way conference to resolve the problem, Purcell said.

"My educational background has, I think, prepared me for this," Purcell said at the end of her interview and before the committee awarded her with the position. "If I get this job it will be the achievement of a long sought-after goal."

see for at least five years now."

Mitsakos then commended the committee for making the goals attainable, "Changes in the School Committee have made this possible," he said. "You have supported a reasonable staffing budget and have been flexible."

"The elementary schools have five more students than spring projections showed, Mitsakos said. He will not have exact figures for the secondary school population for about a week, he said, because parents are not as diligent about registering their children or removing them from school lists if the student changes schools.

Approximately 2,900 students started school yesterday and today, Mitsakos said.

At the opening of the committee's regular session, Chairman William Jervey asked the audience and the other members to observe a moment of silent for ABC student Jermaine Jones. Jones died suddenly last week on a youth trip sponsored by St. Eulalia's Church. Jervey said the cause of death was an aneurysm.

"Jermaine was well-liked just because he was a good kid," Jervey said.

A memorial service for Jones will be held at St. Eulalia's Church, Sunday, Sept. 13, at 7 p.m.

new tennis courts on the site of the current front entrance parking lot, fixing the settlement problems that plague the entrances and back of the school and landscaping.

The selectmen had authorized the Department of Public Works to tear down the fence around the courts. The DPW was awaitng the approval of the school committee before cutting the entrance, curbing and painting parking spaces on the courts, tasks Maurer said will not take more than a few days.

School Committee member Michael Ronayne said he would like to see the appropriations for the addition school grounds work as separate warrant articles. He said the effectiveness of the Ambrose and Lincoln School articles led him to believe that was the best course to take. The committee will have to wait for fall Town Meeting, when the FY'89 budget will be allocated, to make a final decision.

Residents form watchdog group

The association's next meeting will be Tuesday, Sept. 15, at 7 p.m. at 26 Pond St. Anyone wishing to attend is welcome. For more information, call Terri or Greg Eaton at 729-5656.

What To Do

Maze of streets meant for feet:

walking tours best way to see the sights of the city

"We say the cows laid out Boston. Well, there are worse surveyors."
Ralph Waldo Emerson

Sometimes just looking at a map of Boston can be frustrating. The maze of streets in downtown Boston and the alleys and lanes of Beacon Hill weren't meant for car and bus traffic. However, they were meant for walkers, traffic of the two-footed variety.

Because Boston and Cambridge are walkable cities, exploring their historic places and spaces is relatively easy. All you need is a destination, a good pair of shoes, and some time. And with today's emphasis on fitness, a long walk in late summer when the heat and humidity have abated is not only educational but healthy.

One of the nicest ways to discover the area's history can be by guided walking tour, a concept that seems to have blossomed since 1976. Staffed by trained and knowledgeable volunteers, walking tour companies often offer 'inside information' about the neighborhoods, and the people and events that made it special. Frequently, they'll also discuss the current and future status of an area.

Profiled below are four organizations that offer walking tours. Well established and reputable, each takes a different approach to Boston's history. Whether your particular interest is in sociology, history, or architecture, there's something here to please everyone.

DISCOVERING BOSTON WALKING TOURS

Dr. Will Houghton founded Discovering Boston Walking Tours in 1983 as an outgrowth of his course, The Sociology of Boston, which he has taught at Northeastern University since 1975. His first walking tours were designed for students in his course.

Holton takes an unusual perspective in his tours, emphasizing the social history of Boston. He'll explain, for instance, the impact of ethnic groups in the city or a specific neighborhood or how people have remade the city and left their mark as individuals or groups.

Customized tours are Holton's specialty and he will design a tour for an individual, a family, or a group of up to 25 persons. Although walking tours provide more opportunities to explore Boston's small spaces — imagine seeing Beacon Hill through a bus window — Holton will rent a double-decker bus or trolley if his client wishes and arrange an outing for a few hours or a whole day.

Holton also seems to create imaginative holiday tours. For instance, his three-hour Valentine's Day Tour features a ride on a double-decker bus with a violin serenade, commentary on Boston's most romantic individuals and couples, and a mystery stop for a seductive dessert at a Best of Boston location.

For Saint Patrick's Day, Holton and an Irish storyteller take guests around the city by bus, sharing fascinating stories of local Irish politicians, religious leaders, and sports figures as well as the Irish immigrant history within the city. The tour concludes with a visit to an authentic Irish pub.

If you prefer a walking tour, Holton can take you around the Freedom Trail, Beacon Hill, Back Bay, the South End, the North End, Chinatown, Charlestown, or the Boston waterfront. Each tour lasts about two hours; however, if you want to visit a museum or have a meal at a local restaurant, he'll arrange it. According to Holton, a popular Sunday program features brunch followed by a walking tour.

The prices for Holton's tours vary according to the program and number or participants. A two-hour walking tour for 20 people generally costs between $5 - $7.50 per person.

Discovering Boston Walking Tours is staffed by Holton and five part-time assistants, all of whom work in the educational field and have knowledge of the city.

Holton holds a B.A. in sociology with a history minor from Vanderbuilt University, and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in sociology from Boston University. He is an assistant professor at Northeastern University.

To arrange a tour or request more information, call Holton at 323-2554. Two weeks advance notice for a tour is preferred.

THE CAMBRIDGE CENTER FOR ADULT EDUCATION

Footsteps Through History: Walking Tours of Boston is a series of walks sponsored by the Cambridge Center for Adult Education. Offered in the spring, summer, and fall, the tours are conducted by Charles Bahne. The fall semester schedule includes Copley Square, Inside, Out, and Down (Sec. 01 — Sept. 26); Brattle Street "Tory Row" (Sec. 02 — Oct. 17); and Charlestown (Sec. 03 — Oct. 31). Each walking tour must be registered for individually and group size is limited. The cost is $11 per section for a two-hour tour. Registration begins Aug. 28. Call the Center for information.

Bahne began giving tours at the Center in 1979. He says he takes an informal and conversational approach, stressing the human interest element wherever he's touring. Because he finds the history of Boston tremendously fascinating, Bahne looks for anecdotes and information to bring it alive. Tour participants are encouraged to ask questions and share their own information about a particular area.

Although he only gives three or four walking tours per term at the Center, Bahne has organized nine different tours, including the Freedom Trail, Jamaica Plain, Beacon Hill, Harvard Square. One of his most popular tours is Brattle Street ("Tory Row") in Cambridge, which he calls one of the prettiest streets anywhere.

As a particular area changes, so does Bahne's tour. For instance, a walk around Copley Square now includes the Hancock Tower Observatory for an eagle eye's view of the city.

Bahne earned a degree in urban studies from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, with emphasis on urban history and architecture. After working as a walking tour guide for two years, he joined the Boston Park Rangers. In 1985, he wrote The Complete Guide to the Freedom Trail, a detailed walking tour of Boston's most popular attraction.

Bahne will also coordinate a special group tour. Call 354-0539 for prices. For more information about the Cambridge Center walking tours, call 547-6789 or stop by the Center at 42 Brattle St.

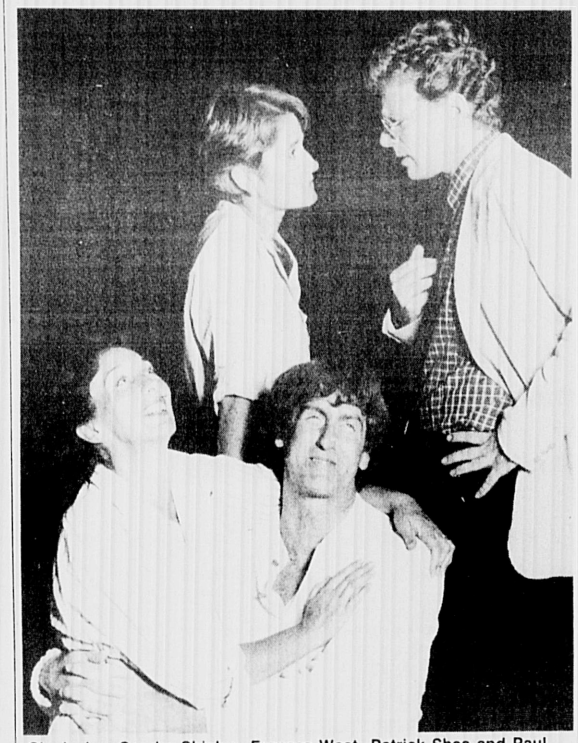
What's On The Boards?



Clockwise: Sandra Shipley, Frances West, Patrick Shea and Paul O'Brien in Benefactors at the Gloucester Stage Company.

Drama explores harm we do trying to help

Benefactors, a two-act play by Michael Frayn; directed by Grey Cattell; scenic and light design by Patrick J. Scully; costume design by Jeanine Burgess; production stage manager Frederick Hahn. Plays through Sept. 13 at the Gloucester Stage Company, 267 East Main St., immediately before the entrance to Rocky Neck in Gloucester, MA with Francis West, Patrick Shea, Paul O'Brien and Sandra Shipley.

Most of this summer's fare has been the stuff that cotton candy is made of, but the Gloucester Stage Company has changed all that with a stunning, riviting production of Michael Frayn's beautifully written and powerful play, Benefactors.

The drama runs only through Sept. 13 and, unfortunately, cannot be extended due to prior commitments of cast members. So, if you can beg, borrow or steal a ticket, I strongly urge you to do so!

Benefactors was highly acclaimed during its run in London and later on Broadway, where it boasted the illustrious cast of Glenn Close, Sam Waterston, Mary Beth Hurt and Simon Jones. However, having seen both productions, I can state unequivocally that the cast, direction and overall production at Gloucester is easily superior!

Frayn's poetic and lyrical drama plays far better in GSC's small, intimate house. While well-acted and technically proficient in New York, action seems stilted and never moved across the footlights. It seemed strained and woefully complex, with the actors uncertain of the proper interpretation of their roles.

Here, the portrayals of Sandra Shipley, Francis West, Patrick Shea and Paul O'Brien are crystal clear, and the direction of talented Grey Cattel Johnson is of blue-diamond quality.

It's taken a long time for Frayn's incisive, award-winning play to premiere in New England. Rights were tied up because of a national tour of the Broadway production was anticipated; but those plans, bogged down over the past couple of years, prompted artistic director Israel Horovitz to hop over to England where he obtained Frayn's consent to mount Benefactors.

It is virtually impossible not to get involved in this deeply moving drama with its powerful build and its sweeping chain of events that explores the harm we do to those we are most trying to help.

Set in London's South End in the 1960's, the story centers on the interaction between two English couples, but with a profound sociological underbelly that fleshes out the liberal hypocrisy of the times and the lingering traces of class welfare and suburban convention.

David (Shea) and Jane (West) are a well-educated, well-adjusted, happily married couple. They have two young children and live on the side of the street where the weather is always fine.

Jane is bright and efficient, has a degree in anthropology and possesses boundless energy. David is an architect who works for the local housing authority. While the couple are compatible, they are not always in accord. In fact, Jane cannot decide whether she is really happy.

David and Colin (O'Brien) were classmates in college. Years later, when David accidently discovered Colin and Sheila (Shipley) living in squalor, he obtained respectable living quarters for them directly across the street from his own house.

Newley entertaining despite drawbacks

Review

By the time I caught up with An Evening With Anthony Newley at the North Shore Music Theatre, the reviews were on the streets and Newley was more than a little upset. Obviously vexed, Newley castigated, "Critics are like eunuchs. They know why it's done; they know how it's done; but they just can't seem to do it themselves!"

Newley happens to be one of my all-time favorites and his performance is usually charged with electricity. Such was not the case at North Shore Music Theatre. He was listless, lacklustre, and seemingly tired, for he kept grabbing at anything he could get ahold of for support...his pianist's shoulder, the edge of the baby grand, the mike stand, etc.

But if Newley was distraught he had cause to be. The so-called audience warmer-upper did little more than a forty-five minute imitation of a stand-up cadaver. And the 19-piece orchestra that was dredged up was worse than the kids in Harold Hill's River City band. It was enough to discourage even the most professional of stars!

In all fairness to the North Shore Music Theatre, they were placed in a terrible bind with the last-minute cancellation of Mitzi Gaynor and that they were able to obtain a performer of Newley's stature and talent was fortunate indeed. Under the circumstances, I'm certain they did the best they could.

True, Newley may have filled out a bit around his girth; he may experience difficulty reaching notes in the upper register that yesterday he attained with ease; his mannerisms may have been a bit too flaccid; but he remains a wonderfully entertaining showman.

Newley not only performs, he is a multi-faceted all-around show business talent. Lest you forgot, along with Leslie Bricusse, Newley wrote the scores for the Broadway triumphs Stop the World, I Want To Get Off and The Roar of the Greasepaint the Smell of the Crowd.

During his performance lyricist Newley referred to the tunes which Newley the performer introduced for the very first time on stage but which became hit records for others: Sammy Davis, with What Kind of Fool Am I and Candy Man; Tony Bennett, with Who Can I Turn To; and Shirley Bassey, with Goldfinger, all rendered by Newley during the course of the evening.

Newley opened with a signature piece, For Once in My Life, and followed with a rock arrangement of Gonna Build a Mountain. His concern for the children of today, who will grow into the parents of tomorrow, prompted Newley to write Teach the Children, which succinctly states his philiosophy: "The children of the world are doomed./Before they reach a school/By families who are unprepared and careless/As long as procreation/Is a paradise for fools/The world will be the victim/Of it's parents...".

Finally, he delighted the audience with his classic What Kind of Fool Am I and concluded his stint with a rousing version of If I Could Talk to the Animals...Tony...better luck next time!

Ian McKellen brings his one-man show, Ian McKellen Acting Shakespeare to the Charles Playhouse for four weeks, beginning Sept. 8.

McKellen explores labyrinths of Shakespeare

Ian McKellen brings his one-man show, Ian McKellen Acting Shakespeare to Boston's Charles Playhouse for a four-week-only engagement, opening this week and continuing through Oct. 4.

In the words of its creator, director and star, the goal of Ian McKellen Acting Shakespeare is to convey the thrill of Shakespeare's theatricality, to share with audiences an appreciation of the beauty and subtlety of the text from a performance point of view.

The program is intended not so much for the scholar, nor is it confined to a lecture; it is Shakespeare with a difference: an actor's Shakespeare, approached with informal energy as McKellen flings himself about the stage leading the audience through a human-size passageway into the labyrinth of the great Shakespearean texts.

The Charles Playhouse box office will open Monday, August 24 at 10 a.m. The performance and price schedule for Ian McKellen Acting Shakespeare during its four-week run at the Charles Playhouse is as follows: Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m., $22, 18; Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., $25, 21; Saturday matinee at 2 p.m. and Sunday at 3 and 7 p.m., $22, 18.

For other information, please call or write the Charles Playhouse, 76 Warranton Street, Boston, Ma. 02116, 426-6912.

Biloxi Blues opens at North Shore

Biloxi Blues begins a week-long engagement at the North Shore Music Theatre this week and continues through Sept. 12.

Continuing the tale set forth in Brighton Beach Memoirs, Neil Simon's hit comedy follows Eugene Morris' basic training days in 1943 Biloxi, Mississippi. At this point in his life, Eugene is a little older, not much wiser, and very clear about his goals: he want to visit a bordello; fall in love; become a writer...and stay alive.

In this funny, poignant, and very human play, Neil Simon examines the adventures (and misadventures) of Eugene and his platoon buddies as they adjust (and maladjust) to army life and life in general.

Biloxi Blues deals with mature subject matter.

For information regarding Biloxi Blues or any North Shore Music Theatre event, contact the box office at 922-9500.

ASF closes season

For those who loved the precocious Eugene Morris Jerome in Brighton Beach Memoirs, the American Stage Festival is bringing him back in Biloxi Blues, the second installment of playwright Neil Simon's autobiographical trilogy. The ASF's final production of the season opens this week and plays through Sept. 26 at the Festival in Milford, N.H.

Martin Herzer returns to the ASF to direct Biloxi Blues, having directed Brighton Beach Memoirs for the Festival last season.

Festival audiences will remember actor Mitchell Whitfield from last season as the confident and cocky Eugene growing up in the 1930s Brooklyn. Whitfield returns to continue his role of Eugene as Private Jerome.

John Falabella, responsible for set design of ASF's season's opener, Peg O' My Heart, will create the settings.

The American Stage Festival is located on Route 13 North in Milford, N.H., ten miles west of Nashua. For tickets and information call the box office at (603)673-7515.

Longy School celebrates Nadia Boulanger

Nadia Boulanger

On Sept. 15, the Longy School of Music will open SeptembeFest '87. This year's two-week festival will celebrate the 100th Anniversary of the birth of former faculty member and world famous teacher Nadia Boulanger. Highlights of SeptemberFest '87 include a documentary film, a symposium, a masterclass and concerts featuring The Longy Artists Ensemble and guests. Boulanger's former students and colleagues will participate in the programs.

Nadia Boulanger was born in Paris, September 16, 1987 (d. 1979) to a family of musicians and composers. She took her first music lessons from her mother, Russian Countess Myshetskaya, a professional singer. She entered the Paris Conservatory where she studied organ with Guilmant and Vierne, and composition with Gabriel Faure.

She graduated the Paris Conservatory with prizes in organ and theory. After winning the second Prix de Rome for her cantata La Sirene (1908), she devoted herself to teaching orchestration and composition. She served on the faculties at the Paris Conservatory (1909-24) the Ecole Normale de Musique (1920-39) and the American Conservatory at Fontainebleau where she taught for several decades.

Boulanger also toured throughout the United States lecturing, performing and conducting, and made numerous appearances with major symphony orchestras. She was the first woman to conduct the Royal Philharmonic (1936), the Boston Symphony (1938), the New York Philharmonic (1939) and the Philadelphia Orchestra (1939) and appeared as organ soloist and concert pianist in chamber music recitals.

During World War II she taught primarily in Boston serving as a faculty member at Longy School of Music (1940-45), Radcliffe College, Wellesley College, the Diller-Quaile School and the Juilliard School of Music (NY).

In 1946 she returned to the Paris Conservatory to teach piano accompaniment, but her reputation as instructor drew a devoted following of private pupils who came to her apartment from all over the world and have become celebrated composers and performers such as Aaron Copland, Roy Harris, Walter Piston, Melville Smith, Virgil Thomson, Elliott Carter, David Diamond, Elie Siegmeister, Irving Fine, Easley Blackwood, Arthur Berger, John Vincent and Harold Shapero, Igor Markevitch, Jean Francaix, Lennox Berkeley and Dinu Lipati.

The two week festival features the Boston premiere of Mademoiselle: a documentary film narrated by Quincy Jones (also her student) about Nadia Boulanger glimpsed through excerpts of interviews with her at 90, conversations with Aaron Copland, Virgil Thomson, Philip Glass and others, produced by Dominique Parent-Altier.

A symposium entitled Boulanger Remembered, moderated by Mark DeVoto, will include Tillman Merritt, Daniel Pinkham, Harold Shapero, Virgil Thomson and Luise Vosgerchian.

Finally, the Longy Artists Ensemble, guests and Longy faculty will perform a series of concerts featuring Longy faculty and guest artists performing music with which Nadia Boulanger was associated as performer, conductor and teacher. The Longy Artists Ensemble is made up of the school's performing faculty including some of Boston's most active freelance players including Eunice Alberts, the internationally renowned contralto, and winners of prestigious awards such as the Naumberg, Concert Artists Guild, Bodky, Coleman and Fishoff.

The Longy School of Music was founded in 1915 by George Longy, principal oboist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Originally housed in his home in Boston, the School was based on Longy's convictions that the French conservatory method of thorough training in solfege and the fundamentals of music is the basis of sound musicianship. The original advisory board of the school included such luminaries as Pablo Casals, Georges Enesco, Fritz Kreisler and Jacques Thibaud.

In 1937, the school settled into its current home, the EH Abbott house in Cambridge, MA. Past directors include Melville Smith (1941-1961), Kalman Novack (1957-58, 61-2), Nicholas Van Slyck (1962-76), Fred Goldstein (1976-77), Margaret Rohde (1977-78), and Roman Totenberg (1978-85). Victor Rosenbaum, distinguished pianist and educator, has been Director since 1985.

Events are free and open to the public. For additional information (times, dates, location) about the festival, call 437-0231.

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Line and ambiguity in works

Karen Moss draws with a fluid and facile line that takes a kind of calligraphic journey through her paintings. Sometimes describing forms and creatures of nature, sometimes repeating itself to form flat textile-like pattern across the paper's surface, and sometimes just meandering in and out of both, Moss's line gives the drawing in her works a primary role.

In an exhibition at Simmons College's Trustman Gallery, 300 The Fenway, Boston, Moss shows 13 recent paintings. All are on paper. With the exception of one oil and one watercolor, all are acrylic. Size ranges from the 14"x20" rectangles of Solitary Survivor I and II to the big pieced-together Crosscurrents, which turns a corner of the gallery. The paint itself usually appears dry and opaque, but the overall feeling of the works is weightless and often transparent because of the linear "weaving."

By drawing across the entire surface of the paper, Moss creates an active pictorial field where images overlap and emerge as if, sometimes, they were appearing from a shroud. The result is that nature as Moss paints it is viewed as fragile and in a precarious state of flux.

The artist sees her work as dealing, along with the issues of painting, a concern for survival.

If the tree limbs and pink and yellow swirls and whirlpools of water that surround a big, alert toad perched on a rock in Mysterious Orb threaten to engulf or merge with his patterned body, then this statement is one of content as well as of form. The toad, like the turtles and fish that float through the maze of color, brittle lines of limbs and liquid lines of water, exists as a tense and frightened representation of life in an unordered world.

In addition to pattern and linear activity, Moss constructs her pictures in a collage-like way rather than with traditional spatial planes. As if in acknowledgement of the unpredictable and chaotic elements that both assault nature and are a part of it, she fragments or interrupts images and shapes.

Three vertically rectangular bands float across the large work, Attempted Harmony. Their colors are muted and opaque and they assert themselves as separate entities from the surrounding linear, overlapping tangles of line and puddles of watery color. A close look reveals similar bands that never jelled — dissolved into the surrounding labyrinth. Whether the bands are intrusive elements in the world or, as the title suggests, attempts to harmonize a reigning chaos, is an ambiguous issue.

A large ant, defined by a lumpy, jointed silhouette, makes its way through the agressive, color-heated environment in several of the works. Doggedly pushing past four big orange pom-pom flower forms in Ant On The Way To Arles, the ant, representing Everyman, or, as it were, Everyartist, could be moving through van Gogh's palette to the painter's destination.

The ant's survival, is again, ambiguous. In the four frames of Journey, the insect appears to metamorphose through the sequence of nuclear explosion, dissipating in the blue-orange-green blast of the next-to-last frame and finally reappearing as a white silhouette in ashen landscape. A ghost? A survivor?

The works are on exhibit through Oct. 2. Trustman Gallery is open 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call 738-2145. Karen Moss will be honored with a reception in the gallery 4 to 7 p.m. Sept. 16. The public is invited.

What To Do

It's time to think about your peonies

As autumn approaches it's time to be thinking about peonies. Whether you have peony bushes that need lifting or dividing., or you wish to add to your collection, late summer and early fall is the favored time to do it.

Actually, peonies are relatively carefree in the sense that they prefer settling down into a comfortably familiar spot for at least five years before they show signs of needing a move. This period is longer if the site is particularly favorable. In fact, according to peony experts, an ideal site will accommodate a peony plant for more than a lifetime.

The ideal site would be one with rich, slightly heavy, deep, fibrous loam with shelter from strong winds and protection from the hot afternoon sun.

Annual mulchings of old manure and leaf mold are further attentions that keep the humus content, nutrition and moisture-holding quality at high levels in the soil. Scatterings of bone meal and wood ashes early in the season are further boosts to peony performance.

How can you tell if your peony bush needs digging up, dividing and replanting? When the clumps get too big and floppy, having lost their firm sturdiness, they are trying to tell you they are becoming overcrowded and that their coil has become exhausted. Another indication of over-congested growth is the cut flowers shedding their petals after only a day in water.

If you have a peony bush that seems to qualify for a new home with these symptoms, or if you simply wish to relocate a plant, the best time to perform the move is soon after the first reddish fall coloring appears in the leaves.

This is the point at which the optimum amount of food has been translocated from foliage to root, and the eyes will be dormant. Also at this point in most areas the roots will be able to settle comfortably before the arrival of hard frosts. The more mild the area in which you live, the later this ideal time will be.

Ease your overgrown peony clump out of the ground gently, then cut off all the top growth right down close to the root. The only safe place for this material is the incinerator or the garbage.

A common peony disease called botrytis is an infection that causes the flower buds to rot or dry up, and burning or trashing that spent top growth is a good preventive measure against it.

Now divide your clump of roots into smaller pieces, using a long knife or an old hacksaw blade. Unless you're willing to wait a few years for bloom, keep three to five eyes or growth buds, to each piece. And choose the young growth from the outer clump.

Take care not to break any of these eyes or buds which appear on the crown of the root.

Choose a planting site as near the ideal that I described. Enrich it over a wide area, and deeply, with compost — or peat moss dampened with a fertilizer solution — and bone meal. Processed or old rotted manure, if you have some, is fine to use at this point as long as it does not come into direct contact with the roots. it is perhaps safest reserved as a mulch.

Don't just dig a little hole and squish the roots into it. Dig the site over widely so that the roots can easily take hold lenghtwise as well as downward. Remove sufficient soil to allow the roots to spread out, and set the crown no more than two inches below the soil is heavy.

This shallow planting is the single most important thing to remember in plainting peonies. Planting deeper is the single greatest cause of failure to bloom with these otherwise easy herbaceous plants.

Press the soil about the roots gently but firm so that no air pockets remain, then tread around the plant allow three to four feet between the plants.

Benefactors illuminates stage

Colin, a former English teacher, is now into journalism. Sheila, a former nurse, met Colin at a train station and was considerably pregnant when they got married. They also have two children. Sheila is inept and knows it. She is also terribly insecure, what with Colin treating her like a doormouse and constantly berating her.

Colin broods over acceptance of David's help and is envious of his mental agility and success..." The future is in your head...like a chick about to burst out of its shell!" Remorsefully Colin reveals, "I married Sheila out of kindness...my one curse!" Their marriage is tenuous at best and Sheila is petrified that should Colin leave, she and the children would be homeless and penniless.

Jane is the ultimate do-gooder. She picks up her neighbor's children from school on a daily basis, makes tea for the kiddies and, like as not, prepares dinner for the entire brood. Indeed, with her familiar yooo whooo, Sheila is constantly breezing in..."like a wind rushing into the house." Notes Colin, "We make them feel good!" Observes David, "We keep their marriage together."

A twilight area of 15 acres of Victorian dwellings off Brisutto Street are to be razed to make way for new housing for 3000 people and David has been commissioned to design the project.

Colin is negative about David's initial concept and Jane is not all that certain she approves of the design for Brisutto Downs. Obstacles thwart progress...the laying of a heavy cable will reduce the number of low-rise units; there are cries for more open space; wetlands further hamper the project. As more and more government agencies become involved, the number of low-rise units decline, the number of high-rise units increase.

The years wear on. It is 1968 and now senior town planning is involved. A high-rise subsidy is being bandied about and David is struggling to prevent tower blocks. "I'm always over the soup kitchen," he objects. Colin muses, "It must be magical," but David rebuts, "No it's not...it's all warped windows and condensation...all clutter.

The plans now stand at two towers, 50 stories high, the highest buildings in Europe! A frustrated David lashes out, "It's not art, but mathematics!"

At Jane's behest, David gives Sheila a part-time job in the house and, under their caring, she thrives like a hot house flower. Jane obtains a position with the Town Council, doling out funds for the preservation of old houses. With her new-found sense of security, Sheila finally rebels against Colin's inhuman treatment and leaves him, taking the children and moving in with Jane and David.

Colin moves into the Brisutto complex as a squatter and, blaming David for the break-up of his marriage, organizes opposition against the high-rise project. Desperate, Colin reflects sardonically, "How meaningless life would be if death were not there to stop it!"

Jane's employers contribute to Colin's fight to scrap David's project. She confront's Colin, who mocks David..."He was like a dog wanting to be taken in and loved!"

Finally, everything comes crashing down on David's head, jeopardizing his marriage and shattering his dreams. Belatedly he realizes, "If we hadn't tried to help them, they'd still be together"...even though their marriage was "full of hidden sewers and geological faults, it gave them a purpose."

As Sheila, Sandra Shipley is simply mesmerizing! Her expressive face changes with every thought, every nuance, literally compelling your transfixed attention!

Yours truly tabbed her New England's finest five or six years ago, during her tenure with Boston Shakespeare Company and that evaluation has since been more than justified (albeit belatedly) with Shipley being selected for both the Elliot Norton and NETC Awards for Excellence in Theatre.

Francis West is brilliant as Jane, strong, stoic, reserved, loyal, stiff upper-lipped, likeable and easily holding her ground in fast company with a hypnotic performance. Shea's portrayal of David is one of constant growth and development. Played far more aggressively than his Broadway counterpart, Shea stamps his own character with enviable results. He is a man totally engrosses in his profession and with endless compassion for all mankind.

Eventually, he is forced to accept that, after all, he doesn't live on the sunny side of the street. As Colin, O'Brien is odious and insidious, savage and smouldering, a master of snide remark and a complicated mix of beastly charm. He's like a powder keg ready to explode at any moment. You'll love hating him.

The performances of all four truly illuminate the stage!

Open Door presents children's theatre day

Children will have a chance to learn from the pros during Open Door Theatre's Children's Theatre Day Saturday Sept. 12.

During the day children will work with actors and directors, present short plays, and be whisked across the universe as they watch a special performance of David Mamet's children's comedy The Revenge of the Space Panda's or Binky Rudich and the Two-Speed Clock. Activities begin at 11 a.m. and are free for children ages 4 - 14.

"Children's Theatre Day is Open Door's way of saying thank you to our community," says Open Door Theatre Board President David Mold. "We are committed to providing quality theatre not only for adults, but for younger audiences as well."

During the event children will participate in improvisation, warm-up, rehearsals and performances of short plays. A highlight of the day will be the performance of Revenge of the Space Pandas, directed by Andrew Sawler. The production is a collaboration between Open Door Theatre and Spy Theatre.

In this show, child scientist Binky Rudich takes his friends on journey across the universe to a world where pandas preside. While Binky struggles to save Bob the sheep from impending doom, his mother impatiently waits to serve lunch billions of miles away. It's a race against time. The great pumpkin is about to fall. And Binky must find a way out.

The free event runs from 11 a.m. - 4 p.m. Lunch will be provided. Open Door Theatre, Pinebank Park, Jamaica Plain. For reservations and information call 524-2980.

Voted best in poll: Great honeymoon hotels for every taste

Here is a guide to top-value honeymoons at fine hotels and resorts in this country and the Caribbean. They were voted great honeymoon sites in a recent poll of newly marrieds, as well as by happily marrieds on second honeymoons.

Overnights in city

Many couples prefer to spend a night in the city rather than travel after the fatigue and excitement of a wedding or anniversary celebration.

Fairmont Hotels specialize in romantic overnights for honeymoons or anniversaries with deluxe accommodations, champagne on arrival, and room-service full breakfasts-in-bed next morning.

The Fairmont Hotel in New Orleans is the model on which Arthur Hailey based his novel, Hotel, and the Fairmont in San Francisco is seen in the television version.

Rates vary with the city: In San Francisco, $177; in Dallas, $170; in Denver $150; and in New Orleans, $150 — all including taxes and gratuities except for baggage handling. Suites are available, of course, as well as extra nights if desired. For reservations, call any Fairmont Hotel toll free 800-527-4727.

Puerto Rico resorts

Renowned as the most beautiful resorts in Puerto Rico are Hyatt Hotels, 35 minutes from San Juan Airport in Dorado, on the north shore.

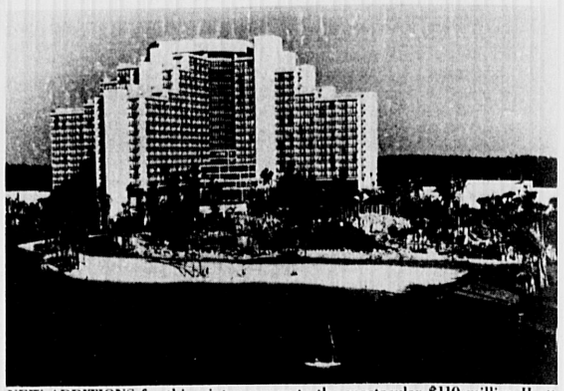
The Hyatt Regency Cerromar Beach has spacious rooms with private balconies overlooking the world's most unique swimming pool and the ocean.

A sister hotel, the Hyatt Dorado Beach, is two miles away with its own private beach fronting the Atlantic and two swimming pools.

Originally a playground for the Rockefellers, this resort offers small clusters of deluxe accommodations with private patios or balconies.

Complimentary shuttle service connects the hotels, and guests have use of dining and recreation facilities at both. There are four Robert Trent Jones golf courses, 21 tennis courts, miles of bicycle paths, a fitness center, two casinos, numerous restaurants; plus a supper club with show and dancing, and a disco.

Each hotel has an all-inclusive honeymoon package with rates variable depending on time of year and length of stay. From late April through mid-December, these hotels are exceptional values. For reservations, call Hyatt Worldwide Reservations at 800-228-9000.



NEW ADDITIONS for this winter season to the spectacular $110-million Hyatt Regency Grand Cypress resort hotel include more Jack Nicklaus golf than any other place in the world, an Audubon center and nature walk, a helipad for those who fly their own copters, and more.

New destination

On Grand Cayman Island, in the British West Indies, the newest Hyatt Regency is a watersports paradise. The island's crystal-clear water and accessible coral reefs offer some of the world's best snorkeling and diving.

The hotel features luxurious rooms with private balconies; a huge, one-third acre swimming pool with swim-up bar; a Jack Nicklaus-designed golf course; fitness trail; two hard-surface tennis courts; and three restaurants.

A short walk away is a private beach club on famed Seven Mile Beach, with a second swimming pool and a full selection of watersports.

The Hyatt Regency Grand Cayman offers two different four-day/three-night honeymoon packages. The first provides flowers and champagne on arrival and a candlelight dinner with wine.

Daytime activities begin with a full American breakfast and include use of two mopeds for day-long exploration of the island, and an afternoon snorkeling trip with the equipment furnished.

Through April 19, 1987 the honeymoon package is $791 per couple; from April 20 through December 18, 1987, it is $636.

For experienced divers, another package includes three supervised dives, unlimited off-shore diving, equipment, underwater treasure hunt, plus welcome cocktail and full American breakfast daily. Price per couple is $798 (or $684 if one person is a non-diver), through April 19, 1987.

For information and reservations call Hyatt Worldwide Reservations toll free at 800-228-9000.

Ski New England

For ski buffs looking for a New England honeymoon getaway, The Orchards in Williamstown, Mass., is an English-style inn in the picturesque Berkshire Mountains.

This intimate 49-room hotel is furnished with antiques, four-poster beds and woodburning fireplaces. After a day on the slopes, there are a sauna and a jacuzzi for relaxation.

Within close proximity are some of the area's best downhill and cross-country skiing as well as a lake for ice-skating.

This is a romantic spot for spring and summer honeymoons, too. For information and reservations call 800-225-1517. In Mass., call 800-231-2344.

Your crowning glory

Julius Caruso, New York's foremost hairdresser, who has been styling New York's society brides for more than 40 years, has the following tips for your big day:

• Consult your hairdresser at least one week before the event, and bring your veil.

• Keep your cut and style simple; an elaborate hairstyle detracts from the beauty of your dress and the day.

• Keep the style soft. All brides, no matter their age, should look "soft, shiny and sweet."

• Try and keep the length of your hair above shoulder length. It's simpler for both the wedding and the honeymoon.

• Avoid heavy hair sprays and mousses. This is a day you want your hair to be soft to the touch and to smell clean and fresh.

• Don't forget your bridesmaids. It's important for the whole bridal party to feel beautiful, and arranging appointments for everyone will make hairdressing easier and the whole party more attractive.

Origins of beloved customs lie in ancient marriage rites

It happens in every wedding: The bride and groom exchange rings. They share cake. The bride throws her bouquet. But do you know how these customs began?

THE BRIDE: A Celebration (Harry N. Abrams, Inc.), a new book by Barbara Tober, Editor-in-Chief of Bride's magazine, reveals their sometimes surprising origins.

The bride throws her bouquet so an unmarried friend can "catch" some luck in romance, goes the modern explanation. But the custom actually started as a form of self-defense.

In times past, belief in the mystical value of a bride's adornments prompted friends and strangers alike to try to grab a piece of her outfit.

Eventually, some clever bride found that by flinging her flowers away from herself, the crowd would have something to fight over — and she would escape intact!

The wedding party originally served the serious purpose of protecting the bride and groom from the curses of evil-wishers. They dressed in clothes exactly like those of the bride and groom, so the identity of the happy couple was kept secret on the way to the church and until they were safely married.

The first piece of wedding cake is cut and eaten by the bride and groom as a carry-over from the time when the sharing of food or wine often was the marriage.

Teutons, for example, were considered wed after drinking mead together for 30 days. (The word bridal comes from bride-ale.)

The aisle runner protected the bride from evil spirits who, it was thought, lived below the ground. These demons were also feared to lurk around doorways, hence the bride is carried over the threshold of her new home.

Rice symbolizes the age-old hope that the couple would be as fruitful as the earth. In France, guests shower the bride and groom with wheat; in Morocco, with raisins, figs and dates.

People clink glasses when they toast the bride and groom in order to produce a bell-like sound. (Bells, it was believed, were repellent to the devil).

"The kiss" as a significant moment in the wedding dates from the Roman Empire. At that time, the betrothal ceremony consisted of a kiss and the exchange of rings, with the kiss being the actual legal bond.

The trousseau, or dowry, was actually an early form of life insurance, since it was meant to ensure that the bride could survive without her husband if the need arose.

We wear the wedding ring on the third finger of the left hand because the pharaohs of Egypt believed a vein, the "vena amoris," ran from that finger directly to the heart.

The honeymoon began, when, in ancient marriages by capture, the groom kept his bride in hiding to prevent searching relatives from finding her.

The word itself comes from the early Teutonic custom of couples drinking an aphrodisiacal honey drink for 30 days, or one cycle of the moon.

Marriages are made in heaven.
— Tennyson

A wife is a gift bestowed upon a man to reconcile him to the loss of paradise.
— Goethe

Look down, you gods,
And on this couple drop a blessed crown.
— Shakespeare

May I wish for you the knowledge that marriages do not take place, they are made by hand, that there is always an element of discipline involved, that however perfect the honeymoon, the time will come, however brief it is, when you will wish she would fall downstairs and break a leg. That goes for her too. But the mood will pass, if you give it time.

Updated traditions characterize the '80s wedding

A wedding is a celebration universal yet diversified in style and presentation. No other event creates as much joy and excitement — not only for the bride and groom but for everyone involved!

What makes it even more exciting today are the different options that are available to couples. Marriage today has no one formula. Whether you opt for getting married when you are older or younger, decide to have a dual-career marriage or a more traditional union, the one thing most brides and grooms agree on is that you can make your marriage what you want it to be.

This idea also carries over to the actual planning of the wedding. Most couples today share the responsibility of planning a wedding.

Getting involved in the planning of the ceremony as well as the celebration afterwards is the best way to make your wedding a personal statement of whom you are.

Choosing the vows with which you feel comfortable, or writing a good deal of the ceremony yourselves, can help make you feel that your wedding is a reflection of whom you are as a couple.

Your reception, too, should be planned according to what you as a couple want and enjoy.

There are many types of receptions from which today's bride and groom can choose. A traditional sit-down dinner is as popular as ever. Many couples like the orderly, organized feeling this type of seating arrangement conveys. Large as well as small groups can accommodate themselves to this type of arrangement.

A buffet dinner is also very popular. More casual in feeling, this type of reception allows people to move freely amongst the other guests.

A buffet dinner also allows the bride and groom more freedom when choosing a menu. With this type of dinner, an appealing variety of dishes can be served. Also, in many cases, a buffet dinner is less expensive than the traditional sit-down reception.

Another alternative that is becoming increasingly popular is a cocktail hour reception. Similar to a buffet reception, a cocktail reception usually includes champagne with hot and cold hors d'oeuvre being circulated, or a buffet table with hors d'oeuvre that people can help themselves to, and a bar complete with wine as well as hard liquor.

For those more interested in a reception with a "country feeling," outdoor luncheons complete with tent or awning are always nice. You might even want to serve a picnic lunch complete with individual baskets that would make the event fun as well as easier to serve!

It is always the small details that really stand out when it comes to judging which receptions are the most special.

Balloons, ribbons or netting — all relatively inexpensive — can add a special flair when it comes to decorating for a wedding reception.

Flowers —whether exotic or wild — add to the ambiance, as does music. Both flowers and music can run into some money, so it is best to research the different types available to you.

Flower arrangements range from potted plants placed on tables and arranged strategically throughout the reception area to wild flowers strewn in baskets, to the very delicate single white lily in a vase.

There is music to suit everyone's taste and, because it is a universal language you can be sure that no matter what type you choose, it is sure to be enjoyed by most everyone.

With so many options to choose from in terms of both lifestyle and types of weddings, today's couples have to remember to follow their hearts and do what reflects their personal taste and style.

Survey reveals traditions important

In a world of changing sex roles and more equal marital partnerships, today's bride is placing a high priority on friendship as the basis for marriage.

A survey of 350 brides-to-be, conducted by Lenox China and Crystal, reveals their feelings and opinions regarding relationships and traditions and offers some insights into the future plans of newlyweds.

Friendship as a basis for marriage

The survey indicates that today's bride is "best friends" with her spouse. About 70 percent of the women met their husbands-to-be at work, school or through mutual friends. In contrast, only seven percent polled met their fiancés at popular singles spots such as bars, restaurants or parties.

Approximately 96 percent of the brides consider their fiancé their best friend and share similar views on issues. By comparison, few brides say opposites attract.

About 70 percent of the brides place the highest regard on the inner qualities of their future husband. Important characteristics include his sense of humor, patience and intelligence. Less important are physical appearance, sex appeal and financial status.

Future plans of newlyweds

According to the survey findings, the number of two-career families with both parents working full-time or the mother working part-time will continue to be a strong trend. Many brides-to-be plan to combine child-rearing with careers.

Almost 99 percent of the brides-to-be plan to work away from home after marriage. Family life is also important to today's bride, as 88 percent of the women plan to have children.

Most brides-to-be are interested in entertaining in their homes after marriage and plan to do so often. Over 50 percent of the brides expect that they will hold small casual dinner parties. Others expressed an interest in hosting formal dinners, theme, holiday and cocktail parties.

In accordance with their desire to entertain, 81 percent of future brides say they will need a formal set of crystal and china, and plan to select these items at the bridal registry. Over three-quarters of the brides also plan to register for casual china.

Lenox China and Lenox Crystal, the number one choice of registering brides in the United States, conducted this survey because of its strong commitment to newlyweds across the country.

CAR CARE CORNER

By Dan Hogan, Service Manager

When a muffler is shot, you can usually hear its rumbling noise...But don't let that be your only guide. Stifling noise is only part of the exhaust system's job. Another is to keep deadly — and silent — gases and fumes from getting inside your car. If you have any doubts, have the system checked before driving during the wintertime when most of the car windows usually are closed. You could check the system yourself by starting the car and letting the engine idle, then stuff a rag into the tailpipe. If the car stops running, the exhaust system is tight. If the engine keeps running, you have an exhaust leak.

The technicians at PETER FULLER OLDS are ASE certified. We keep a computerized history of all cars serviced here to notify you of preventative maintenance. Open 8-5. Tel. 924-8100. M/C, Visa & A/E accepted. We are located within walking distance to public transportation. Come to PETER FULLER OLDS, Watertown Sq. "Olds National Service Award Winner."

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

Town to decide on ALS

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer wants to clarify his stand on the effect the Advanced Life Support (ALS) paramedic consortium would have on the town's ambulance service.

He says he never recommended discontinuing the Fire Department's service in the event the town decides to join ALS.

"The ambulance service is one in which the Fire Department does an admirable job," Maurer told the selectmen at last Monday's meeting.

He said there had been some confusion among the firefighters about the scope of ALS. Maurer and ALS representatives have met with Fire Chief Robert McElhinney and Police Chief John McHugh to get their opinions on the service.

"I have no problems with ALS," McHugh said. He said he thinks the service is a good idea.

ALS acts as a supplementary parademic service during emergen-

Day care zoning bill is now law

A bill sponsored by Winchester's State Senator, Richard A. Kraus, clarifying the status of family day care homes was recently signed into law by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

"The problem this bill addressed was the confusion that existed about where family day care homes were permitted to operate," said Kraus.

"Because family day care is rarely mentioned by name in zoning regulations, both providers and town officials were often confused about where it was allowed. The recently passed legislation clarifies the status of these homes by stating that, unless specifically prohibited by a communi-

Select board breaks peace, one storms out

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Despite a resolution two weeks ago not to air personal problems at meetings, Winchester's Board of Selectmen are back to their bickering this week.

Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia did not attend Monday night's meeting. She also did not inform either Selectmen Francis Sopper or Mark Lombardi, according to Sopper, but Selectman Thomas Schmitt said Muggia had told the board when they were scheduling summer meetings that she would be in Italy during this meeting.

Schmitt also said Muggia had reminded him that she would not be at the meeting, but the fact had come up in casual conversation, and not because Muggia made a special call to let him know.

When Vice Chairman Robert Deering opened the meeting, Sopper interrupted. He said Muggia had "blindsided this side of the table," and that her behavior was "disgusting." He said it is tradition for members of the board to let each other know if they cannot attend a meeting.

At this point Lombardi left the meeting. "I'm never going to sit while he's chairing a meeting," he said of Deering. "I'm going home it watch the rest on TV."

When Deering was elected vice chairman, Lombardi said he deserved the position because traditionally third-year selectmen acted as chairman and vice chairman. Both Muggia and Lombardi are in the third year of their terms.

He had offered the chairman's position to Muggia without a fight because she got more votes in the town election and then told the board that Deering could have the job if he wanted it. When a vote was taken, Deering came out on top with votes from Muggia, Schmitt, and himself. There was no discussion after that until Deering chaired a meeting the next week. Lombardi walked out of that meeting, too.

"In spite of the differences Selectmen Lombardi may have with me or other members of the board, I still feel his behavior is unbecoming," Deering said at Monday's meeting. "The residents of the town are being cheated.

"I'm a big boy, I don't take my bat and ball and go home," Deering added.

Board votes to send articles to fall TM

Articles on a wetlands bylaw amendment, zoning bylaw amendments, the rezoning of some Woburn Loop land, and the creation of a Winchester Housing Partnership Board and a director of community development will be on the Fall Town Meeting warrant.

The Board of Selectmen voted to include the articles at their meeting Monday night.

Selectman Francis Sopper also requested that the board hold public hearings on the housing and community development articles because they represent the creation of new bureaucracies and are "very serious" changes.

Selectman Thomas Schmitt said he thought the public hearings that are held after the articles are drafted would be sufficient, but he agreed to the hearings.

Selectmen Vice Chairman Robert Deering said the hearings might not get much of a turnout, but he also agreed to hold them.

In other business, the selectmen agreed to ring the Town Hall bell at 2 p.m. Sept. 17 as a part of the national celebration of the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

Schmitt requested a safety plan of the developer and contractor of 611 Main St. before the selectmen vote for a staging and crane permit. The staging permit is required to erect the brick veneer, a process that would close off the sidewalk for six to seven weeks.

The crane is needed to lift the steel that will be erected for the structure of the 3½-story building. It will block the sidewalk and a lane of traffic on Main Street for three or four days, contractor Bill Lund of JSP, Inc., said.

The selectmen voted to give the Friends of Winchester High School Music a common victualler's license to operate the chuck wagon during football games on Manchester Field.

Democrats seek an end to contra aid

By ELAINE ROSEN
Special to the Star

Chairman William H. Wells of the Winchester Democratic Town Committee, angry at the Reagan administration's continued aid to the contras in Nicaragua, is urging fellow Democrats to send a loud message of disapproval to Washington.

At a working meeting Sept. 10, Wells called for the administration to "join the peace effort underway and this means stopping all aid" to the Contras and Guatemala.

Dr. Alexander Leaf, chairman of the Department of Preventative Medicine at Harvard Medical School, joined Wells and approximately 25 others at the home of Allen and Sandy Rodgers. Leaf's daughter, Rebecca Leaf, a Winchester High School graduate and an engineer, has replaced Benjamin Linder, the American civilian killed by the Contras while helping Nicaraguan villagers.

Speaking with quiet fervor, Leaf described how Becky had known Linder and was outraged at his death. She continued his mission which is to help the villagers by building small power plants in the countryside. Leaf stated that his daughter's courageous involvement and her reports of conditions in Nicaragua have made him an activist against the current administration's policy.

"Our government is driving them to wartime conditions and so they must seek help where they can. They must turn to the Soviet Union and Cuba. The administration has created a self-fulfilling prophecy."

He described his daughter's frustrations at our government's refusal to send parts for the antiquated power plants. He told of her

Yale St. doctor bikes a far piece

MacDonald pedals length of Britain in 2 weeks

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

"It was only a little trip." That is how Jack MacDonald of Yale Street describes the 1,060-mile, two-week bike trip he returned from last week.

MacDonald rode between 60 and 80 miles a day to get from John O'Groats, Scotland, to Land's End, England, in 15 days. The 129 bicyclists, including MacDonald's son, Joel, cycled from the northwestern tip of Great Britain to its southeasternmost extremity.

Ask MacDonald the details of the little trip and he tells of hills with 40-percent grades. On day five of the trip, the bicyclists got a dose of British weather that had some of them taking rides in the tour truck that held their tents, but Jack MacDonald stuck it out.

"I've never seen rain so heavy and driving," he said. "It was like sheets." Add to that 25 to 30-mile-an-hour head winds and you end up sitting on a bicycle for 12 hours to go 80 miles.

Not bad for a 65-year-old man.

MacDonald said he usually rode for about 20 miles and then took a break for lunch or tea. The tour guides had tea-stops planned at local cafes, although MacDonald said he sometimes rode for miles without seeing anything resembling civilization.

Each rider got a set of maps with explicit directions for each day's travels. The tour was designed to stay off the main roads and on the side paths. These paths were often unpaved and took a beating in the rainy weather. MacDonald has a picture of one cyclist riding through a puddle that reaches up to his ankles.

MacDonald said the first stop, John O'Groats, was bleak. "There's nothing there," he said. But the countryside was "beautiful, rich farmland with many cows and sheep."

Despite his talk of the hills and the rain, MacDonald emphasized the positive parts of the trip. He met people from South Africa, Holland, all over the United States and, of course, Scotland and England. He also got to spend time with his eldest son, whom he describes as a workaholic.

This is not the first extended bike trip MacDonald has taken. Two years ago he rode across Iowa in a week. That trip was 492 miles long.

MacDonald is the head of the Radiololgy Department at Winchester Hospital. He also hikes, skis and plays tennis.

To prepare for the 15-day bike ride, MacDonald took day tours around New England that were about 30 miles long. He especially likes Cape Ann. "You have more appreciation of the beauty of New England," he said about riding.

MacDonald's daughter, Denise, gave him a bike a few years ago and he began riding again after a long hiatus. He had biked as a young man in the Royal Air Force during World War II. (He is originally from Canada.) One of his friends from the service showed him a snapshot of himself on a Raleigh three-speed in his R.A.F. uniform. MacDonald had not seen the man since the war, but has kept in touch and went to visit him after his bike trip.

Two years ago, he upgraded from the bike Denise gave him to his curent model, one with 18-speeds. "You have to know your bike," MacDonald said. "People get in trouble if it's not adjusted properly." That is why both Jack and Joel brought their bikes with them on the trip.

The day began at about 6:30 a.m. The group ate breakfast together and then proceeded at their own paces to the grounds they would camp at for the night. Often, MacDonald would go into town and rent a room in a "Bed and Breakfast" to take a hot bath. He smiled as he said, "By the time I was finished, there was no hot water left for Joel."

To break up the solitude of the ride, the tour guides arranged for two comedians to pop up somewhere along the route each day. One day, the men, dressed in tuxedos, set up a table and served sherry in the middle of the road. Another day, they pretended to be the border patrol.

When the group met the mayor and mayoress of Shrewsbury, the comedians stood outside the meeting place with signs reading, "Down with the two-wheeled menace." MacDonald said the men were so convincing that the mayor and mayoress wanted to have them arrested.

MacDonald said he got to pick up the flavor of the country because he wasn't zooming by it in a car. He noticed details like the abundance of flowers in the small towns, even if there was only a small spot of land for them.

He met the local people in post offices, which serve as the country store and meeting place. "They are mostly farm people," MacDonald said. "The are hard working, good, down-to-earth people."

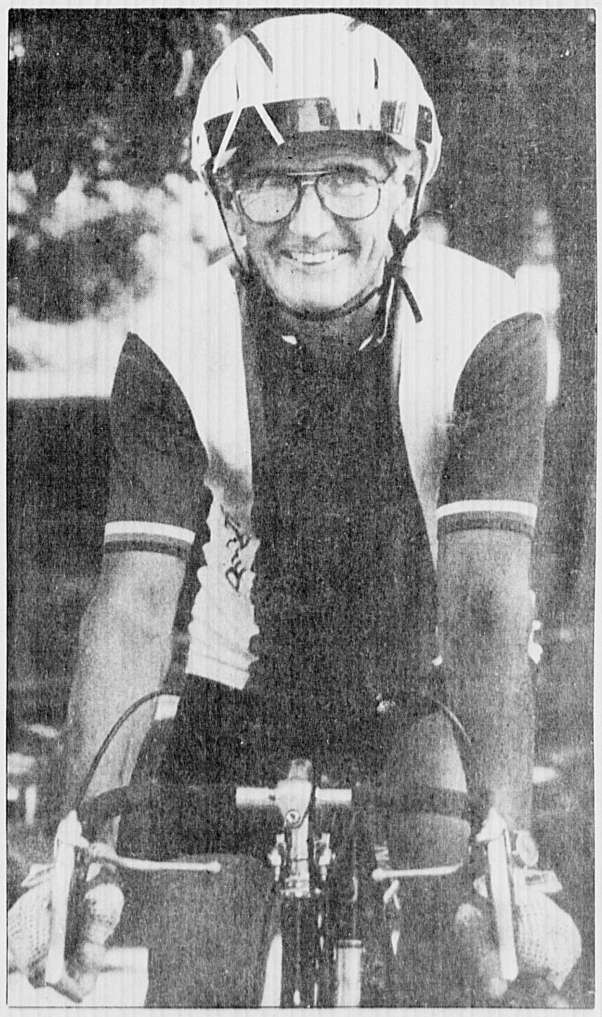
As they approached Land's End, and the end of the trip, the group gathered outside the town to journey the final leg together. The townspeople knew they were coming. There was a band and a crowd of people waiting for them to reach the most southern point of the island they had traveled through for two-weeks.

"I was relieved. I was looking forward to not getting on the bike," MacDonald said of the trip's end.

"I'm really happy I did it. It's something I wanted to do, but I don't want to do it again," he said.

Just because he isn't planning another long-distance bike trip any time soon does not mean that MacDonald has retired from outdoor activity. At the end of the month he will be on a three-day hiking trip with some colleagues from the hospital. He has already climbed all the 4,000-foot and over peaks in New Hampshire and thinks he will start in Vermont or Maine now.

And his rest from bicycle-riding is over; he went on another New England tour this weekend. But for a man who calls a 1,060-mile ride "a little trip," 30 miles is like a ride around the block.



Jack MacDonald, 65, rode his bike from one end of Great Britain to the other in 16 days this summer. (Paul Drake Photo)

POLICE LOG

Sunday, September 13

While patrolling at 4:35 a.m., police saw a car going north without dimming its high beams as it passed the police car.

Officers believed they knew that the driver, a Kendall Street teen, did not have a driver's license or a permit. They stopped the boy on Hancock Street.

The officers reported that they brought the teen home and that his mother, who owned the car, said she did not know her son had been driving it.

The teen was issued citations for operating without a license or learner's permit and failure to dim high beams.

Saturday, September 12

At 10:43 p.m. police were dispatched to the Dairy Barn parking lot.

When they arrived, they found a Billerica man and other youths arguing and fighting in the lot. Police reported that when they tried to break up the fight, the man became belligerent and started yelling at the group.

While police were dispersing the group, the Billerica man ran after a Highland Avenue teen and shouted that he was going to kill him. He kicked and hit the youth and had to be restrained, police said.

The Billerica man was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct, according to police.

While observing traffic on Johnson Road near the Vinson-Owen School at 7:54 p.m., an officer saw a blue Chevrolet Cavalier pass him.

He clocked the car's speed on radar as 49 miles per hour. The officer stopped the driver at Johnson and New Meadow Road. When the policeman got out of the cruiser, the car sped off down New Meadow Road, turning left on Thorton and then onto Cambridge Street, according to police reports.

The driver then turned into the driveway of 156 Cambridge Street, thinking it was a street. The car stopped on a boulder, police said.

The driver, an Arlington man, was arrested on charges of failure to submit to a police officer, speeding and operating after driver's license revocation, according to police.

At 12:18 a.m. police were called to the scene of an attempted burglary on Cambridge Street.

The owner said he left the house at 8 a.m. Tuesday, and returned at midnight to discover that someone had tried to break into his house, according to police reports.

The intruder punched out a triangular pane of glass from the kitchen door at the rear of the house, reaching through the window to unlock a passage set lock. But a second lock on the bottom of the door prevented him from getting in, police said.

A man's small, brown leather left-hand glove was found on the floor at the base of the kitchen door, according to police.

The intruder made a second attempt to break in by pushing out a screen and forcing an unlocked casement window in the living room at the rear of the house, but that attempt also failed, police said.

Thursday, September 10

At 8:14 a.m. police responded to a breaking and entering a motor vehicle call on Swanton Street.

A man reported a $650 Denon AM/FM stereo cassette deck and his wallet were stolen from his car, according to police.

Another man reported someone had smashed the passenger side window of his car and stolen a $295 radar detector, police said.

Wednesday, September 9

While patrolling near Purity Supreme at 7:12 p.m. an officer noticed a "grubbily dressed" white male and a black female let another white male out of the entrance to the supermarket, according to police reports.

The man was carrying a red, plastic shopping basket full of food. The three people walked to a 1976 Ford Maverick parked near the store's entrance, police said.

The officer approached the car and asked the man, whom he knew as a Pilgrim Drive resident, why he was removing the basket and if he had a receipt for the food. The man went to the driver's side door and put the basket on the roof, the officer said.

he asked the man again for a receipt, but the man bolted and headed south on Main Street. He ran to the Sunoco Station and headed for the railroad tracks. At this point the officer radioed for backup, according to police reports.

One of the backup officers caught the man. A warrant check on the other man, a Somerville resident, showed two outstanding warrants. The man was arrested on those warrants, police said.

A manager from Purity Supreme identified the food, three tenderloin steaks, two Delmonico steaks, a strip steak, and a loaf of Italian bread and the basket. The total price for those items was $101.21, according to police.

The woman, a Cambridge resident, and the Winchester man were arrested on charges of shoplifting over $100. The Somerville man was also charged with shoplifting, police said.

McCutcheon to perform at Manchester

The Winchester Community School Association Enrichment Committee is sponsoring John McCutcheon in concert at Manchester Field Sunday, Oct. 4, at 2 p.m.

A native of northern Wisconsin, McCutcheon picked up music as a young boy by imitating black carnival performers and simultaneously picking out folk songs on a mail order guitar. Moving into the Appalachian region in the early 1970s he became involved in musical work with labor and social-justice issues.

His music represents a bridge between traditional and contemporary music.

Ticket information is available by calling 938-8497 or 729-1537.

In the event of rain, the concert will be moved indoors to the McCall Junior High School auditorium.

Admission is $5.

Play-reading meetings begin September 23

A new community theatrical program of play-reading meetings will begin Sept. 23. Under the title of Off Stage, meetings will be held monthly in an informal atmosphere with the intent of providing actors and directors additional opportunities to read, act, and direct plays without staging. The program is co-sponsored by the Winchester Players and the Winchester Community Arts Program.

Every Winchester resident is welcome to attend, regardless of experience. Participants will select the plays to be read. Plays may be precast, directed, and rehearsed or may be spontaneous readings in which casts change from scene to scene. At the first meeting a selection of one-act plays will be supplied for impromptu readings and future readings will be discussed.

Meetings are scheduled in the Alliance Room of the Unitarian Church. The first meeting is on Wednesday, Sept. 23, at 7:30 p.m. Subsequent meetings have tentatively been scheduled for the third Wednesday of each month, but may be negotiated by participants.

Regular attendance or membership is not required. There is no fee. Anyone unable to attend the first meeting(s) but wishing to be kept informed may sign up at the public library reference desk.

Family reunited with former exchange guest: the Swedish PM

By JOYCE WESTNER
Special to the Star

After you host a foreign student in your home for a few days, you try to keep in touch but sometimes you lose track of each other.

A Winchester family lost touch with the Swedish student they hosted some years ago, but picked up the paper one day and read that he'd just become prime minister of Sweden.

Ingvar Carlsson came to Winchester in 1961, a wandering graduate student on his way home to Sweden from Northwestern University.

He came back to Winchester last week to have dinner with Elaine and Grant Curtis of Lawson Road on his way to Washington to visit President Reagan.

Carlsson was elected prime minister by the Social Democratic party in Sweden last year after the death by assassination of then prime minister Olof Palme.

When Elaine Curtis read about his election in the paper, she wondered if it could be the same person she'd hosted 26 years ago.

"Ingvar and Carlsson are both common Swedish names," she says, "but when I read that he had a degree from Northwestern, I knew it must be the same man."

Ingvar Carlsson came to Winchester in 1961, a wandering graduate student on his way home to Sweden from Northwestern University.

Because the Curtis's adult children were going to Sweden for the first time last summer to visit relatives, Elaine wrote to Carlsson to see if he and his wife Ingrid remembered their American host family.

"Ingrid wrote back a very complete recollection of their visit here," she says. The Carlssons also invited the Curtis's children to come and visit them at their summer home on the Swedish island of Gotland.

The visit was delightful, Elaine reports, and the prime minister's mother cooked dinner for them.

Former dean of financial aid at Tufts, Grant Curtis said he came home early on June 30, the day he officially retired after 38 years at the university.

"The phone rang and a voice said, 'This is Ingvar Carlsson.' He told me he wanted us to save Labor Day because he and Ingrid wanted to come and visit us."

And as any hospitable Winchester resident would, Curtis said he'd be home, "And I said 'Can I pick you up at the airport?'"

But as it happened, Carlsson had other means of getting to Lawson Road.

Elaine counted two MDC police cars, one state police car, two Winchester police cars, police motorcycles, eight other cars and the vice presidential limousine which is permanently garaged in Boston for use by Vice President George Bush or visiting dignitaries on trips to New England.

"Before he came, there must have been eight secret service men and a protocol person from the State Department," she says. "It was very exciting and yet after all the hoopla, Ingrid and Ingvar came in and were so relaxed and we had a nice family dinner.

"Grant got a VCR tape of 'Sleeping Beauty' out of the library for the grandchildren" and the Curtises and their daughter Kris, her husband Jim Murphy, the Curtis's son, David, and his fiancee, Clara Maxwell, had supper with a visiting head of state.

Elaine recalls Carlsson's time with them in 1961. A student aid group at Tufts was trying to set up host families for the Carlssons to stay with after Ingvar had completed a master's degree at Northwestern and was travelling to the East Coast.

"The Tufts group knew my Swedish background," Elaine says (her parents immigrated from Sweden), "and they knew I was a Northwestern graduate.

"The Carlssons stayed longer than was usual for these arrangements because they were trying to send their car back to Sweden," she says, and they ended up staying the week.

The Carlssons remembered their visit fondly, and reminisced with their hosts about the good time they had, according to the Curtises.

They did say they remembered the house as being bigger -- and the Curtis's ages didn't seem quite as they recalled.

"They asked us how old we were when they were here in '61," Grant Curtis says. "We were 41 then and Ingvar said we seemed older at the time." But now that he's 52, Carlsson realizes how young 41 can be.

As prime minister, Carlsson is the first Swedish head of state to visit the U.S. in over 25 years. During the Vietnam war years, the two countries had a falling out, when Sweden offered amnesty to American draft resisters and deserters from Vietnam.

This visit has been hailed as the beginning of a new relationship with Sweden and the two countries have been talking about arms control and nuclear weapons. They may have come closer in recent weeks with the discovery that against the expressed official wishes of both governments, the two countries have been selling arms to Iran.

Although it is not a NATO member, Sweden faces the threat of the Soviet Union near its border and is continually sighting Soviet submarines off its coast.

The country is known throughout the world for the comfort of life there, where social programs take care of its citizens from cradle to grave.

Elaine Curtis noted that the government just gave her 91-year-old Swedish aunt a typewriter because she suffered a stroke and could no longer control her handwriting.

And comfort has extended to the Carlssons' life as well. They take their annual month-long vacation each July like other Swedish citizens. They've noticed an increase in security surrounding them in Sweden, but nothing compared to the U.S.

Ingrid Carlsson still goes to her job as a librarian, unaccompanied by security agents.

After it was all over, and the police cars and limo pulled away, the Lawson Road neighbors were standing on the street talking it over. An elderly man walking his dog by the house said, to no one in particular, "It's a great honor for the neighborhood."

The Curtis-Murphy family gathers in their livingroom with their guest, the prime minister of Sweden. The group consists of, standing from left, Jim Murphy, Clara Maxwell, David Curtis, seated on couch from left, Grant Curtis, Ingrid Carlsson, the prime minister's wife, Elaine Curtis, Ingvar Carlsson, the prime minister, seated on floor from left, Emily Curtis-Murphy, Kris Curtis and Megan Curtis-Murphy.

Mother publishes book on trials of bringing up mixed-race family

By PETER MAUST
Special to the Star

A new book has just come out that recounts the struggle and triumph a Winchester resident and her family experienced after adopting a black Vietnamese child in the mid-1970s.

The author, Pamela Chatterton Purdy, and her husband, the Rev. Dr. David A. Purdy of Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church, adopted their son, Hoang Stephen, in 1975 after the fall of Saigon.

Purdy, who moved to Winchester in 1978, teaches art in the Runkle School in Brookline. She began the book as a diary, to recount and reflect upon the turbulence of life with Hoang Stephen. She decided to craft it into a book while taking a writing seminar at Radcliffe College.

Hoang Stephen sits on a swing and shares a moment with his newly-adopted mother, Pam Purdy, two days after his arrival in the United States in 1975. Today, at 17, he is a freshman at Bridgewater State College.

In 1985 her book, "Beyond the Babylift," was accepted for publication by Abingdon Press of Nashville, Tenn.

The "babylift" refers to the airlift that flew thousands of South Vietnamese children, many sired by American servicemen, out of Vietnam.

Purdy says the book "is not just a success story." Adopting Hoang Stephen created a culture shock for her entire family. Hoang Stephen spoke no English when he arrived in America. He was streetwise, hyperactive and hardened by living on his own for his first five years.

Purdy kept a journal of life with the orphan child, and it was this diary that she says helped her keep striving when times were hard. "Beyond the Babylift" is, she says, "a day-to-day account of the joys and sorrows of becoming a cohesive, racially-mixed family."

The Purdys have three other children: two girls, Kristen and Jessica, and another son, Ronald. Ronald was adopted in 1971. The book depicts the "culture crisis" that Hoang Stephen brought with him when he joined the family.

According to Purdy, it was very difficult for him to adapt to his new surroundings. His Buddhist background made him uncomfortable with the cross and symbols of Christianity. He still remembered the war in terrifying detail, fearing bombs were falling when a violent thunderstorm unleashed its fury.

Purdy says his hyperactivity and distrust of many things made him difficult to handle, but she also emphasizes that she grew to love him very much.

In May 1975, the Purdy's were contacted by their son Ronald's adoption agency. The agency was calling on behalf of a charitable organization, the Friends of the Children of Vietnam, to see if the Purdys would consider adopting a Vietnamese child. They agreed.

Pamela Purdy recalls that the process "took three to four days; it was unbelievably fast."

She says it was difficult to teach Hoang Stephen attitudes of fairness and generosity because his early childhood was so harsh. The ethics of the Vietnamese streets taught him that life was a struggle for survival of the fittest.

The family has encountered many negative reactions and the two boys have been the targets of racist abuse. Purdy noted that even some friends have distanced themselves from her racially mixed family.

She is outraged that Hoang Stephen was assaulted in Winchester in 1981. Then 11, he entered a shop downtown and was badly beaten by an older, much larger teenager. Purdy decries that serveral people observed the assault but did nothing to interfere or to aid her injured son afterward.

Purdy recalls how angered she was, and says she can now identify with the rage black parents must feel when their children are victims of racial abuse. She is especially angered becase she expects Winchester to be a desirable area, adding, "I was so enraged and so angry that this kind of racism existed in a town like this. There was a time after the incident when we felt very isolated and very alone."

The Purdys moved from Middleboro to Winchester in 1978. David Purdy had requested to be reappointed to a Methodist Church closer to Boston. This was so Hoang Stephen could have access to educational programs that addressed his special needs. His parents wanted to help him learn English and adapt to his new culture.

Pamela Purdy has mixed feeling about Winchester after her family, particularly Hoang Stephen, have suffered varied abuse. "It's basically a racist town," she says, "but we've had wonderful support from many individuals, including some teachers and personnel in the school system."

Hoang Stephen and Pam Purdy in a recent photograph.

She remarked that her white daughters have had to listen to abusive language and were shocked that the rest of the world does not reflect the racial harmony in their integrated family.

The experiences that were so disruptive in the Purdy family were also very helpful, claims Pamela. The differences between Hoang Stephen's background and that of the rest of the family taught everyone to be more tolerant. She adds that many long hours of discussions on their differences have enabled them to have broader, more accepting views of others.

Pamela Purdy will autograph copies of her book at "Book Ends" Oct. 17 from 10 a.m. to noon.

WHEN IT'S TIME TO MOVE

As we go through life, situations change, and as they do, our housing needs change, too. We get married, expand our families, get promotions that involve cross country moves, and send children off to college and careers. Any of these changes can make you reexamine your current housing situation and may even trigger a move.

When it's time to sell your home or to purchase a new one, the first crucial step is to contact a professional realtor to help you assess your situation. What is your home worth? Would it be better to sell it now or to keep the house and rent it out? What cost effective fix-ups should you make before marketing the property? If you're moving to a new city, how can you contact a realtor there to introduce you to the community and help you find the pertect new home in a neighborhood that meets your needs? With our professional training, experience and expertise. Realtors are especially equipped to help you answer these types of questions. We will work to make your move go as smooth as possible.

School department goes after grant $$ actively

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

> 'For a system our size, we have been doing tremendously well in obtaining grants to supplement the town budget.'
> - Ackerman

The Winchester School Department aggressively seeks out grants to supplement the School Department's budget, Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction David Ackerman says.

"For a system our size, we have been doing tremendously well in obtaining grants to supplement the town budget," Ackerman continues. "It's a tribute to the creativity and initiative of quite a number of people."

But where does the money go?

The largest grant came from Chapter 188, the Massachusetts Public School Improvement Act of 1985. Winchester received an Early Childhood Education grant of $62,414. These grants are competitive, with priority going to less affluent districts and schools with demonstrated need. The state must give 75 percent of this money to low-income sites.

Part of the grant will go to salaries for teachers of the readiness class. The class helps kindergarten and first grade students adjust to a school atmosphere and expectations.

During the summer, teachers in a curriculum workshop funded by the grant developed a new progress reporting system for kindergarten and first grade.

Two other uses of the money are the model learning center for kindergarten and the pilot reading program for the first grade. A quarterly newsletter, also funded by the early childhood grant, is distributed throughout the school system and to area pre-schools.

Ackerman attributes the School Department's success in getting grants, although Winchester is not a low-income district, to the presentation and execution of programs the school wants to have funded. The department put together an early childhood parent handbook and an early childhood development handbook that are widely distributed to other school districts.

Working on projects that reach more than one community "offsets in some ways that we're not in a low socio-economic bracket" when grants are being awarded, Ackerman said. "We present a proposal in a way that the readers feel more than the local district will benefit."

Block Grant Uses

This year's Federal Block Grant of $10,305 will be spent mostly to fund the program "Reading and Writing Across the Secondary Curriculum." Block grants are awarded yearly based on the number of students in the school system. Once the federal award is made, a committee of parents, teachers and administrators distributes the money.

This year, the committee decided to continue the reading and writing program, which was funded last year through a federal excellence grant.

The block grant funds will allow for stipends to the program's two resource teachers, Barbara Nixon at McCall Junior High and Susan Austin at the high school. Smaller stipends will go to participating teachers.

The program's goal is to integrate reading and writing into the entire curriculum, not just English classes. The teachers involved (10 at the high school and six at McCall) will write out proposals for teaching strategies they would like to use in class for half a semester.

Austin used the example of comprehension modeling, a process by which the teacher not only reads the material to the students, but explains his thought pattern as he reads. This allows the student to learn the thought process involved in comprehending what they are reading.

At the end of the trial period, teachers will write a report on the results of their strategies. "Lots of strategies are similiar to what we've done before," Austin said. "It's good to refocus on those things."

In keeping with this year's learning theme, "Celebration of Arts," the block grant committee gave $750 to Marguerite Masserian to conduct an advanced art program for elementary school students after school. It also awarded $1,355 to art teacher John Walker for high school art equipment that will enable him to develop demonstration models for the art program.

Under Chapter 188, Winchester also received $24,900 for Horace Mann grants. These awards go to teachers who take on expanded responsibilities and new roles. The grants are based on the number of teachers in the system. Each system then distributes the grants as it sees fit.

Software in the curriculum

Although the department did not get as many grants as it has in past years, many grants have long-range effects on the schools.

An Educational Collaborative of Greater Boston (EdCo) grant that the system earned last year will affect the curriculum this year, Ackerman said. McCall teachers Dave Ardito and Nancy Peterson will incorporate software purchased with grant money into their art classes.

Peterson teaches a section called "Step Aside Beethoven," beginning composition theory. She will be using "Music Printer," to better illustrate the ideas behind music theory.

Ardito will use "Dazzle Draw," a software package that enhaces the teaching of art concepts such as value, texture, shape, figure and ground, and perspective.

The 14 Apple 2Es given to the school department from the Apple Corporation last year will be used more widely this year. Last year history teacher Clarence Olson used data bases to teach about the Great Depression under the guidance of social studies director Bill O'Connor.

A study of the students in the class and the students in a control group showed that the software helped students draw conclusions from the data. It will be more widely used this school year.

Ackerman said it took a lot of persistance to get the Apple grant. The hard work paid off and he hopes to be able to work out arrangements with the private sector more often.

The key to earning the Apple grant was proving to the company that they would benefit from the proposal, too. "The project was innovative and successful and is a selling point for Apple," Ackerman said.

"We have a good track record and good curriculum people here," he said. "We use our successes as a selling point for more successes."

Colby orients freshmen outdoors

Winchesterites Heather McLeman and David Ford, two freshmen at Colby College, started their college careers by joining more than 300 classmates on a week-long trek through Maine as part of the Colby Outdoor Orientation Trip, (COOT).

COOT, which is designed to introduce incoming students to Maine, Colby and one another, allows groups of 10 freshmen to explore Maine, guided by two experienced student leaders and a member of Colby's faculty or staff. Students choose from among trips for experienced campers, such as a 30-mile hike over a spectacular portion of the Appalachian Trail, to those designed for neophytes, such as an exploration of FDR's beloved Campobello Island. Still other trips focus on special activities like canoeing, biking, photography and fishing.

McLeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLeman of Ridge Street, took the Campobello trip, touring the former President's summer retreat and other sites of interest in eastern Maine.

Ford, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Ford of Bruce Road, went on the Moosehead Lake trip, exploring the 40-mile long lake on foot and in canoes by day and camping at a lakeside cabin.

Saltmarsh speaks at Lynch school

Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh addressed upper grade Lynch School students September 16 as part or the school's celebration of citizenship.

The day's activities revolved around the commemoration of the signing of the U.S. Constitution. Rep. Saltmarsh's talk was the focal point of a day highlighted with students watching and listening to the president lead the nation in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Saltmarsh provided Lynch students with a sense of his daily role in a democratic forum. Students will follow up in their classrooms by creating their own Bill of Rights for the class and the school.

Lynch School to hold family picnic

A family picnic is planned for Friday, Sept. 18, at 5:30 p.m. at the Lynch playground.

The picnic is a celebration of the installaiton of the new playground equipment completed last spring, as well as a way to greet old and new friends in the Lynch community.

Each family is requested to bring its own picnic dinner. Members of the sixth grade will supply coffee as their first fundraising effort of the year.

V–O welcomes new principal

Vinson-Owen's new principal, Dick Young, received many warm welcomes from parents, students and faculty members.

When Young was finished greeting students at the front of school, he joined parents and well-wishers in the school's gym where the Parent's Association served coffee and refreshments.

COMMENT

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Everyone deserves a couple of shots

After a large and disrupting turnover at the Vinson-Owen School, stability is at last in sight. Richard Young has taken the helm, and a new principal who appears to possess talent, energy and enthusiasm has been selected to take his place at Muraco School.

Many parents and teachers have expressed a natural caution and conservatism at the prospect of change in the system, sometimes with more acrimony than the situation warranted. Now that the decision has been made, they should give the new broom at Muraco a chance.

Andrea Purcell came out of the selection process with the backing of the entire School Committee and Superintendent Charles Mitsakos. She will need more of that kind of support to establish her position.

Everything must change, and Richard Young could not remain the principal at Vinson-Owen forever. That would be good for neither him nor the school. People get comfortable with old habits. They do not recognize that in the daily routine lies a certain lifelessness, a lack of growth.

Growth does not come without pain. Adolescence itself is a time of tremendous growth, and anyone who has passed that way remembers not the comfort and tranquility, but the turbulence and upheaval. Those experiencing the difficulties of that phase of life may not be aware of how many good things are happening to them.

Amidst the chaos of pimples and the embarrassment of first kisses, young adults are forming. Judgment is becoming sounder, reasoning more acute, muscles stronger, decisions more responsible and concentration more durable.

Change should be viewed with excitement and pleasure, not trepidation. True, the course must be navigated with care, but opportunities for enrichment abound in the shifting environment.

But there are more reasons why the community should allow Purcell a period of time to show what she can do. A honeymoon is traditional. Presidents are always granted them by Congress, even if the elected chief is a member of the opposite party. There is always a possiblility that the chemistry will work well between the branches of government, and the legislators do not want to spoil the fun if cooperation turns out to be mutually benificial.

Purcell deserves a honeymoon just because common courtesy demands that she receive one.

In addition, some attention must be paid to the effect on the children. Young ones always suffer when there is fighting in the family. Strife is distraction. Their ability to sit for long hours and concentrate is impaired if they perceive disunity among the authorities. When parents and teachers undermine the principal, they create a conflict in the children, a discomfort that interferes with the smoothness of their learning process.

The community also has some concrete reasons to have a little patience with the new Muraco chief. Besides having the endorsement of those responsible for the overall well-being of the school, Purcell brings a solid background to the job.

On the one hand, she has a wealth of classroom experience, 17 years in the Needham school system. There is no substitute for this kind of hands-on knowledge. It is very easy to talk about educational ideals and the needs of children in the abstract, but only one who has witnessed a great herd of kids pass through the classroom can speak with authority on the real requirements of flesh and blood youngsters.

Alongside this concrete experience, Purcell carries an MBA in her portfolio. MBAs are not as popular these days as they once were. Corporate management, which employs the largest percentage of business graduates, complains they have no depth, their abstractions are not relevant to the particular business in which the company is engaged.

But Purcell has the right combination, the one-two punch. Her direct knowledge of the field of education combined with her ability to model problems and generate conceptual solutions is a powerful tool to be used in the community's service. The MBA with experience still carries a golden glow.

In addition, she has received distinction in the field. The award of a Horace Mann grant places her above the run-of-the-mill. Many people teach for their entire careers without taking the initiative to apply for a grant, and many who do, lack the credentials to win one. That alone should signal the community that Purcell is no slouch.

Her preparation for the job is rounded out by a master's in guidance and counseling, skills that fall neatly between the close-in ones of the classroom and the long view of administration.

Then there is what Purcell herself has said. She recognizes that Young established many good programs during his tenure and she is in no hurry to dismantle his apparatus. She has pledged to listen and learn before making substantive changes. This should be reassuring to the community. The smartest administrators observe their institutions until they understand what they are seeing. Only then do they begin tweaking the knobs and dials.

Purcell has pledged her good will and talents to the job of educating Winchester's young. It behooves everyone to give her a chance to show what she can do.

Polish does not make the woman

By TERRY MAROTTA

Last week an interesting exchange took place in the dressing room of a local clothes supermarket to which, in lemming-like seasonal migration, scads of parents had dragged their recalcitrant, perspiring, lint-covered offspring in preparation for that harmonic convergence of Time and Fortune known as Back to School.

I was one of them. I stood in one of the little curtained cubicles, urging the daughters of my own body into various tops and pullovers, negotiating them gently over hairstyles with enough tails and wings and feathers to outfit Pegasus himself, while keeping the curtain shut if you don't mind, Mother, and tell her please to stop staring at me, and couldn't you stand out*side* the dressing room just as well?

The baby of the family was himself outside the dressing room. A winning lad of three, he lay on the floor of the long curtained aisle, all blond curls and dimples, humming a little tune and tugging at the crotch of his sunsuit.

Just then another boy, maybe a year older than he, more or less waded through the curtain of his mother's cubicle and hove into view.

"I can open heavy doors," he told my toddler.

"Uh uh," came the response.

"I can too! And I can knock you down..."

"Uh uh!" said my gently-reared baby.

"Yes! And I can push you through the floor!"

Just then this child's mother poked her head through the curtains.

"Don't talk to the little boy that way," said she.

The older child looked shocked. "That's a girl," he said in an injured tone. "Look, it's wearing nail polish."

Now it was my turn to poke my head through.

"Actually, he is a boy; he's just a boy who likes nail polish. His big sisters use it, and he thinks it looks nice...." I trailed off, dreading what cruelties awaited us now.

Just then Mr. Revlon himself spoke up.

"I'll punch your face," he told the older child.

To which replied the erstwhile antagonist after a thoughtful pause, "My name is David."

"That's my daddy's name," said mine. Then, with an almost dismissive toss of the head. "Her husband."

Can you open heavy doors?" wondered the yound David.

"Sure."

They both smiled. They were smiling still as they trudged, the pair of them, behind carts brimming with outfits, in the general direction of the cash registers.

But the conversation lingers in my memory. How quick that child was to bully a fellow human when he thought he addressed a female; how quick to forge an alliance when he saw he addressed a male.

Some say the institution of marriage is in trouble because of external pressures: the thinning of the ozone layer, the rise of sitcoms, the general prevalence of Hamburger Helper in our lives. I say it's imperiled because males and females are so different as to be just barely able to wave wanly across an all-but-unbreachable distance.

I had a male obstetrician once who never looked me in the eye, spoke to me with the tiniest measure of warmth, or called me by name once in nine long intimate months of prenatal care. When my husband showed up on D-Day, though, and the moment had come to go to the Delivery Room, the good doctor beamed, punched him in the shoulder and said, "Wanna come in and heckle? Har Har." I've never forgotten that, and I changed doctors while the ink was still wet on the birth certificate.

But some things are harder to change. The fight against ancient sexisms is well begun, I guess; but there's work to be done yet. What will we do about the primitive clannish manner of the male animal? Apply more nail polish, maybe. Beyond that, I throw up my hands.

League decries Senate filibuster

TO THE EDITOR:

Until last Friday, the majority of the United States Senate had been prevented from exercising its will in the face of Reagan administration efforts to abandon U.S.-Soviet arms control legislation.

For the past decade U.S. national security policy has been guided by agreements with the Soviet Union. Since mid-May the Senate minority leadership has been filibustering to prevent debate and votes on arms control amendments that would reconfirm and return us to the limits we have previously negotiated and accepted.

The Reagan administration's policy has been to negotiate with the Soviets to limit intermediate range weapons in Europe while simultaneously unilaterally breaking with past agreements that limit intercontinental nuclear weapons and missle defenses.

In addition they appear to be favoring a build-up in stategic weaponry. This is a major shift in U.S. policy and is occuring without debate by our elected officials in the Senate. This attempt to block Senate action on proposed arms control legislation was simply irresponsible and smacks of an administration accustomed to assuming powers unto itself and not allowing congressional debate on foreign policy issues.

Arms control is too critical to our national security interests to be held hostage to partisan games and potential political trade-offs on special-interest issues. This fall, senators must face up to their responsibility to openly debate and vote on the future of U.S. arms control policy.

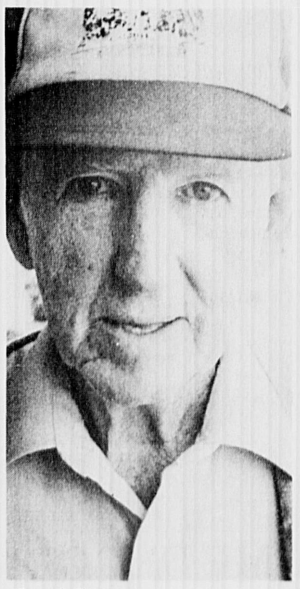
MAN IN THE STREET

Do you think that students' achievements in the arts and humanities deserve as much recognition as those in sports?



Joseph Kane
"Absolutely. I come from a sports family, too. A sound mind, a sound body..."

Jim Ulwick
"I'd rephrase. Give more recognition to arts and general education. Sports have a place, but we need to upgrade the emphasis on arts and humanities. Science and math are also important."

Dorothy Tarani
"Oh, yes. Definitely. I think education is first, then sports. There should be equal weight given if both are to be recognized."

Cynthia Brennan
"Yes. At least as much. Actually, the emphasis should be on arts and humanities. If not at least equal time. Everyone should have equal opportunity for recognition."

Vernaglia makes Eagle Scout

Lawrence W. Vernaglia, son of Dr. and Mrs. Paul A. Vernaglia, recently became the recipient of the Eagle Scout Award at a ceremony held at the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church. The Eagle Award is the highest award presented to a Scout by the Boy Scouts of America.

The Eagle Court of Honor of Troop 507 began with the presentation of the colors by Scouts Jonathan Rotolo and Brian Vernaglia. The invocation was given by Rev. James Savage of St. Eulalia's Church. Gem Wise AGS

Jewelry Fashions, Facts, Fiction

By David Swanson

AGS

Member American Gem Society

Welcome to Gem Wise. In this column I will bring you some unique and interesting aspects about our wonderful world of gems. I will also cover points that are helpful to anyone considering buying fine jewelry such as information about wear and care of particular gems, new jewelry fashion trends and historical lore about well known gemstones.

For example, can you guess the answer to the following questions? Its easy - the answer to each one is the same.

1. What gemstone was used as a flint stone by villagers in the Zanzkar mountains of Kashmir (India)?

2. What gemstone is found in a range of colors, including yellow, reddish-orange, brown, pink, violetish-blue, blusih-green, and blue, but never red?

3. What gemstone was believed by ancient Persians to hold up the earth and to impart color to the sky?

4. What gemstone was given y an English prince to his beloved for their engagement?

If you gussed sapphire, the birthstone for the month of September, you are correct. Sapphire is a time-honored and beautiful gem. The fact, and its durability, made it a wonderful choice for Prince Charles to give to lade Diana Spencer when they were engaged.

While blue is generally the color that sapphire calls to the mind, it is available in many other colors. Why are there no red sapphires? It is a matter of definition. "Ruby" is the name given to the red colored gemstone which possesses the optical and physical properties of a sapphire.

In buying fine jewelry, one of the most important things to know is your jeweler. His knowledge and business ethics should be above reproach. Through Gen Wise I hope you will come to know me and our firm a little better.

Beyond War opens media campaign

The Winchester chapter of Beyond War is participating in an effort to raise money for the organization's media campaign.

Volunteers are needed to assist in the first annual Beyond War Phone-a-Thon in Wakefield during the week of Sept. 21. "We are aiming to raise $3,000 by calling 250 homes for pledges to support the Beyond War Media Campaign," says Jeanette Baird of Park Avenue. "We need 20 volunteers willing to assist."

"War Doesn't Work Anymore" is the slogan of the radio and newspaper ad campaign, which is geared to the nation's decision making process in the upcoming Presidential primary season.

The campaigners are the Beyond War Movement, a grassroots educational movement of people throughout the country who believe that in the nuclear age we can no longer continue to war and survive.

According to Baird, the Beyond War Media Campaign "will intensify in the fall prior to the New Hampshire primary. The media campaign is part of an overall educational outreach to stimulate public debate and to encourage voters to talk with the candidates."

"The campaign is being financed through individual contributions from people throughout the country," says Beyond War worker Ganson Taggart. "We in Winchester have a real opportunity to get involved in this exciting project by participating in the Phone-a-Thon."

For more information about volunteering or making a pledge, call Nancy Ledoux at 665-6699.

Chamber to hold flea market and crafts sale

The Winchester Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a fall sale and craft fair Saturday, Sept. 26, in the Town Hall parking lot from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Space is still available and anyone is invited to participate in this community event.

Rather than planning a garage sale, residents are asked to join the fair and take advantage of the opportunity to sell saved "treasures" in a central location in downtown Winchester.

Call the chamber office to make reservations. (729-8870)

Hartranft to teach yoga classes

Chip Hartranft, experienced Yoga teacher and physical therapist, will start yoga classes Monday, Sept. 28, at 6:30 p.m. at the Symmes Room in the Unitarian Church.

Both beginners and those with some experience are welcome to join the group in this new 12-week development series. Fee for the course is on a sliding scale. Participants are asked to wear stretchable clothing and bring a floor mat or blanket.

For more information, phone Daniel Hritzay 729-0858.

Drama workshop opens Sept. 23

The Winchester Drama Workshop opens a 10-week fall series Wednesday, Sept. 23, from 3:15 to 5:15 p.m. in the social studies area of the High School. Boys and girls in grades 4 through 6 may register at the Recreation Department and third graders will be welcome if space is available.

The workshop studies inner acting, which begins with yoga exercises and relaxation. Then focusing on each of the five senses increases awareness and mime and movement call forth body language.

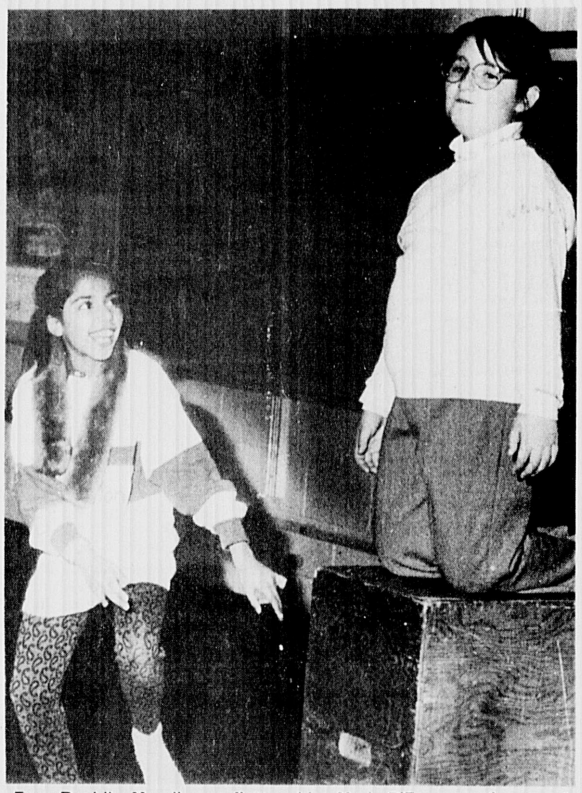
Interacting is facilitated by theater games, which elicit spontaneity so that creative improvisation comes easily, bringing life experience into artistic form. The resulting original scenes are presented in an open demonstration culminating the series.

After leading such after school workshops in Winchester since 1972, Paulett Taggart works now as a drama specialist in Watertown elementary classrooms. Material from the core curriculum is presented with techniques to stimulate right-brain intuition to effect a balance with traditional left-brain cognitive learning. This work coincides with a worldwide trend toward whole brain education.

Arup De and Christine Manzo of Winchester High School will continue in their roles of junior assistant leaders.

Thanks to financial assistance from EnKa Society the Drama Workshop fee is minimal. Registration opens Sept. 19 at the Recreation Office, 721-7125, located in McCall Junior High School.

Further information is available from Paulett Taggart, Winchester Drama Workshop, 17 Ridgefield Road, 729-6669.



Foxy Ruchika Mandhayan flatters Lisa Marie DiFonzo as the crow trying to hold on to her cheese. Aesop's fables will be part of the Winchester Drama Workshop's fall series.

State seeks to return unclaimed funds

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane announced Sept. 9 that his office is attempting to return more than $3 million to 10,000 Massachusetts residents under the state's unclaimed money law.

Crane noted that this money has been reported to the treasury as unclaimed by insurance companies doing business within the Commonwealth. Included are unpaid life insurance benefits, unpaid benefits on health and liability insurance policies, pension checks and customer overpayments.

Under Massachusetts' unclaimed Money Law (M.G.L. c. 200A), accounts which have been unclaimed for at least five years are declared abandoned and must be reported to the treasury. The treasury department then tries to locate the rightful owner or legal heirs.

"A majority of these accounts represent the cash value of life insurance policies which many owners do not realize they are entitled to claim," Crane said. "My office is making every reasonable effort to locate the owners or legal heirs to return these funds to those who are due them."

More than 4,000 accounts range between $100-$500; more than 1,000 accounts between $500-$1,000; 688 accounts between $1,000-$5,000; 25 remaining accounts are less than $100. Last spring Crane released the names of 24,000 Massachusetts residents who were owed more than $17 million, most of this resulting from unclaimed savings accounts.

Persons who believe they may have a valid claim should call the Treasurer's Office at 426-0060 or Toll Free 1-800-632-8027.

Autumn Splendor

Floating down from the treetops
You cloak the earth with a mantle of autumn splendor,
Crimson, emerald, and gold,
All transitional evidence of the artistry of God.
From the master creator of beauty
You give the world credence
To the constant cycle
Of death and rebirth,
In the spring you'll rise again
As our Creator
Fresh and constant as life itself.
You do denote the coming of winter
But in your splendid death
There is unsurpassed glory and hope
Born of the radiant palette
Of the Almighty.
Surely you teach us
The repeating parable of the seasons,
"And to each season turn, turn, turn."
Autumn provides time to give thanks
And a time to take stock
Of our successes and failures
You remind us that each spring
We are given a new chance
To begin again,
To renew old acquaintances
And to forgive and love once more.

HEALTH

Blood pressure screening held Sept. 19

The American Red Cross is holding a Blood Pressure Screening Clinic at its Winchester office at 39 Church St. Saturday, Sept. 19 from 10 a.m. until noon.

Hypertension, high blood pressure, often has no symptoms and can lead to such serious conditions as heart attacks, strokes and kidney disease. Screening can detect hypertension. No appointment is necessary.

For further information, call the Red Cross at 665-1351.

Visiting Nurses to hold telethon

Health care for people in need will receive a lift from the first annual Telethon for the Free Care Fund of Visiting Nurse and Community Health, Inc., to be held during the week of Sept. 28. Winchester residents will be called for pledges daily from 6 to 9 p.m.

The Visiting Nurses seek support at a time when more and more people depend on the Free Care Fund when their Medicare and other insurances run out. Younger people sometimes are caught with inadequate or, at times, no health insurance.

Winchester Telethon patrons include Congressman Edward Markey, Reverend Francis McGann, Dr. Alan D. Edelstein, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Broadhurst, Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh Jr., Attorney Robert S. Frank Jr., and Judith P. Muggia, chairman of the Board of Selectmen. Chairperson of the Telethon is Marta Frank.

All Winchester residents are invited to support this Free Care fundraiser. The visiting nurses have served the home health care needs of the town for more than 80 years. Now included in the merged agency's service area are neighboring Lexington, Arlington, and Burlington.

The goal for the Free Care Fund Telethon is $10,000. $2,000 has already been pledged, including $750 from McCord Winn Company of Winchester.

The Sept. 28 Telethon concludes the agency's first fund raising campaign which began last November.

Weight away course resumes

Winchester Hospital's Education Department will resume its "Weight Away" program Oct. 1.

This course meets six consecutive Thursdays from 6 to 7 p.m. in the Nutritional Research Center at Winchester Hospital. Sue Powers, R.N., community health educator, and Pamela Cote, R.D., dietitian, will lead the course and speakers will be members of the Winchester Hospital staff. Each week participants weigh in, view films, discuss their diaries, share menus and recipes, and set up individual and group exercise programs.

Interested individuals should contact the Winchester Hospital Education Department to reserve a place in the course group. Before the first course meeting, each participant is asked to make an appointment for individualized nutrition counseling with one of the hospital's registered dieticians. Participants are encouraged to bring copies of any diets they currently follow to that consultation for discussion.

Fees for the course are $8 for a 15-minute consultation with the dietitian and a $25 course fee. When accompanied by a written physician's order for weight reduction, the consultation might be covered by insurance plans.

For more information and registration, contact Sue Powers, 729-9000, Ext. 3010.

Exercise class offered to new and expectant mothers

Registrations are now being accepted for Winchester Hospital's prenatal and post-partum exercise program. The ongoing program is offered by Winchester Hospital Rehabilitation Services Department and Women's Health Services Program. Expectant and new mothers can attend as many sessions as they wish.

Barbara Reed, P.T., director of Rehabilitation Services, encourages participants to get or stay in shape by stretching and strengthening muscles through gentle aerobic activities. Prenatal exercise can begin anytime one's obstetrician gives approval. They usually begin around the end of the third month. Post-partum exercises are advised for at least three months after delivery.

The sessions will be held Monday and Thursday evenings from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the Kingsbury Seminar Room.

Fees are $5 per session, $40 for ten, and $70 for twenty. The one-time registration fee of $10 includes an evaluation by a physical therapist. Participants should bring signed physicians approval.

For information and registration call 729-9000, Ext. 3250, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Parents of kids with asthma to meet

The Winchester Hospital Social Services Department's Parents of Asthmatic Children (PAK) group will hold its first meeting of the 1987 season Thursday, Sept. 17, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Winchester Hospital Board Room.

Elizabeth Kenney, director of the department, will discuss "Family Life with the Asthmatic Child." She will explain ways families can reduce the amount of lint in their homes, techniques for reducing the severity of asthmatic attacks and ways in which exercise and activities can enrich the lives of children with asthma.

This support and education group meets several times during the winter months. The free program is open to the public. For information call 729-9000, Ext. 3106.

Nutrition center conducts free orientation

The Center for Nutritional Research at Winchester Hospital will conduct a free orientation Tuesday, Sept. 22, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Kingsbury Seminar Room at the hospital.

The center has 15 years of experience in the successful treatment of obesity as a disease. Associated with the New England Deaconess Hospital, the center offers patients who are 50 pounds or more overweight the choice of medically supervised individual or group sessions.

Speakers will be Ray Mount, the center's clinical psychologist, and other members of the center staff.

Individuals interested in attending are invited to call the center at 729-9042 for more information.

Service directory goes in the mail

The Winchester Hospital "Directory of Physicians and Hospital Services and Programs" is being mailed to every residence in the hospital's 10-community service area.

The 64-page directory contains background information and practice policies for members of the active medical and dental staff, a list of physicians on the courtesy staff, and a summary description of all the hospital's programs and services.

The directory will be updated in 1989. Any resident who does not receive it is invited to call the Community Relations Department at 729-9000, Ext. 3040.

Hospital accreditation is renewed

Eugene E. Loubier, president of Winchester Hospital, announces that the Massachusetts Medical Society has awarded a two-year reaccreditation to the hospital's Continuing Medical Education Program and cited its chairman, Dr. Alan D. Edelstein, for his enthusiasm and his expertise.

The Medical Society Accreditation Review Committee also commended the competent faculty; support from administration, staff, education committee, and governing boards; and the coordination between Dr. Edelstein and the society's education planners.

All of this underscores that fact that four years of college and of medical school, completion of internship and residency requirements, and, for some physicians, fellowships and advanced studies in a subspecialty are only the beginning. Medical education continues throughout a physician's medical career.

Dr. Edelstein, an internist who specializes in hematology and oncology and the treatment of cancer patients, acknowledged his own commitment to the importance of continuing staff education. "I have felt all along that our medical programs were of superior quality and one way to help assure this is to follow the guidelines established by the medical society."

He explained that the society has established six essential requirements for a Category I program (any education program that meets Massachusetts Medical Society standards by conforming to its guidelines). These include a strong mission statement, needs assessment, objectives, planning and design, evaluation, and program administration.

Education is an important aspect for review by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals and the American College of Surgeons, the latter relative to Winchester Hospital's accredited cancer program.

Does such strong commitment to education qualify Winchester Hospital as a "teaching hospital?" The term usually refers to hospitals affiliated with a medical school and used as a training site for internists and residents. In fact, Winchester Hospital has a surgical residency teaching program affiliated with the Tufts School of Medicine which is an integral part of the Continuing Medical Education Program.

Seeds advance in tourney ....held despite weather

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Despite a full day of rain, the first weekend of the fall tennis tournament progressed on schedule. Excellent matches in both men's and women's events were played Saturday and Sunday.

In the men's singles draw, Joe Tozza and Kevin King carried on the "marathon match" tradition started by Kathy Hurley and Hillary Turkewitz. After three hours on the court, King emerged victorious — only to be told that he had to play again in 20 minutes. Unfortunately, his strength waned and he was beaten by Vandy French in the quarter-finals.

In all events, the top seeded players successfully advanced. Lou Desmarteaux, top seed in both the men's singles and doubles — partnered with Neil Hurley — will have a busy second weekend. He will be trying to defend his singles title from a strong field of challengers.

In the women's singles draw, top seed Diane Intravia will be defending her singles title for the fourth time on Sept. 20. Intravia defeated Abbie Culhane and Nancy Bigelow to advance to the finals of the tourney.

Some familiar faces will appear in the semi-finals of the women's doubles and the mixed doubles. Top seeded Joan Byrne and Mary Golden will attempt to recapture the doubles title against a strong field of opponents. Byrne will also be defending the mixed-doubles title which she currently holds with Bill Wolfe. With hope Wolfe can keep his mind on tennis after the arrival of his new daughter.

In the senior men's singles, Ron Salter will face some tough opponents in an effort to take the trophy home another year. Will Aldrich, Steve Powers and Bob Horne will be doing their best to see that he doesn't.

All events will complete the semi-final round on Saturday, Sept. 19. Finals will be held Sunday.

In the Girls' 15-and-under singles, Leann Intravia took the title with a victory over Carrie Tozza, 6-2, 7-5. The score was 3-2, Intravia in the first set when she broke Tozza's serve to go up 4-2. Intravia cruised through the rest of the first set but Tozza stormed out to a 4-0 lead in the second set. When Tozza broke Intravia's serve to go up 5-2, it appeared there would be a third set. But Intravia stormed back to take the next five games and the match.

Intravia got to the final by ousting Betsy McClellan 6-2, 6-3 but the road for Tozza was more dificult. She hooked up in the semifinal with defending champ Kate Fuller. The match took two days to complete with each player taking a set the first day before Tozza broke the gridlock on the second day and won, 7-5, 6-7 (7-3), 6-4.

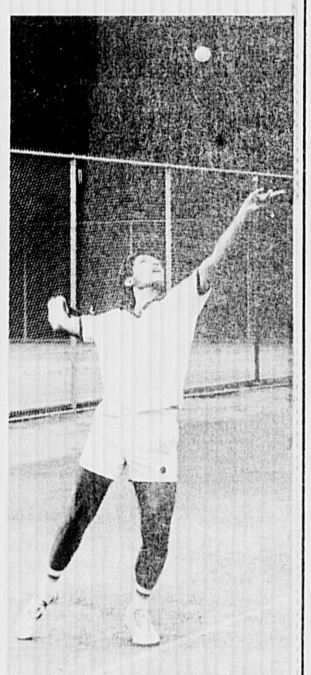
In the Boys' 12-and-under singles, Peter French defeated Peter Fiorentino, 6-0, 6-1. French got to the final by beating Andy Nolan, 6-3, 6-2. Fiorentino disposed of Gregg Miles in identical fashion, 6-3, 6-2.

In the Girls' 12-and-under singles final, Elizabeth Kelley took Renee Bussell in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4. In the semifinals, Kelley had an easy time with seven-year-old Keira Powers, 10-0 but Bussell had it much tougher before overtaking Catherine Doherty 10-4.

Kelly and Bussell teamed together in the 12-and-under girls' doubles final to upend Doherty and Andrea Carroll. All the winners and runner-ups were rewarded with trophies presented by the president of Cambridgeport Savings Bank, which helped sponsor the event.

Some matches were yet to be completed and the results of those finals will appear in next week's edition.

Lou Desmarteaux shows why he was chosen number one seed. He beat Vandy French, 6-1, 6-1 last Sunday morning. (George Ferrar Photo)



Second seed Lance James beat Will Aldrich 6-0, 6-1 Sunday morning. (George Ferrar Photo)

Local resident in Junior Qlympics

By CYNTHIA PREE
Special to the Star

It takes a talented, experienced athlete to qualify for the U.S.A. Junior Olympics. A perfect example of such an athlete is Winchester High's own Ritika Bowry, a gold medal winner in the field hockey competition of the 1987 summer Junior Olympics.

Bowry was one of 60 participants chosen to take part in this event. She was picked from among 1,500 potential candidates playing in the "C" and "D" levels of the U.S.A. Field Hockey Olympic Development Program.

This Olympic Development Program is designed to prepare, train, and encourage athletes to become possible National and Junior National League members in the future. To qualify for this program, athletes must be 18 or younger by Aug. 16.

This year, the Junior Olympics were held at Syracuse University in Syracuse, N.Y. The competition began Aug. 9 and lasted one week.

"The level of play was incredible," Bowry said. "I was nervous at first since all the players were so talented. But once I overcame my nervousness, I had a great time and made many new friends. Being in the Junior Olympics was the best experience of my life."

Bowry's gold medal winning team, the North team, was made up of 15 other players from the East Coast area. The team's assets included not only Bowry but also Hope Sanborn of Walpole, well known for her extraordinary field hockey talent.

In addition to playing in the Junior Olympics, Bowry was named Most Valuable Player of the 1986 varsity field hockey team and competed in the Bay State Games that same year. She is an all-star shortstop in varsity softball while participating in school activities such as the Student Union.

Bowry is not the only member of her family who is a talented field hockey player. Her father, Subhas Bowry, played collegiate field hockey in India.

For many, participation in the Junior Olympics is the first step toward the national leagues. When asked about her hopes for the nationals, Bowry replied, "It would be a dream come true...but I know I still have a long way to go."

Who knows what the future may bring, but for now, Ritika Bowry remains an indispensible part of Winchester field Hockey's starting varsity lineup.

Sachems open defense of Super Bowl title

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester High football team begins defense of its Super Bowl crown this weekend as it hosts Somerville at Knowlton Stadium beginning at 1:30.

The Sachems become the hunted this season and there are many questions yet to be answered. They split a pair of exhibition games earlier this week as coach Manny Marshall tried to find the right pegs to fit in to his starting lineup.

Mike Feeley at quarterback and Scott Garvey at running back should be the key players to watch on offense. Matt Howell, Andy Sexeny, and John Furey also bear watching.

Chris Aronson and Myra Fournier won the 1987 Winchester Swim and Tennis Club Men's and Women's Singles Championships held over the Aug. 29 and Labor Day weekends.

Aronson defeated Steve Powers 7-6, 6-4 to win the men's title. Fournier swept by Joan Byrne 6-0, 6-1, to take the women's championship. Fournier only lost one game in the three matches she played.

Aronson, a former Winchester High School doubles specialist, now playing for the University of Massachusetts, did not lose a set in winning the club title.

In the Men's Semi-Finals Chris Aronson defeated John Gerrein 6-0, 6-1, while Steve Powers outlasted Scott Herlihy 6-7, 6-3. 7-6. This was the best match of the tournament and took 2½ hours to finish.

The tournament was coordinated by outgoing tennis director Alex Popp and will continue to be a fixture on the local tennis scene.

Golfers off to good start

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester High golf team is off to a good start following victories in the first two matches. Last Thursday, they opened the season by defeating Lexington High 8.5 to 3.5 at Winchester Country Club and they followed it up with another home-course victory over Watertown Monday afternoon, 11-1.

Winchester coach Dave Miller is excited about the team's best start in years but he is not quite ready to concede the Middlesex League crown.

"I'm not jumping on any bandwagons just yet,"said Miller. "We still have to face some very tough teams."

Miller thinks the teams to beat this year are Melrose, Woburn and Stoneham.

"The kids in those towns can practice every day on free-access courses, so naturally they are a little better,"said Miller.

The Sachems practice at the Woburn Country Club but they must pay to do so. Therefore, they are not able to practice as often as they would like.

Nevertheless, Miller is extremely happy with team's quick start and credits the mindset of the team for the early success.

"They are really strong in the attitude department."said Miller.

This year's team does not have too many standouts but it does have depth. Eric Emineau is this season's number one golfer and so far he has beaten his Lexington opponent but lost against Watertown. The number two golfer is Dave Snyder who tied against Lexington before winning against Watertown.

Miller feels the depth of the team shows up in the next six golfers. Steve Butacavoli, Jim McInerny, Tom O'Grady, and Andy Maurar all swept both of their matches thus far. Rounding out the lineup are Todd Delvecchio and Dan O'Grady who each lost to Lexington and beat Watertown.

The golf team's next match will take place this Monday as they host Burlington at Winchester CC beginning at 3:30.

The North Shore Model Railroad Club is working on a scaled-down version of a railroad system that runs through northern Virginia and West Virginia. The project is set up at the club's headquarters in Wakefield.

Raskob helps build model railroad

Mike Raskob of West Chardon Road is helping to build a scaled-down version of a railroad system that runs from northern Virginia to West Virginia.

Raskob is a member of the North Shore Model Railroad Club in Wakefield whose specialties include building train cars and scenery design.

The club will hold its eighth annual train show on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 19 and 20, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Americal Civic Center in Wakefield. It will include four operating layouts in three different scales, movies, and more than 80 tables of displays. Donations are $2 for adults, $.75 for children, with a $5 maximum per family.

The Virginian railroad layout can be seen at the club's headquarters on Princess Street in Wakefield. It will be open Saturday and Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission to the display is free.

Barone visits Naval vessel

Dr. William Barone of School Street was recently the guest of Cmdr. Joe A. Goodman of the Frigate U.S.S. Mc Candless FF-1084 which was anchored off Gloucester Harbor.

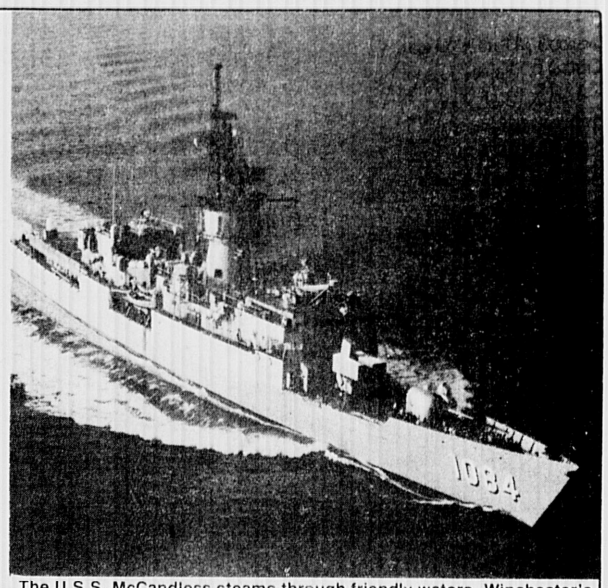
The original invitation was given by Cmdr. William Gaffney, a former resident of Winchester who grew up here and graduated from the Winchester High School in 1967 and the Naval Academy in 1971. He is the son of Doris Gaffney of Church Street and the late Grovner Gaffney.

Gaffney was transferred to the Pentagon in the communications and computer department and is now living in Centerville, VA.

Barone was attached to the U.S. Navy for a short period in May of 1944. He was commanding officer of the 188th Airforce Mobile Hospital in England during maneuvers in the English Channel prior to the invasion of Normandy.

He is a member of the Boston Council of the U.S. Navy League of the United States.

Barone was given a tour and information on the capability of the ship and then a parting gift of a colored picture of the ship and a plaque.



The U.S.S. McCandless steams through friendly waters. Winchester's William Barone visited the ship as the guest of Cmdr. Joe Goodman.

Fitchburg State intern receives training at Jenks Senior Center

By LEONOR RICH
Special to the Star

Fitchburg State College has requested again this season the placement of an undergraduate at the Jenks Senior Center under the supervision of Barbara Ciampa, administrator for the Council on Aging.

Kate Neal Hamilton, whose home is in Bedford, is a senior at Fitchburg State College working toward a bachelor's degree in human services. The college field work internship coordinator states that Kate has completed all requirements toward the degree with the exception of her senior field work experiences.

She has prepared herself effectively with practicum experiences at the department of social services at Fitchburg, the Protestant Youth Center at Baldwinville, the Cedar Street Home in Fitchburg, and Birchwood Manor Nursing Home in Fitchburg.

There will be on site evaluations by the supervising professor and evaluations by Ciampa. The initial experiences of Kate Neal Hamilton and the warmth of her personality indicate that she will give of herself as well as receiving valuable training at the Jenks Senior Center until December 22.

Customers invited to Fall Fair at Jenks

An invitation is extended to people who will be customers at the 11th annual Fall Fiesta Fair at Jenks Senior Center on Oct. 7 and 8.

On Wednesday, oct. 7, doors open at 2 p.m. and selling will be carried on until 9:30 p.m. On Thursday, the doors will open at 10 a.m. and booths will be ready to receive purchasers until 3 p.m.

The services of a remarkable group of volunteers are indicative of the spirit that exists among the many participating seniors at the Jenks Senior Center. Holiday shopping will be made easier by selecting rfrom the many choicc articles that will be on sale.

There is now ample storage space for donations of articles which can be brought to the center at the convenience of the donors. A call to the center (721-7136) will initiate pick-up service, if needed.

Obtain tickets for the Italian dinner from the receptionist at the center desk. This year, Ezio, a caterer from Stoneham, will serve in the new auditorium. All booths will be located in the Meeting Room, the Health Room, and the Lobby.

For nine years, the Knights of Columbus have provided their facilities to give support to seniors in this important dinner activity. With the expansion of the center, it is now possible to keep the entire fair under one roof.

Be daring and positive in investing money in tickets for the Ford Escort Pony. Some lucky person will be the recepient of the new car at 3 p.m. Oct. 8.

A beautiful hand-crocheted, full-sized afghan also awaits an owner on the same day.

Travel club plans trip to Naples, Fla.

Five glorious nights at la Playa Beachfront Hotel, located directly on the Gulf of Mexico with five miles of sandy beaches, await Winchester seniors who enjoy being at the water's edge. Gateway Travel has arranged many interesting excursions including Sanibel Island, the shelling capital of the world along with Marco Island or Everglades City. The trip is scheduled for Nov. 5-10, 1987. Contact Al or Regina Karnilla if interested in joining the travelers. Call the Jenks Senior Center, 721-7136 or 729-4258, the home phone of the Karnillas. Itineraries are available in the lobby of the Jenks Senior Center.

Dr. Hewson Ryan, guest speaker at Jenks

The public is invited to Dr. Ryan's presentation of, "When the Shooting Stops: Central America's Real Problem." Come to the Jenks Senior Center at 10:30 a.m. Sept. 23 to hear what an expert has to say about present day problems south of our border.

Call the Jenks Senior Center to make a reservation to enable the Hospitality Committee to prepare adequately for refreshments. (721-7136).

Phone network needs volunteers

Marion Anderson, social worker, is grateful for the response from people who have volunteered to participate in the telephone support group. More people are now needed who will appreciate a friendly telephone call. Don't be bashful about asking for this service. Call the Jenks Senior Center, 721-7136 and leave a name and telephone number and Marion Anderson will make contacts.

Jenks Senior Center artists at work

The weekly art class at the Jenks Senior Center is a small, non-competitive group of people who enjoy creating pictures using pencil rendering, acrylic, pastels and water colors. They do not aspire to be professionals, but find great satisfaction in using their individual talents.

Since the art program at the center was initiated by Emily Marks as early as 1974 upstairs in the Lincoln School, this cultural activity, creative and expressive, is also social in nature. Following the instruction by Emily Marks, Ardys Cairncross accepted the responsibility at the Jenks Senior Center, keeping an exhibit arranged in the craft room that was always well worth viewing.

Ellen Kimball, now instructor, invites all who have an interest in drawing or painting to join this informal group on the lower level in the new craft room beginning Sept. 15 from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Some supplies are on hand to begin various projects.

Aberjona and Winchester Nursing Center residents assist with mailing

Aberjona and Winchester Nurisng Centers provided the van for eight residents to come to the Jenks Senior Center Aug. 27 to assist with preparations for mailing nearly 3,000 September newsletters.

Their services were greatly appreciated by John Giuliani, organizer for the monthly mailing, along with other seniors who arrive regularly to fold and address the newsletters.

The following residents of the nursing centers were, from Aberjona, Hilda Hope, R.N.; Hortense Knight; Betty Arnold; Ann Hinds; Gertrude Buckley; and Leona Weagle. They were accompanied by Susan Goodwin. Helpers from Winchester Nursing Center were Maria Panarella and Olga Whittaker, accompanied by June Scholfield, activity department.

Service of this nature helps people to feel useful, which is an important ingredient to contentment in life. The assistance speeded up the work of the morning as well as adding pleasant sociability among those who had gathered to get the job done.

Jenks Senior Center health benefits counselors attend conferences

Elder Advocates of Massachusetts is a series of workshop training programs located throughout the state in six different areas for the fall of 1987: Greater Boston in Malden, North Shore in Beverly, South of Boston in Plymouth, Central Massachusetts in Worcester, Northwestern Massachusetts in Lenox, and Western Massachusetts in Ludlow are all sponsored by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Department of Elder Affairs.

The Health Benefits Counselors at Jenks Senior Center will participate again this fall in exploring subjects such as adapting home environments or housing arrangements for the safety of the frail elderly, and advocacy strategies and techniques as they apply to the legislative field. Federal aging programs will be studied, crime assistance will be reviewed, nursing home and rest home regulations will be updated and other subjects of importance will be discussed during the two day workshops.

The Elder Advocates program is recommended strongly by the Health Benefits Counselors at the Jenks Senior Center, all of whom are taking advantage of training programs better to assist Winchester's seniors, who are mystified by the various changes in Medicare.

descriptions of the Contras as "thugs, mercenaries and assassins." She told him that they had prevented peasants from harvesting their crops by sowing the roads with land mines and a continuing a policy of methodical harassment. "All on the advice of the U.S. government," he criticized.

Also speaking in opposition to U.S. policy was State Sen. Richard Kraus. "We're repeating the mistakes we made with Cuba in the '60s. This is an unproductive endeavor," he said.

The Issues and Outreach Committees drafted a letter urging support for the following five point U.S./Central America program;

1. Stop all aid to the Contras
2. Halt the Honduras War Games.
3. End interference in Central America.
4. Reduce motivation for Soviet support.
5. Improve U.S. image in the hemisphere.

Emmons Ellis, co-chairman of the Outreach Committee, denounced the administration policy as an "outrage." He asked that members personalize their letters "with an expression of how terrible we feel that our government is doing this in our name."

Each member mailed letters to the Massachusetts congressional delegation as well as ranking members of the House and Senate who chair foreign affairs committees.

The Winchester Democratic Town Committee will meet again on Monday, Sept. 21, at 7 p.m. in the meeting room of the Winchester Public Library.

Mrs. John Tierney and Mrs. James Hintlian are co-chairmen of the Hospitality Committee.

Wellesley club selects Justice for October show

The Winchester Wellesley College club met Sept. 15 at the home of Betty Jones, club president. Members and guests gathered for wine and hors d'oeuvres to catch up with one another and kick off the sale of tickets for their theatre and luncheon benefit for the college.

Susan Haskell, vice-president of the club, introduced Jennifer Justice, a storyteller for adult audiences. Justice earned a master's degree in theatre directing, but became unhappy with the separation of actors from spectators and sought out the close relationship she finds between performer and audiences in storytelling.

Following the preview recitation by Justice, Wellesley Club members declared her skills as a raconteur a sure-hit addition to their series of diverse events in the performing arts.

Justice will present her tales to Winchester theatre goers at the Wellesley Club's fundraiser at the Parish of the Epiphany, Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 10:30 a.m.

Club members received tickets for the performance at the close of the meeting and will have them available for sale until Oct. 21 or until the seating capacity is reached.

cy situations.

Since the Bronco, which is used to transport the paramedics and the equipment, is called by radio dispatch, the dispatchers have also met with ALS representatives. Winchester is the only town in the nine-town consortium that has a combined police-fire dispatch system and there are special problems to iron out.

Selectmen Francis Sopper requested that Maurer find out the cost of buying a Bronco, the necessary equipment and upgrading some of the town's emergency medical technicians (EMTs) to grade II, a level at which he said they could perform the services the ALS parademics offer.

Maurer said he will be able to give the selectmen all the information about the service and the police and firemen's reaction to it at the Sept. 28 meeting.

Selectmen fight again

During the rest of the meeting, the three remaining members were polite, but distant. Schmitt made a statement later in the meeting regarding Sopper's accusation of being blindsided. "I operate as an individual on this board. I don't like being accused of being part of a conspiracy to try to keep information from you," he told Sopper.

After the meeting, Schmitt said it is fairly rare for him to speak to either Deering or Muggia on a week to week basis and that he certainly was not part of a conspiracy to alienate Sopper and Lombardi.

"Someone is at fault for not notifying at least two selectmen that she was not going to chair the meeting," Sopper said. "It's very bad mannered, very unprofessional."

ty's zoning ordinance, family day care is considered an allowable use," Kraus commented.

"The beauty of this bill is that it clarifies the status of family day care homes while allowing communities to retain control over their zoning. Both providers and local zoning officials, who have often been at odds, were able to support this legislation," Kraus said.

The family day care zoning bill takes effect Sept. 28.

A family day care provider can care for up to six children in his or her own home. Family day care homes must be licensed by the Office for Children.

Keeping fit: an age old concern

News flash from historian Harvey Green's new book, Fit for America: we end-of-the-20th-century folks did not invent aerobics or health foods or weightlifting.

If America's current love affair with fitness looks at times like a hate affair with its bodies, wait until you catch a peek at some 19th century health habits. Being scarified and blistered and bled with lancets and leeches all played a part in America's ongoing search for physical well-being.

The Museum of Our National Heritage, beautifully situated on 22 acres in the middle of Lexington, is featuring an exhibit called Fit for America: Health, Fitness, Sport, and American Society 1830-1940. If the exhibit is half as much fun as Green's book, don't miss it.

While you're there you'll be able to browse through a unique selection of gift and souvenir items that includes a Ronald Reagan paper doll cut-out book. We were too discreet to peek at the First Lady's pre-dressed state in the companion Nancy Reagan doll book, but there was Mr. President in his underwear surrounded by tabbed tuxedoes and cowboy outfits from old movie roles. Only $3.95.

Clockwise, from top: Trade card, c.1890. Bovinine was one of a large number of food concentrates that promised renewed vigor; 20th century silhouette for women; Karen Dzengelewki at Watertown's Powerhouse Gym; Indian clubs were the weights of the 19th century; Debbie Glass rides to keep fit; Cheryl Hazeltine works out on the rowing machine.

Green's book reminds us that health reform began as a widespread movement early in the 19th century. Religionists in the 1820's preached that poor physical conditioning was holding up the Second Coming of Christ. They urged calisthenics, health foods, water cures (external and internal) and electromagnetic treatments to hasten America's readiness for the Millennium.

The cast of characters in Fit for America is wonderfully entertaining, worthy predecessors to Jack LaLanne and Jane ("Make it Burn") Fonda and the current crown prince of macrobiotics, Michio Kushi.

Mr. Kushi, whose doctrine emphasizes the importance of thorough chewing, couldn't hold a candle to Horace Fletcher (1849-1919), known as the Moses of Mastication. Fletcher cured himself of obesity by chewing the daylights out of every mouthful, whereupon he set out to share his discovery with the rest of world.

The ranks of Fletcherism (a term coined by John Kellog, the Corn Flake king) soon included renowned psychologist William James and his brother Henry.

"I fletcherize," wrote Henry James and it has enormously improved my work. You really ought to have a handsome percentage on every volume I sell." It also cured his sinister heartburn and indigestion. John D. Rockefeller climbed on the bandwagon in 1913 with this quote in the New York Evening Mail: "Don't gobble your food. Fletcherize..."

Nor did Horace Fletcher ignore the other end of the digestive process. He had joined a bulging army of other physical culture gurus in the war on constipation. For him, healthy human excretory functions - which depended upon proper diet - were crucial to the maintenance of health.

"I rank it (excretion) as a very enjoyable operation if healthy conditions prevail and it is not accompanied by any rankness of odor ... I would like to be doing it all the time."

If he had indeed done so it would not have interfered with his exercise regimen. He had none. He infuriated fellow physical culturists by performing prodigious feats of strength and endurance without ever practicing them beforehand or engaging in any conditioning program whatsoever. He just chewed. Then he'd show up at a conditioning contest and climb stairs, do hundreds of sit-ups, presses, running in place, dumbbell exercises and weightlifting--more and faster than men half his age.

He outlifted, at the age of 60, 2 young strongmen from New Haven. One lifted 380 pounds; Fletcher lifted 760. The other did 420 pounds; the great masticator lifted 840. He walked 33 miles in 24 hours on his 63rd birthday. He bicycled nearly 200 miles on his 50th birthday with nothing worse to show for the ordeal than sore feet and a sore behind from the chafing of long-continued use.

In his epilogue, Harvey Green states that "The entry of women into executive offices and onto playing fields has spread the gospel of health more than ever before, and health clubs have become centers for those looking for friendship, sex and love." Back here in 1987, we checked out the Hyatt Health Club, first stop in a random sampling of fitness facilities around Boston.

The Hyatt Regency Hotel on Memorial Drive in Cambridge looks as though a distracted child with a large set of blocks might have designed its exterior. The inside, however, is stunning with a building-high atrium, lots of greenery and clear plastic elevators offering an exhilarating ride to the top.

The Hyatt Health Club is situated on top of the adjacent parking garage. The lap pool is enclosed in glass with an adjoining sundeck; there's a weight room with a Universal gym and steamroom, sauna and whirlpool. It's a very light and attractive space in which to swim or work out or just relax.

"Most of our guests are here to relax," says Brian Sarr, who manages the club. "There are some but not many serious exercisers who come here." It, after a year at the Hyatt, one could look as fit and well as Brian does, the $750 annual membership fee would be money well spent.

What To Do

Sarr plays high level tennis and volleyball. His personal preferences for maintaining his fitness are swimming and aerobics. He is now getting a masters degree in physical education at Northeastern and has made a lifetime commitment to managing his own and other people's fitness.

Sarr noted that the high impact training featured in the early stages of the aerobics movement has given way to low impact aerobic work-outs because of overuse injuries, particularly to instructors, in the high-impact version. He commended the Joy of Movement Centers for their exercise offerings.

"The trend now is towards cross-training. As an athlete at whatever level, you want endurance, strength and flexibility. For endurance you do cardiovascular training - running, aerobics or swimming. To increase your body strength you can do some weight training - for tone, not bulk. Most people don't aspire to the huge bulkiness of some weightlifters bodies, although musculature has become more important than thinness, even for women."

Sarr observed that triathloning has joined marathoning as a new direction for fitness buffs. He characterized triathloning as the new yuppie activity, noting that the training demands require a substantial income or lots of spare time.

The Hyatt Health Club is not crowded and Brian Sarr's considerable skills and knowledge are underutilized. If you're in Cambridge and feel like a day in the pool or sunning on the deck, which has a great view of the Boston Skyline, it only costs 9 bucks. If you have children, bring them along. They're apt to abandon you for the glass elevators.

Here's a noteworthy ad from City Sports, a magazine that has just acquired 7 year-old Sportscape Magazine: Dr. Stutman's New Bestseller - Walk, Don't Die - Tells you how to: Keep fit without killing yourself; Feel better without strenuous exercises; Live longer without bypass surgery; Lose weight without dangerous diets. Walk, Don't Die - Shows you how: Jogging kills; Calisthenics cripple; Diets Debilitate; Aerobics disable.

Dr. Stutman obviously felt his first book, Walk Don't Run, understated his case and has upped the ante. He sounds like an erstwhile Fletcherite, offering hope to the unhealthy without the pain of hard-core exercise. We ran into another low-impact exerciser on a local beach. Larry Flannelly is a retired construction superintendent who swims and walks the beach in the summer and lays low in the winter ("Laying low keeps me reasonably fit," he claims).

Flannelly takes a dim view of exercise for its own sake. "Jogging spoils a long walk; I never run unless something horrible is chasing me. You take these runners and rowers and weight-lifters - they all look like they're suffering."

Flannelly cites his cat's fitness policy: "He lies around, sleeps all day; stretches a lot - nothing too strenuous (he doesn't make it burn, from the looks of it). Then when he decides to take after a squirrel, zoom! That's my strategy, too. I figure if I really had to run fast, in an emergency, I'd be able to do it." He started to talk about how cheetahs never run laps when we said good-bye. Had to go check out Vinny Greco's Powerhouse Gym in Watertown.

Vinny Greco and his wife, co-owner/nutritionist Cheryl Greco, offer clients total fitness training, including weight-training, aerobic activity and proper nutrition.

At 25 Vinny was out of shape and headed for the 300 pound mark when he turned to weight training and improved diet to transform himself, with Cheryl's support, into a prize-winning body-builder and teacher.

The Greco gym features top of the line equipment, a sun-deck, nutrition center, juice and protein bar. Mirrored posing room, private and co-ed saunas, a 15,000 square-foot gym floor, sun beds, natural lighting and individually tailored work-out programs.

The Greco's don't hold with Fletcherism or Flannellism. Vinny claims that "the bottom line is that when all is said and done, there is no magic pill or magic exercise. The only secret is hard work."

Vinny's father, Guido, makes it even simpler: "No sweat, no get!"

Say, Guido, have you heard about Horace Fletcher? Claimed to be a no-sweat kind of guy who mainly munched his way into shape. Who knows, he may have had a big closet full of dumbells on the sly. And Michi Kushi, who says eating simply or simply eating leads the way to health -- he pumps no iron unless you count an occasional raisin in the oatmeal.

It takes all kinds to make a fitness movement. In comic books

Robert Joy plays the title role of the Nerd.

The Nerd needs help

THE NERD, a two act comedy by Larry Shue; directed by Charles Nelson Reilly; set by John Lee Beatty; costumes by Deborah Shaw; lighting by Dennis Parichy. At the Helen Hayes Thatre, West 44th St., NYC, with Mark Hamill, Debra Engle, Peter Riegert, Wayne Tippit, Peggy Cosgrave, Timmy Geissler and Robert Joy.

If you identify with the post-pubescent antics of Pee Wee Herman, you will probably enjoy The Nerd, at Broadway's Helen Hayes Theatre. Charles Nelson Reilly has directed this vehicle at a manical pace undoubtedly to compensate for playwright Larry Shue's frivolous, lightweight plot.

Shue's best known work, The Foreigner, had a record-breaking run of 700 performances in New York, moved on to international acclaim, and is currently one of America's most produced plays. In 1985 Shue was killed in a tragic plane accident. The Nerd is an earlier vintage play, having been produced in London in 1984, and it appears that it was resuscitated to capitalize on the popularity of The Foreigner.

The chill of early November cuts the air as we view the comfy, cozy interior of Willum Cubbert's (Mark Hamill's) living room (nice set by John Lee Beatty). It's 1981 and Willum's 34th birthday and his two closest friends, Tansy McGinnis (Debra Engle) and Axel Hammond (Peter Riegert) are just completing last-minute details for a surprise party for Willum. (Tansy couldn't find a 34th birthday card so she got six cards that added up.)

Although Tansy is obviously in love with Willum, she plans to leave the barren plains of Terre Haute for a job as a weather girl in Washington — in hopes that absence will make the heart grow fonder.

Willum, you see, while the nicest person in all of Indiana and the most talented architect in town,

Mardi Gras nightclub opens at Nick's

Men In Motion at Nicks

Due to the changing complexion of the entire theatre district, Nick's, a 30-year-old landmark restaurant located in the heart of the Hub's performance area, is undergoing massive expansion and a shift in entertainment emphasis, noted Sonny Paige, co-owner of Nick's. "Because of the excessive costs in mounting a Broadway show — Boston's theater scene is just not what it was 10 years ago — and because of the upgrading of the entire district area, younger Bostonians are more willing to come into the theatre district and are seeking alternative types of entertainment."

With this in mind, Paige has announced the opening of a new dance nightclub/cabaret theatre/restaurant in mid-September. The new complex will be located downstairs and the successful Comedy Stop, currently open upstairs, will create a self-contained entertainment center.

The nightclub, Mardi Gras, boasts a festival atmosphere highlighted by a theme of party every night. A state-of-the-art light and sound system, well-known disc jockeys, top 40 music, and a large new dance floor will be featured. Celebrity performers will headline occasionally in a stageshow format. The club will be open Tuesday through Saturday beginning at 10 p.m. A dress code policy will be enforced.

Previewing on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 25-26, the Boston production of the long-running all-male musical revue, Men In Motion, launches the cabaret theatre. The musical, tagged by one critic as innocently naughty, is professionally choreographed by Richard Morrill and is directed by Richard Whiting. The show was featured recently on Donahue and some 250,000 women have seen the revue since its opening two years ago.

The Hub production features a multi-level stage highlighted by trapezes, motorbikes, and smoke machines.

Professional male dancers with intensive dance training experience, perform original high-energy production numbers ranging from The Leader of the Pack to Mr. Stockbroker to Lifeguard. Men In Motion will perform Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m.

Nick's Comedy Stop, open Wednesday through Sunday nights, showcases well-known local stand-up comics, as well as name headliners like Steve Allen, Jay Leno, and Professor Irwin Corey.

Giselle opens Boston Ballet season

Giselle, the most celebrated ballet of the Romantic Era, will open Boston Ballet's season, Oct. 1-11 at The Wang Center for the Performing Arts, 270 Tremont St., Boston.

Boston Ballet presents the full-length classic as it is still performed and taught at the Kirov Ballet. Ballet Mistress Anna-Marie Holmes, the first North American to perform the role of Giselle with the Kirov, will set the work on the Boston Ballet.

She will adapt Leonid Lavrovsky's landmark production, mounted originally by the Bolshoi Ballet in 1944. This version of the ballet is characterized by a deeply motivated, realistic type of drama.

This poignant tale of a frail peasant girl who is happily betrothed and then cruelly betrayed is set to the music of Adolphe Adam. Unrequited love drives Giselle to madness and ultimately to her death.

At her grave, her haunted lover seeks her forgiveness and nearly loses his own life dancing for all eternity. The title role of Giselle is known to be the most profound challenge to a ballerina with its portrayal of passion, magic and madness.

Giselle was first presented at the Theatre de l'Academie Royale de Musique in Paris on June 28, 1841, with Carlotta Grisi as Giselle and Lucien Petipa as Albrecht.

The original choreography was by Jules Perrot and Jean Coralli. French poet Theophile Gautier and his collaborator Vernoy de Saint-Georges based their scenario on The Wilis by Heinrich Heine.

The ballet was first presented in Russia by the Bolshoi Ballet in 1842. Boston had its first performance of Giselle at the Howard Athenaeum in 1846 with Mary Ann Lee and George Washington Smith in the leading roles.

The first Boston Ballet production, in March of 1968, featured guest stars Violette Verdy and Edward Villella.

Anna-Marie Holmes is a ballerina of international stature. Concert and guest appearances have taken her to over 30 countries and five continents. She has taught and lectured on the Vaganova teaching system worldwide.

Holmes and her former husband made history in 1962, when they became the first North Americans to dance with the Leningrad's Kirov Ballet. While in the Soviet Union, Holmes herself danced the title role of Giselle in alternation with world renowned ballerina Natasha Makarova.

Holmes is recognized internationally for her interpretations of the great Russian classics, and has produced or set these works in London, Lisbon, Rome, Montreal and New York. She joined the Boston Ballet as Ballet Mistress in 1985.

Internationally acclaimed dancer Fernando Bujones will make his debut as principal guest artist in the role of Albrecht in Giselle. Formally a principal dancer with American Ballet Theatre, Mr. Bujones has appeared as a guest artist with ballet companies throughout the world.

Ticket prices for Giselle are $32.50, 26.50, 22.50, 18.50 and 42.50 for all performances. All prices include a $.50 Wang Center restoration fee.

Theatre S. to present The Three Women

Theatre S. will present the American premiere of The Three Women, a multi-media epic of lust and the supernatural, opening on Sept. 24 and continuing through Oct. 24 at The Performance Place, 277 Broadway, in Somerville.

Based on Hardy's Return of the Native, Theatre S. will fuse video, film, and original folk music to Hardy's powerful tale of fate on the barren 19th century heath. The Three Women is the first year of a four-year epic by Theatre S. from Native.

In The Three Women, Hardy's desolate landscape that exhables loneliness becomes the American midwest, with the entire audience seated around a huge table measuring 30 feet by 50 feet.

Eustacia Vye, an early feminist heroine, is the focus of the play. She lures Damon Wildeve away from his fiancee, Thomasin Yeobright, on their wedding day. This triangle of fate is complicated by the haunting presence of a man clothed completely in red. A rejected lover from Thomasin's past, the Man in Red plays matchmaker with disastrous results.

Theatre S. digs down through Hardy's layers of singular images and passionately-torn characters, treating the pages of the book itself as a bleak landscape. Founded in Iowa in 1982, the presentation represents a tribute to the power of the American landscape.

Performing in Boston and New York since 1984, Theatre S. debuts their first permanent acting company with The Three Women, their first mounting of the season.

Theatre S. is the resident company of The Performance Place. Other plays scheduled for the season include six American premieres, with works based on Rilke, Poe, the life story of J. Robert Oppenheimer, and the play festival Trans/Actions: three avant-garde French dramas of the 80s.

Theatre S. is a collaborative of visual and performing artists who create Total Theatre, a spectacle that fuses media, text and narrative into a new theatrical experience. They have shown work at The Los Angeles Institute of Contemporary Art, CAGE in Cincinnati, and in New York at The Kitchen and the Soho-Mercer Center for the Arts.

The Three Women will be performed Thursdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m., with a late show Saturdays at 10 p.m. Tickets are $10 for general admission and $6.50 for students. For information and reservations call 623-5510. Tickets are also available at Bostix, Out of Town Tickets, Ticketron, and at the Somerville Theatre.

Big River in Boston

Big River will play a three-week engagement at Boston's Colonial Theatre running Nov. 17 through Dec. 6. A preview performance will take place on Nov. 17 at 8 p.m. Curtain for Nov. 18 is 7 p.m.

In Big River: The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, Roger Miller songs bring Mark Twain's classic to life onstage. Author William Hauptman captures Twain's joyous tone and sense of irony in this award-winning stage adaptation.

Huck Finn is played by Romain Fruge, who recently made his Broadway debut playing Huck Finn in the New York company of Big River and is a recipient of the 1985 Helen Hayes Award.

Michael Edward-Stevens, who performed in Houston Grand Opera's Porgy and Bess, plays Jim, the runaway slave.

Barry Lee plays Tom Sawyer, Walker Joyce plays the King, Michael Calkins plays The Duke, and Carolee Carmello plays Mary Jane Wilkes.

Heidi Landesman, who received two 1985 Tony Awards as Set Designer and Co-Producer of Big River, has recreated her evocative scenes for the Mississippi River Valley in the 1840's.

Also recreating their original Broadway designs are Patricia McGourty (costumes), Richard Ridell (Tony Award-winning lighting) and Otts Munderloh (sound).

Director Michael Grief was assistant director of the American Repertory Theatre, LaJolla Playhouse, and Broadway productions of Big River. Choreography is by Janet Watson, and B.H. Barry has created the stage movements and fights.

Roger Miller, best known for his popular hits such as King of the Road, has composed a score which travels easily among all forms of American music, including folk, gospel, jazz, blues, rock and show tunes.

Musical supervision is by Danny Troob, and musical direction is by Michael Rafter. John Richard Lewis has created dance and incidental music. The original cast album of Big River is available on MCA.

The Big River had its original workshop production at the American Repertory Theatre. The Colonial Theatre engagement marks the first time that Boston audiences have seen the Broadway production.

Big River will preview on Tuesday, Nov. 17 at 8 p.m. After opening on Wednesday, Nov. 18 at 7 p.m., Big River will run Tuesday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., with matinees on Thursdays and Saturdays at 2 p.m. and Sundays at 3 p.m., with the exception of Thanksgiving week.

What To Do

The good life is possible

New Alchemy's harvest festival shows how

The New Alchemy Institute on Cape Cod welcomes the public to its annual Harvest Festival on Saturday, September 19 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Sharing the Good Life is the theme which will bring people together to celebrate the Harvest. The day will be a cornucopia of ideas, entertainment, good food and activities.

Helen Nearing will give the keynote speech, Wise Words on The Good Life. Nearing has written numerous books with her husband Scott, which chronicle their years of homesteading in Vermont and Maine.

Each year many people visit her at her home in Harborside, Maine. Her good sense and continuing idealism, mixed with a balanced, simple, satisfying way of life, has drawn the interest and respect of people throughout the world.

Her self sustaining life has not been insular, but a testament to community awareness. It has been dedicated as much to peace in humankind as to personal peace of mind.

Guided tours of the New Alchemy Institute's 12-acre farm in the Hatchville section of Falmouth will include a visit to its super-insulated auditorium, three different designs of solar greenhouses, herb gardens and visitors center.

Visitors are invited to take a picnic or purchase regional home cooked food, enjoy workshops, jugglers, camaraderie and a concert by vocalist/guitarist Jim Scott.

Composer and guitarist with the Paul Winter Consort from 1977 until recently, Scott has also recorded with flutist Paul Horn and accompanied Holly Near on tour in Central America. In concert, Scott mixes instrumental compositions and improvisations with songs that range from humorous and romantic to powerfully moving commentary on the state of the earth.

Workshops at the festival will include discussion of: Successes in Affordable Housing, Herb Culture, Environmentally Safe Household Products, Edible Landscaping, Educating Toward Non-Dominance, Regional Recycling and Waste Reduction, and Landscaping for Winter Gardens.

There will be childrens' activities in the morning and entertainment by the juggling troupe, the Suspenders, in the afternoon.

The New Alchemy Harvest Festival, Sharing the Good Life, will begin with a welcome by the executive director, John Quinney. Admission is $5. Children under twelve are free.

The Institute is at 237 Hatchville Rd., East Falmouth. Call 564-6301.

Big River opens at the Colonial Theatre on Nov. 17.

What's On The Boards

Rick the Nerd's a nut

is oblivious to his own feelings towards Tansy. He's so caught up in his work and so laid-back that a loving, emotional involvement or commitment never enters his mind. Axel is a somewhat cynical theatre critic, and into marketing, a villain and a bit pretentious (and with the play's best lines).

Willum finally arrives and after the customary Surprise! and a bevy of taped telephone messages, we learn that also invited to join in celebration are Warnock (Ticky) Waldgrave (Wayne Tippit), who has commissioned Willum to design his new hotel, and his wife Clelia (Peggy Cosgrove).

However, of more import is a message from one Rick Steadman (Robert Joy) — The Nerd — who is on his way but confused as to the dress code; is it a Halloween party or a birthday party?

It seems that when Willum was in 'Nam, serving as a draftsman, he was shot and left for dead, but a wounded Rick rescued him and both men ended up with the Purple Heart. Although they've never consciously met, they have remained in touch and Willum has repeatedly expressed his undying appreciation with the vow that, so long as he lives, Rick will always have a roof over his head in his home.

Ticky and Clelia finally arrive. Ticky is amiable, prosperous, and the owner of eight hotels. Clelia is plain, works with slow learners, and often forgets to speed up her speech pattern when addressing those without disability. She also carries a hammer in her oversized handbag, used to smash dishes to release her anxieties. And the couple has dragged along their incorrigible, fat little son Thor (Timmy Geissler).

Rick makes his entrance in a prehistoric monster outfit, frightening the heebie-jeebies out of the bratty, spoiled-rotten Thor and, amidst the guzzling of Jack Daniels and Dom Perignon, Rick reveals that he works as an inspector in a chalk factory in Wisconsin...the same job he held before he entered the service and which they were obliged to give him back.

About a year ago he'd moved in with his out-of-work brother Bob. Now, Bob, obviously on the verge of insanity due to Rick's presence, has bankrolled him with money and endless credit cards, and urged him to go and travel and enjoy himself, anything to get rid of him! So, voila! Here he is!

The group indulge in juvenile party games — which prove disastrous — and it doesn't take long for one and all to realize that Rick is a nut, a meshuganah, an unintentional menace. When he pulls out his tambourine and commences to practice, it's sheer agony...a fretted page out of You Can't Take It With You.

Rick's presence is so overbearing and obnoxious and imbecilic, living with him (and watching him) is total torture and within six days he is ruining the life and career of harried Willum. And while Willum professes to owe Rick too much to throw him out, he and Axel realize that an infallible plan must be devised to divest themselves of his sickening presence...all the more urgent when Rick starts hinting at Christmas presents!

While Reilly's direction does display ingenuity and some nice flourishes, in the main the lunatic pacing batters you like a sledge hammer and the character of Rick is so highly-charged as to be more crazed than eccentric. Some will undoubtedly find The Nerd their cup of tea; others, a bitter pill to swallow.

Road opens in Gloucester

Performances are Wednesdays through Sundays at 267 East Main St., immediately before the entrance to Rocky Neck in Gloucester, MA. Tickets are $11 on Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday, and $14.50 on Friday and Saturday.

Curtain is 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. on Saturday, and 5 p.m. on Sunday. For further information and reservations, call 281-4099.

CAR CARE CORNER

By Dan Hogan, Service Manager

Water can find its way into the gas tank of your car in several ways... Water can form as condensation, if the gas tank is nearly empty and the outside temperature become cold... Droplets of moisture then fall into the gas tank and contaminate it...If the car runs well for a period of time, then roughly, then smoothly, then roughly again, you may suspect water in the tank...To solve the problem, add one or more pints of gasoline antifreeze to the gas tank... Chances are that the moisture was created because of a low fuel level in the tank...In the future, keep the tank filled to avoid condensation build-up...

The technicians at PETER FULLER OLDS are ASE certified. We keep a computeried history of all cars serviced here to notify you of preventative maintenance. Open 8-5. Tel. 924-8100. Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit – alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts – is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

Massachusetts takes some getting used to Massachusetts takes a little getting used to.

For one thing, there is the language barrier. Newcomers have to deal with names that sound different from their spellings. Worcester is pronounced 'Wostah' and Gloucester 'Glostah.' Haverhill is 'Hayvrille,' not 'Haver-hill.' Meanwhile, Needham is 'Need'em' and Dedham 'Ded'em' but Wareham is 'Ware-ham.' Inconsistency is the rule.

Massachusetts people may drink soda or tonic, but never pop, and when they want what the rest of the country calls a milkshake, they order a 'frappe.'

And the natives are seemingly unimpressed by historical landmarks that draw other Americans from across a continent. The Concord Bridge, Bunker Hill Monument, Faneuil Hall, Old State House, Old Ironsides and Plymouth Rock inspire awe among visitors. But Massachusetts residents largely take them for granted.

Newcomers would do well to take in those historic sights before they become commonplace.

Another greater Boston phenomenon for which familiarity breeds contempt is Route 128, the golden arch around the metropolis that has become synonymous with high-tech industry.

All it takes is a few commutes along America's High-Tech Highway to take the bloom off the Route 128 rose. A sinuous ribbon of hardtop, it narrows from four to three lanes in some spots, compressing commuter traffic into a dense tangle.

Driving anyplace in Massachusetts is another thing that can take some getting used to. The artile starting on page 31 of the Newcomers' Guide takes a lighthearted look at the Massachusetts driver.

But, like the Charles, Merrimack, Neponset and other rivers that spawned the state's renowned textile trade of a bygone era, Route 128 has served as the main artery of Massachusetts industry in the computer age.

Massachusetts industy, of course, has been on a roll for some time now. And that reflects in a number of aspects of suburban life.

As most newcomers can attest, it has pushed housing prices to dizzying levels. And rents, always pressured upward by the region's huge college populations, have followed suit.

Another consequence of the booming Bay State economy is a job market starving for workers. Unemployment levels in the suburbs are in the one to two percent range. That makes it a job-seekers' market, which is heartening for the newcomer in search of a paycheck.

But there is a negative side, too. Many suburban businesses are so strapped for help that jobs go begging. It shows up in the retail shop where no salesperson appears to help the would-be buyer, the restaurant where the customers have to wait for the lone waitress or the supermarket where the lines at checkout counters seem endless.

Another greater Boston phenomenon that may require some acclimation is the population's attitude toward its professional sports franchises.

Boston loves winners. It loves its Celtics, for the Celtics have won championships in more professional basketball seasons than some teams have had seasons.

The Boston Bruins draw sellout crowds, win or lose, and have the undying affection of most Massachusetts residents whether they know anything about the game or not.

The Red Sox engender a sort of wan loyalty throughout New England. When the Sox came within a single out of winning last year's World Series only to fumble it away, it seemed to reaffirm an affectionate skepticism with which most Boston baseball fans have become comfortable.

There is a local saying, employed to put people in their place when they announce that they are going to accomplish the impossible: "Yeah, you and the Red Sox."

The New England Patriots, whose very name strains the ties of local loyalty, came of age two seasons ago with a near miraculous ascent to the Superbowl only to be pulverized by thte Chicago Bears. Still, the town's professional football franchise draws criticism from its front office to its backfield with every game.

Boston sports fans are unabashed critics of their professional sports teams, win or lose.

For those whose interests lean more toward culture than athletics, our area offers a rich variety of attractions.

The article starting on page 30 of the Newcomers' Giude offers some details on the arts in the area.

New England weather can catch the newcomer unaware, too. Much truth resides in the old addage, "If you don't like the New England weather, just wait a minute."

An article starting on page 31 outlines the way the weather works in Greater Boston.

Other sections of the Guide offer details about the towns of Arlington, Belmont, Watertown and Winchester to help newcomers get acquainted.

Of course, one of the great pleasures of moving into a new community is meeting new friends, and our page 10 article outlines the various groups in the area that make it their business to make newcomers welcome.

The five Century Newspapers — The Arlington Advocate, Belmont Citizen, Belmont Herald, Watertown Sun and Winchester Star — welcome all newcomers to our communities with the hope that this Newcomers' Guide will help them get off to a good start in their new neighborhoods.

Welcome!

Newcomers' clubs welcome the area's new neighbors

By DIANE BRONCACCIO

New residents of Arlington, Belmont, Newton, Winchester and Watertown needn't feel like strangers.

Each town offers help to newcomers that is sure to make them feel at home.

Get neighborly in Arlington by taking advantage of the town's many resources.

The League of Women Voters of Arlington has published an informative pamphlet called This Is Arlington, which offers information about Arlington's history, town government, finance and town meetings. It's available at the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, 7 Central St., Room 204 or from the Robbins Library, 700 Massachusetts Ave.

The Robbins Library also offers information about the community. The library annually publishes a complete list of Arlington clubs and organizations, which is available free.

The town of Belmont is easy to become familiar with quickly.

"We're just a bedroom community," says Ann Cresine Wilson, Belmont town clerk. "We're only four-and-a-half square miles. You could walk to all four corners of Belmont and not even get tired."

For those who want to get to know their community, Wilson recommends joining one of the 15 local churches.

The Belmont recreation department, 484-2310, offers programs for people of all ages.

An afternoon spent at Belmont Public Library, 336 Concord Ave., is a fine way to learn about the town. The town's historical archives are located in the Belmont Room. The library keeps an up-to-date file on all the community organizations, sells the League of Women records.

In addition, the library publishes a community calendar and posts special events presented by local clubs and organizations.

Warm up to Watertown by calling the Welcome Wagon.

Welcome Wagon is national, commercial enterprise active in 45,000 communities in the United States.

New Watertown residents can leave their name and phone number with a local answering service at 426-2424. A Welcome Wagon host or hostess will call within a month, bringing a basket of useful brochures, maps, phone directories and information about area business and services. The visit takes about an hour and is free.

Besides the chance to leisurely learn about the city, newcomers also may get discount coupons or "cards of greeting" for gifts from local merchants when the cards are presented at their stores.

The Watertown Public Library, 132 Main St., has a complete file of community services and organizations in its reference room.

The town of Newton has two Welcome Wagon representatives. New residents should call either Lisa Rosenfeld at 244-9776 or Nancy Goldberg at 969-1720.

Winchester makes new residents feel at home with both a Newcomers Club and a Welcome Wagon service.

The 12-year-old Winchester Newcomers Club offers many activities and chances for new residents to meet others and develop a social life.

Monthly meetings are held September through May in members' homes. These meetings are generally relaxing social evenings which turn out to be anything from wine-tasting parties or cooking demonstrations to Trivial Pursuit matches.

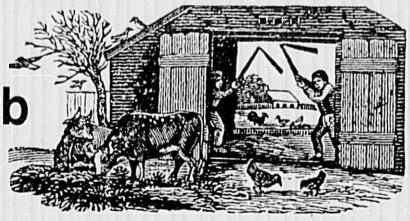
Arlington

Arlington has evolved from small farm town to big suburb



Arlington is a primarily residential community of approximately 45,000 people. Once known as an agricultural center, it has evolved into one of Boston's most densely populated suburbs.

When it was originally settled around 1835, the town was know as Menotomy. It was renamed "Arlington in 1867. During those early years, Arlington was a center for agriculture. In 1846, however, Arlington and Lexington businessmen built a railroad to Cambridge. Horsecar and electric lines followed gradually, and Arlington developed into the residential suburb it is today.

The town encompasses just over five square miles of land. Massachusetts Avenue is the town's transportation lifeline, serving as the main thoroughfare for automobiles and commuter transportation. Just minutes away, Route 2 and Route 128 provide ready access to the Greater Boston area.

The typical home in Arlington is almost 50 years old. More than half of Arlington's 18,000-plus housing units are owner-occupied. Many of those dwelling have long histories; in fact, 52 percent were built before 1940.

The typical Arlington household earns over $40,000 a year, according to updated census statistics from National Planning Data Corp., Ithaca, N.Y. More than a third of the local workforce consists of executives and professionals. People of Irish descent are the dominant ethnic group, representing 36 percent of the population.

Politically, the town is heavily Democratic. Almost 60 percent of the town's voters are registered Democrats. The town uses a town manager form of government in conjunction with a representative town meeting. It is a major portion of the historic 8th Congressional district, from which US Representative Thomas E. "Tip" O'Neill recently retired.

Arlington has more than 1000 business establishments. Retailers are sprinkled along the length of Massachusetts Avenue from Cambridge to Lexington, although the community has no major shopping malls.

Looking to the future, Arlington has little room for household growth. In fact, the town's population peaked around 1970 at over 50,000 and has declined since. With sharply higher housing prices, the trend is toward improvement and replacement of buildings that have fallen into disrepair. The town is well served by elderly housing, and should continue to enjoy a leadership position in that area. Unless housing trends change, Arlington will continue to attract an increasingly affluent, white collar population. The typical Arlington home sold for $189,000 in 1986, according to statistics compiled by Coldwell Banker.

School calendar for 1987-88

School began for the Arlington Public School system on Thursday, Sept. 10, and runs through a tentative summer break date of June 21, if there are no snow days. A total of 185 days are scheduled, with five days allowed for inclement weather. School is required to be in session at least 180 days.

Kindergarten sessions for students begin Sept. 14. Kindergarten session changeover date is Feb. 1.

Beginning with the start of school, grades 1-6 will have classes for a full day, each day. Wednesday is no longer a regular early release day. Periodic early release days through the school year will be announced.

Thanksgiving recess begins at noon Nov. 25 and runs until Monday, Nov. 30. Christmas vacation will begin Dec. 23 and resume Jan. 4. February vacation begins Feb. 12 and runs through Feb. 22. April vacation begins April 15 and runs through April 25.

Parents will be invited to observe class during American Education Week, Nov. 16 through Nov. 20.

School will not be in session on the following holidays: Columbus Day, Oct. 12; Veterans Day, Nov. 11; Martin Luther King Jr. Day, Jan. 18; Good Friday, April 1, and Memorial Day, May 30.

The Arlington School Committee voted the schedule at its June 16 meeting. Questions may be directed to the superintendent's office, 646-1000.

How to get the signal on school closings

When Arlington schools are closed because of snow or other emergencies, announcements are made starting at 6:30 a.m. on WHDH, WEEI and WBZ.

Signals are also sent out through the local fire stations. A 2-2 signal repeated four times at 7 a.m., means no school.

The 2-2 signal sounded at 7:45 a.m., signals no morning sessions for elementary schools, and the 2-2 signal at 11:30 a.m. is for no afternoon session for elementary schools.

Public transportation keeps town on the go

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, more commonly referred to as the MBTA or 'T', operates the public transportation system serving Arlington and the Greater Boston area.

From the five bus routes that run through town, Arlington residents can reach a network of buses, trolleys, subways and commuter trains.

An extension of the subway's Red Line runs to the Alewife station near the intersection of Routes 2 and 16, at the Cambridge-Arlington line. The subway cars run from Alewife station beginning at 5:15 a.m. until the last train pulls usually at 12:40 a.m.

There are MBTA commuter parking lots in Arlington Heights, at the Alewife Brook Red Line station, and in Davis Square Somerville.

For information concerning the bus and subway lines call 722-3200, TTY 722-5146. For information about the MBTA's lift bus service call 1-800-LIFT-BUS.

Voter registration is easy

Massachusetts has one of the easiest voter registration programs in the country.

A person may register to vote if he or she is at least 18 years old by election day and is an American citizen (born or naturalized.)

To register all a person must do is fill out an "Affidavit of Registration" card, listing your name, address, birth date, previous address if any, occupation, and, if desired, party affiliation. There is no residency requirement in Massachusetts.

In Arlington, registration may be done at the clerk's office on the second floor of town hall, weekdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., or look for special registration sessions in the weeks prior to an election.

Physically disabled and absentee voters should write to the town clerk, 730 Massachusetts Ave., Arlington, Mass., 01274.

Arlington Town Clerk Ann Powers displays the town's voter registration book.

Of the nearly 49,000 people in the town, 26,481 residents were registered voters as of June 1, 1987. Democrats accounted for 17,727 of the voters, Republicans 3,228, and the remaining 5,526 were registered as Independants.

Uncle Sam was native son of Arlington

For most people the name Samuel Wilson has no special significnance. Yet his name in its familiar form is known to nearly everyone. As a caricature of a lanky, white-whiskered gentleman in tailored red, white and blue as a symbol of the United States government.

That "Uncle Sam" once existed in three dimensions, contrary to what political cartoons and enlistment posters would have us believe, is a little-known fact. But that Uncle Sam was born in Menotomy (later West Cambridge and finally Arlington) on Sept. 13, 1776, is knowledge even less common.

One story of the birth of the "Uncle Sam" nickname was published on May 12, 1830, in the New York Gazette by and eye witness to the event. He relates that on the occasion just mentioned one of the workmen asked his mates why the casks were branded with the cryptic initials "US" (for the letters "US," used to stand for "United States," were almost entirely new to them). The response he got was that it must stand for Uncle Sam — alluding exclusively, then, to Uncle Sam Wilson.

The recruiting drum later led many of these workmen who were present at the first instance of the connection between Uncle Sam, the initials "US" and the United States Government, into the battlefield to face the enemy and eat the provisions they had so recently put in order. The joke followed them, and before the end of the first campaign, it had appeared in print.

Arlington

Arlington offers a variety of delights for many tastes

By DIANE REZENDES

The original name of Arlington was Menotomy, which means swift-running water." It was named or the brooks and rivers that run through it. Although mostly residential now, the town retains much of its natural beauty.

Spy Pod, named for its role in the revolutionary war, is perhaps the town's most beautiful natural resource.

A spring-fed pond, it was carved out by the great glaciers of the ice age. Some people say that in places it reaches a depth of more than 250 feet. The pond offers good sailing and windsurfing and along the shoreline, peaceful walking and thinking-about-nothing, especially on a cloudy, misty day.

In recent years, one section near Linwood Street has become an informal beach, with increasing numbers of swimmers each summer. It's not recommended to swim there — in fact, it's not allowed in most sections of the pond — not because of water quality, but because of the unusual nature of the pond. In some areas, swimmers can get caught among the weeds and drown; in others, there are strong temperature changes and no measurable depth because of the springs.

In the winter, cross-country skiers and ice skaters take over, but caution is advised here, too. Unless one knows where the underground springs and therefore areas of thin ice are, it can be dangerous or even fatal.

A safer idea is to go to Hills Pond at Menotomy Rocks Park. Surrounded by the hills of the park, skaters are in a picturesque setting encircled by a ring of pine and oak trees.

In the gold and russet of autumn, the walking paths of Menotomy Rocks Park give a graciolus respite from the outside world.

Another lovely park is Robbins Garden on Massachusetts Avenue, in the middle of town. On spring weekends, brides have formal photographs taken here among flowering apple and cherry trees. Also in this park is the statue, Indian Hunter, created by Arlington sculptor Cyrus Dallin. Two of Dallin's other, better-known works include Appeal to the Great Spirit in front of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and the angel Moroni atop the Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City.

The streets offer good jogging for the enthusiast. Whether running two miles or six, one can enjoy flat, tree-lined streets, run along Mystic River near the Medford line, or by Spy Pond away from traffic.

Situated 7 miles northwest of Boston, Arlington is a special blend of city and suburban life. With a population of nearly 49,000 people living in an area about 5 square miles, Arlington is the sixth most densely populated municipality in Massachusetts. Yet Arlington strives to maintain the sense of community normally seen in a much smaller town.

There are parades on most major holidays, fireworks for Independence Day and Town Day. The annual Town Day (this year on Sept. 26) includes an all-day fair of games, food crafts, live music, dancing and a road race. It is a general atmosphere of fun and celebration.

But Arlington isn't turned in on itself. For about 10 years, Arlington has sponsored an international summer exchange program with Japan and is a sister city to Nagaskakyo.

There are more than 150 charitable, civic, cultural and special-interest groups in town — from Arlington Concerned Citizens to the Zonta Club of Arlington. Newcomers who wish to become involved will certainly find an organization that suits them.

Arlington has a strong commitment to education. Almost 75 percent of AHS graduates go on to four-year colleges and other programs.

Arlington's public schools include seven elementary schools, two junior high schools, and one four-year high school. These schools serve a student population

INDESTRUCTIBLE, YET FINELY CRAFTED,
AND EASY TO RENEW. AS YOU ENJOY IT
IT'S PROBABLY INCREASING IN VALUE

Sofas, loveseats, and chairs made in your choice of firmness options, 2000 fabrics, several designs, many lengths, four back heights, and oak, mahogany, or walnut woods. Also sleep sofas.

We have heard reports of Creative Comfort sofas' looking like new after ten years of heavy family use, sometimes including exposure to cats with active claws. But typically after ten years our customers come in to order new cushion covers for about $90-$180 for an entire sofa, or complete cushions for an additional $140. (These costs are a fraction of what normal furniture would have cost to reupholster or replace.) Their solid oak sofas are then nearly as good as brand new models selling for over $600 more than what they originally paid.

It is reasonable to say that their investment in this furniture has appreciated in value as they enjoyed living with it.

In an age of acid rain, retreating forests, and mass production, solid hardwood furniture that is finely-handcrafted and individualized (such as we make) will continue to be uncommon. That, together with its virtual indestructibility, adaptable decorative appeal, and lasting firm support, will probably mean increased value through generations of use and enjoyment.

10-15% off on early orders. Standard completion time is six weeks. Sofas average $1100 to $1400. Call for free literature with prices.

of about 4,800. Arlington is a member of the Minuteman Regional Vocational School District, which has a vocational-technical high school in Lexington.

Private schools include St. Agnes School, a parochial elementary school; Arlington Catholic High School; St. Anne's School, an Episcopal girls' day and boarding school; Ecole Bilingue; and the Lesley-Ellis School, an early childhood education school. There is a list of nursery schools and day-care centers at the information desk at the main branch of the Robbins Library in Arlington Center.

In the fourth grade, Arlington children study the history of their home town. Here are the highlights of what one fourth grader remembers some 20 years later:

In the early 1600s, Squaw Sachem, who was the widow of the chief of the tribe that lived in this area, controlled most of what is Middlesex County today. In 1638, she sold it to the colonial government for about 10 pounds and a guarantee of a coat every winter for the rest of her life.

Most people are familiar with the events of April 19, 1775, but not many realize that the heaviest fighting and the bloodiest skirmishes were not in Lexington and Concord, but here in Menotomy.

Until 1807, this area was part of Cambridge. It became the town of West Cambridge, later to become Arlington. During the 1800s, the town wass noted for market gardening, greenhouses and the famous ice houses of Spy Pond, whose workers, in the days before refrigeration, cut blocks of ice for shipment around the world. The Schwamb Mill, built in 1860 on the site of an older grist mill, is the oldest picture- and mirror-frame maker in the United States. It is a working museum, open to the public for tours, classes and sales.

Arlington was the birthplace of Samuel Wilson, who later ran a meat-packing operation in Troy, New York.

This company supplied the meat for the American army.

But the use of the initials "U.S." for United States was so new at the time that some of the packers took them to signify "Uncle Sam," for that was Wilson's nickname. The story spread until the name Uncle Sam came to signify the federal government.

In the last 100 years, with the advent of trolley cars and the automobile, the town gained easier access to the city and began its change from a farming town to a residential town for commuters.

Today, commuting to Boston is relatively easy from Arlington via public transportation. The Red Line runs all the way out to East Arlington at Alewife, making for a quick, convenient commute to downtown Boston. Driving can be a different story because the major highways to Boston are heavily traveled and slow during rush hour. For some residents, cycling is a healthy, inexpensive alternative. Cyclists can pick up the bike path along the Charles River just beyond Harvard Square.

Arlington certainly is more than a bedroom community. It offers a great deal both in its natural resources and its commitment to the quality of life for the people who live here — whether seniors, families, working people or students. It is a good place to live.

Selectmen welcome town's new citizens

Dear New Arlingtonian:

We welcome you to our town with its rich 352-year history. Beginning from farming and mill roots, our town has evolved into a suburban community with pride in its ethnic and cultural diversity. Simply stated, "Arlington has something to offer everyone."

There are fine recreational facilities, convenient public transportation, excellent schools, outstanding libraries, responsive public services and numerous churches. Moreover, there are countless opportunities for community involvement in town government, social and civic clubs and community volunteering. Our human services and concern for the elderly are strong public commitments. The Arlington Boys and Girls Club and the Choate-Symmes Hospital provide additional local community facilities. Our informational needs are met by the local newspaper, The Arlington Advocate, and by the town cable network, Arlington Cablesystems.

Despite our small and densely populated area (48,000 residents in two by three miles of land), we still have open space at our attractive parks and playgrounds. In recent years, the Arlington business community has undertaken an extensive renovations program and is trying to be responsive to changing consumer needs.

Chamber of Commerce represents town's businesses

Nearly 50 years old, the Arlington Chamber of Commerce represents local businesses and acts as a lobbyist for the concerns of the business person.

Located at 7 Central St., Suite 204, after 10 years on Medford Street, the chamber represents nearly 250 local businesses.

Director Larry Barton says the business group has two sides, "reactive and proactive." The reactive side comes into force when something within the community affects businesses, he said.

The chamber also meets with Alan McSweeney, town director of planning and community development, once a year to discuss new businesses, investments and redevelopment plans for town. chamber officials react to the town's information and bring up their own plans and concerns.

On the proactive side, the organization does positive things for the town and businesses it represents.

"We provides holiday lighting in Arlington," said Charlie Smith, administrative director of the group. Cathy Gallpanne is the secretary.

One year during the 1970's energy crisis, the town did not have the funds to put up Christmas lights, Barton said. Since then, the chamber has taken over the $30,000 a year lighting program.

Monthly luncheon meetings bring chamber members together. Guest speakers discuss issues that affect businesses.

The chamber of commerce also services as a help to residents, new and old, who have questions about local businesses. Often residents will call looking for a reliable business and the chamber will give recommendations.

"We're much like a better business bureau," said Barton.

He said the organization also holds an annual awards banquet to honor local citizens and businesses.

There are no qualifications for belonging to the chamber other than annual dues. Dues begin at $85 for new members.

After the first year, dues are prorated to the number of employees a business has. Business owners interested in joining the chamber should contact Smith at 643-4600.

Another feature of the chamber is a program offering health and discount group life insurance from Blue Cross and Blue Shield, and several health maintenance organizations.

"This feature is especially beneficial to very small businesses that could not otherwise afford insurance plans.

Businesses outside Arlington in the metro west area also join the chamber, Smith said. Including businesses outside Arlington, the organization registers nearly 500 members.

The chamber is headed by president Leonard Talkov. It also has two vice presidents, a clerk, a treasurer and a board of 12 to 14 members. All positions are held by local business people.

Incorporated in 1919, the organizaton was origalnlly called the Arlington Businessmen's Association. The name was changed to the Arlington Chamber of Commerce in 1936.

Below is a list of the Chamber's officials:

see the Arlington High complex.

The School itself faces Massachusetts Avenue with the athletic fields visible from Summer Street.

Centering the area is the football field, surrounded by a modern outdoor track. To the east is a field used for girls softball, Little League and by the Athletic Department for in-school programs at Arlington High.

On the western end of the Arlington High buildings are other fields used for practices and games.

The football field is used for home games by Arlington High, Arlington Catholic and the Pop Warner football teams.

As one approaches the intersection of Summer Street, Mystic Street and the Mystic Valley Parkway there are additional fields to the right.

These are also located on the south side of Summer Street. Buzzell Field has two baseball/softball areas, a basketball area and a tot-lot.

The area is equipped with lights for summer softball. The Arlington High softball team also utilizes the field.

Adjacent to that field to the east is the Arlington Catholic practice field for football.

Another hub of activity is the Spy Pond Field area, with access from Pleasant Street (Route 60) and Mass. Avenue.

Looking at the area southeasterly one can see the impressive Arlington Boys and Girls club on the shores of Spy Pond.

In the immediate foreground is Spy Pond Field with the baseball diamond used by Arlington High.

The outfield area is also used for high school soccer.

The concrete grandstand at the northwesterly end of the baseball field is in the process of being renovated.

Just east of the Boys and Girls Club, again along the banks of Spy Pond, is Scannell Field, used for many of the Little League activities in the community.

In Arlington Center, and visible from several directions in the Center is the Arlington Catholic High School area, adjacent to St. Agnes Church.

The church and school are located on the northwesterly side of Medford Street. On the easterly side of the same street are the St. Agnes School and Fidelity House. The latter houses a recreational complex for youngsters of all ages.

Four other areas

There are four other large recreation areas in the town. Hurd Field, adjacent to the Drake Village elderly housing complex is equipped with lights, which services two baseball/softball fields.

Thorndike Field in East Arlington, with access off Lake Street and visible from Route 2, is used by high school and Soccer Club teams throughout the year.

the street and those using the area must walk in. There is a playground, picnic areas and cross country track included in this section.

There are also recreational areas at the elementary and junior high schools in the community as well as at non-school locations. 25 playgrounds in all.

Twenty basketball courts are available at locations throughout the community, and there are 17 Little League Fields that are utilized by youngsters at several age levels.

Fidelity House, the Boys and Girls Club and Arlington Recreation present residents of the community with a wide range of recreational facilities year-round.

There are programs for tots and youngsters of all ages throughout the school year at each of the locations, while in the summer months there are all types of outdoor activities, including day camps.

A boating program is also offered at the Boys and Girls Club at Spy Pond during the summer months.

Basketball is a popular program at each of the recreational facilities, starting at a young age, through an adult program for men and women.

Arlington also has available its special needs programs and programs for senior citizens.

Arlington High and Arlington High have athletic programs at the junior varsity and varsity levels that have produced some outstanding boys and girls teams through the years, covering a wide range of sports in season.

Many more programs

There is a women's adult softball team during the summer months, and Arlington Recreation sponsors a 30-team men's softball league as part of its summer program.

The Pop Warner football program has reached new heights of popularity in Arlington with four teams, representing four age levels, competing throughout the football season.

The girls' Pop Warner cheerleading program has attracted squads at each of the same age levels.

Soccer has become an increasingly popular sport in the community, and there are now two seasons, spring and fall, with the Arlington Soccer Club sponsoring one and Arlington Recreation and the Soccer Club sponsoring the other.

The baseball program, other than at the high school level, has been coordinated into one large program known as the Arlington Baseball Association.

Activities start at the instructional level, continue through the Little League levels, and on into the Babe Ruth programs.

There are also teams at the 16-18-years level, and Arlington has a team, the Crannan Club, in the Intercity Baseball League.

There is also an American Legion-sponsored baseball team in Arlington.

And for those who enjoy their ice hockey, Arlington is the right community in which to live.

From the youngsters who try on their skates for the first time at the winter programs at the Veterans Memorial Skating Rink through the outstanding program carried on by the Arlington-Menotomy Hockey Club to the championship teams at Arlington High and Arlington Catholic the town carries on its age-old tradition of a hockey town.

The Arlington-Menotomy hockey program begins in September and continues through the early spring, with most of the activity centered at "the rink" on Summer Street.

There are "in-house" programs and road teams and tournaments in New England, the Mid-West and Canada in which Arlington youngsters at various age levels compete.

Additional detailed information on the various recreation and sports activities in Arlington and their locations and times are available from the groups, schools and organizations, and through the pages of the Arlington Advocate.

Anyone with questions may contact the sports department at The Advocate. We'll do our best to answer any such questions or refer the caller to someone who can answer them.

Philharmonic Society welcomes participants

The Philharmonic Society of Arlington, founded more than 50 years ago, is a distinctive community organization composed of the Arlington Philharmonic Orchestra, the Arlington-Belmont Chorale, and the Arlington-Belmont Chamber Corus.

Membership in the society is open to the public, the dues being set annually by the society's board of directors, and participation in the orchestra and chorale is invited without a formal audition. The Chamber Chorus is composed of members of the chorale selected by audition.

The types of classical music performed range from that of Bach, Beethoven and Schumann to Bartok, Copeland and Britten, just to name a few. World premieres of contemporary music are also performed, as well as popular music, featured at the society's annual pops concert.

The society is well served by the talents of its conductors, John Bavicchi and Walter Pavasaris. Bavicchi has been associated with the society for more than 25 years and is currently conductor of both the chorale and chamber chorus. He is also professor of composition at the Berklee College of Music and a composer of more than 100 published works of music. Pavasaris, conductor of the orchestra, has been associated with the society since 1980. He is currently director of orchestra music for the Belmont public schools.

Rehearsals for the performing season begin in September. The orchestra meets Wednesday evenings, starting in September, at 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Arlington, 630 Massachusetts Ave., Arlington. The chorale meets Monday evenings, starting in September,at 8 p.m. at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 929 Concord Turnpike, Arlington.

The society presents seven concerts throughout the year: a November concert by the orchestra, usually featuring the winner of the society's annual Young Artist Competition; a December concert by both the chorale and orchestra; a Children's Concert in March by the orchestra, featuring music that the whole family can enjoy; a Mid-Winter Concert by the chorale alone; a Chamber Chorus Concert in May; a Spring Concert by the orchestra and chorale; and the time-honored Pops Concert and Strawberry Festival in June, held in the Arlington Town Hall.

Interested musicians and singers should call 647-0892 or 245-3593 for more information or simply attend one of the rehearsals.

Town Meetings bring decisions close to home

Considered to be democracy in its purest form, the New England institution of Town Meeting brings the debate and decision of government affairs to the personal level.

In 1935, Arlington became the first town in the state to adopt the standard form of representative Town Meeting government.

Belmont and Winchester also use the representative, rather than open, form of Town Meeting, meaning that registered voters chose by precinct who will sit as Town Meeting members.

Watertown held Town Meetings until 1981, when it replaced its 65 Town Meeting members with a nine-member town council and a full-time town manager.

Unlike town meeting members, the town councilors meet with the town manager twice a month and in special sessions when necessary.

The town councilors — a council president, four at-large councilors and four district councilors — are elected to two-year terms, and receive a small salary.

Arlington's rapid growth in population during the late 1940's increased the demands for more town services and efficiency in the daily town operations. Because of the growth, in 1952 through a referendum adopted the Town Manager Act.

Town managers are appointed by the town councilors or selectmen.

Town Meeting is run by a town moderator, who is elected every three years. The moderator is responsible for announcing the votes on all warrant articles and keeping order.

Each year on the first Saturday in March, the registered voters in Arlington elect on a non-partisan basis various town officials and at least one-third of the Town Meeting members.

In Arlington, there are 252 elected Town Meeting members equally apportioned to each of the 21 precincts. The term of office is three years and Town Meeting members receive no salary.

Town Meetings are always held in the spring — the annual meeting — as well as at other times when special votes are needed, such the recent school project vote in Belmont.

Last month, a Special Town Meeting in Belmont held a 32-minute-long session and allocated $2.5 million needed to begin repairs at the Burbank and Winn Brook schools.

Town Meetings keep local governments close to home

Notice is posted and advertised well in advance of a meeting and a warrant, or agenda or articles, is prepared. A warrant is set to every home in the town prior to the first day of the meeting.

Any citizen of a town may submit a warrant, subject to deadlines, to be voted on by the Town Meeting.

All actions of town government and the responsibilities of town officials are under the jurisdiction of Town Meeting. Members allocate all funds for budgets and projects in town.

The town clerk is the record keeper of the meeting, recording all votes and keeping permanent town records of the actions.

Many town boards and committees make presentations to a town meeting. A finance committee, sometimes called a warrant committee, reviews the money and budget articles and prepares recommendations.

The selectmen, planning, redevelopment and assessors boards and school committee don't always agree, and members of these boards try to convince Town Meeting members to support their own positions. Some of these other boards report on non-money articles.

The meeting is conducted according to parliamentary manner and protocol. A quorum is determined, committees give reports, articles are read and motions are be made, voted, withdrawn or reconsidered.

In Arlington, the Town Meeting is conducted in the town hall auditorium with the moderator, selectmen, town manager, clerk and other department heads on the stage.

Town Meeting members are given admittance tickets and sit in a reserved section in the front of the room. Spectators sit in the rear of the auditorium or in the balcony.

A Town Meeting sets towns apart from cities which have mayors and elected city councils, often well-paid and full-time.

Alexis de Tocqueville, on visiting developing America many years ago, said: "Town Meetings are to liberty what primary schools are to science; they bring it within the people's reach, they teach men how to use and how to enjoy it."

Arts are flourishing in area communities

By SUSAN HERSHEY

The arts are flourishing in Massachusetts.

It is not necessary to go to New York or London or Minneapolis to find the best in dance, theatre, and music. Both at the professional level and in the community genre, Massachusetts has a great deal to offer.

If you love the arts you are living in the right place. According to Kim Comart of the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, Massachusetts is experiencing a cultural renaissance. "In general, this is a very exciting time culturally in Massachusetts. The burgeoning population of artists is receiving massive support for the arts," says Comart.

The arts receive more money per capita in Massachusetts than any other state in the country and this is due in large part to the Mass. Council, according to Comart. The organization that was created in 1966 by an act of the Legislature, also gives several million dollars to science organizations such as the Audubon Society, the N.E. Aquarium and the Science Museum.

The good news for artists is that the funds are increasing. This means more programs and more opportunities for artists.

For many, the arts are the threads which bind the very fabric of our lives. This valuable catalyst is currently accessible and available to large numbers of people in this area.

Each community has several active arts organizations and on a national level, Boston is the scene of very exciting arts events, both traditional and highly experimental in approach.

If television has ceased to stimulate you; if you've read all the books currently on your list, get out and participate in your community arts projects.

With a thriving arts scene such as Boston and the surrounding communities have to offer, now's the chance to make the world a better place to live in for us and for our children.

Following are brief descriptions of several community arts organizations in the area.

The Belmont Dramatic Club, founded in 1903, is the second oldest Dramatic Club in the United States. Each year the organization produces a dramatic play and a musical comedy. They hold a Cabaret Night Dinner Theater as well as member socials.

This year, the Club is presenting One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest on Nov. 6-7 and 13-14, and South Pacific on March 18-19 and 25-26. All productions are given at the Belmont Town Hall.

The organization encourages members to participate in all aspects of theater production, technical as well as acting. Members are given priority in casting of the shows.

For further information contact Willa Wye Rockett, at 484-9174 or Connie Bosse at 484-2061.

"Arabian Coffee," a divertissement from Act II of the Winchester Ballet Theatre's "Nutcracker," performed by Woburn resident and W.B.T. Director Darlene Wigton with partner Lincoln Clark III of Chelmsford, who also dance the roles of Clara and the Nutcracher-Prince. Performances are scheduled for December at the Winchester High School Auditorium. For ticket information, contact W.B.T. at 933-4976.

The Belmont Music School offers private lessons for banjo, bassoon, cello, clarinet, double bass, dulcimer, flute, French horn, guitar, mandolin, oboe, percussion, piano organ, recorder, saxophone, trombone, trumpet, tuba, viola, violin and voice.

Faculty members are all accomplished musicians and skilled teachers.

On October 31, the Belmont Music School will present the Joseph Stein Chamber Music Festival at 4 p.m. in the Unitarian Church, 404 Concord Ave., Belmont. Musicians who wish to perform in the festival should call Margaret Dusenberry at 489-2655 or Mildred Freiberg at 484-3979.

There are no auditions. Preference will be given to string chamber music, including strings with winds and/or piano.

All ages and levels of proficiency are invited to play. Admission is free and open to all.

The kendall center for the arts in Belmont offers classes and workshops in the visual and performing arts for young children, teens and adults. The center is also home to thirty-four artists who maintain their private studios there.

The center is located in a school building loaned by the town of Belmont, located just off Trapelo Rd. between Cushing and Waverley squares.

On October 25 the center will open its artists' studios from noon to 4 p.m. Refreshments and music will be provided along with entertainment for the children. Everyone is welcome.

The Belmont Children's Theatre is part of the kendall center. Classes in drama and music theatre are offered and during the third semestser, a play is produced. This year The Little Prince will be presented May 20, 21, 22.

Vacation arts camp is a popular offering at the kendall center. Applications are now being accepted for winter and spring arts camps.

Children, ages 6-12 make new friends and learn new skills as they sample a variety of visual and performing arts at camp.

Winter camp runs from Feb. 15-19; spring, April 18-22; and the summer camp runs for 4 weeks in July.

The center is at 226 Beech St. in Belmont. Call 489-4090.

The Winchester Ballet Theatre is now auditioning to cast the 1987 production of Nutcracker. This year half the cast is made up of men, which is, according to Darlene Wigton, director of the ballet, rather unique. "In a regional, pre-professional company, because it is extremely difficult to find men who are willing to perform in a ballet, most companies have to cast women in men's roles. But here, the members of the Tenth Regiment have encouraged their members to join this year's cast."

The majority of the performers are between the ages of 25 and 50, says Wigton. Although, they also include select high school students and senior citiens in appropriate roles.

The Winchester Ballet Theatre was founded in 1979 with the purpose of creating a performaing outlet for adult men and women who enjoy dance as an avocation and to provide stage experience for serious dancers, while bringing professional quality productions to Winchester and surrounding communities.

Membership is open to aduls and teens, ages 14 and over, by audition.

Rehearsals are held at Crawford Memorial Methodist Church and performances are at Winchester High School Auditorium.

Call Darlene Wigton at 933-4976.

Winchester School of Ballet, now in its eleventh season, offers classes in classical ballet and dance exercise, specializing in training for adults and teens, beginners through advanced. Emphasis is on proper body placement for correct classical technique and physical fitness. Children are acceptied by audition for separate children's classes.

The studio is at 34 Dix St., Winchester. Call 933-4976.

The Winchester Community Music School welcomes beginning and continuing students of all ages.

The school offers professional level of instruction in instrumental and voice, eurhythmics, and music theory. Small ensembles are available to students from pre-school age through senior adults.

The Winchester Community Music School considers music an important human activity, one which enriches, in both the short and the long term, the quality of life for the individual and the community.

A music therapist is there to work with special needs students. Private lessons are offered in band and orchestra instruments, organ, voice, guitar, banjo and recorder.

One of the pleasures of the school is the ties that are formed to other musical people and organizations in the community.

The Music School directors, Corie Nichols and Sandy Thompson communicate frequently with the director of music in the public schools, with piano teachers in town and with others interested in music.

Financial aid is available through the generosity of the Winchester community.

Write to the School at P.O. Box 24, Winchester, MA 01890.

A charitable function of the Winchester Art Association is its annual series of picture lending parties.

Each year a collection of pictures is gathered from regional amateur and professional painters and a party is held for interested borrowers to view and select the paintings.

A donation of $20 entitles the viewer to attend two parties, both held on Sunday afternoons, six months apart. The proceeds from the donations support an annual gift of about $2000 which is awarded as scholarships to aspiring Winchester artists.

The first party this year is on Sept. 27. Call Anne Casey at 729-7158 if you are interested in registering.

The Winchester Players produce two plays a year. Some of their past productions have included Doctor, in Spite of Himself, the Fantastics, and the Rainmaker.

Weather has its own personality in this area

By WALTER MOYNIHAN

A newcomer to greater Boston was seated before the television set on a sunny mid-spring day with the temperature outside at 70 degrees.

The wind was nearly calm, and the new person wondered aloud about the beautiful climate in this new hometown.

But even at that moment the weatherman on the television cautioned that the spell of beautiful weather was nearing an end, with a wind shift to the northeast ushering in a "backdoor" cold front.

The weatherman went on to relate that the cold front had already passed through Portsmouth, N. H., and was heading toward Boston at 20 miles an hour, and that its influence would be felt south to the Cape and west to Worcester by morning.

The next day the newcomer woke to temperatures in the low 40's, a brisk northeast wind and a low overcast that appeared to open every once in a while and emit tiny droplets of rain that had been trapped within.

That is the northeast wind that is the foe of Arlington, Belmont, Watertown and Winchester residents, but there is also the same northeast wind that is the friend during the hot days of summer.

A July day may dawn with the temperature again around 70 and the humidity high.

Winter can be a time for fun in the sun

As the sun swirls its way higher into the sky, the temperature rises toward the 90-degree mark .

About mid-day some low, puffy clouds, which have been slowly massing in the late morning suddenly stop on their march toward the east, and beyond them toward the ocean the sky remains blue, tinted by a light gray haze.

In the early afternoon the blue in the east moves ever closer to greater Boston, and occasionally there is a puff of air that pushes the flags around toward the west.

Listening to the reports on local stations, one can hear of temperatures in the low 70's at Logan Airport.

In the Boston suburbs, as the cloud-blue line passes overhead, the wind picks up a bit more from the east or northeast, and occasionally from the southeast, and there is some relief from the stifling heat of late morning.

But inland only a few miles, west of Route 128, the temperatures continue to rise, and west of Route 495, there is no relief from the heat.

Thus are the two faces of the easterly flow from the Atlantic ocean and the backdoor cold front which pushes down the coastal plain, sometimes wrapping itself around the suburbs, and other times just tantalizing us with a few hours of relief from the summer heat.

At times, as the high pressure system, called a "Bermuda High," pushes its way northward in the summer and breaks through the cold air mass along the coastal plain, temperatures which have been as high as 90 inland all day, 80 in Arlington, Belmont, Watertown and Winchester and 65 along the coast, will even off in the high 80's in all areas in the early nighttime hours.

The east wind is most prevelant in the spring months, and will sometimes bring in weather systems which keep Eastern Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, and Maine cold and damp for days, while the area, generally west of a line through Worcester and Manchester, N.H., will enjoy temperatures 15 to 20

The rules of the road are different in Massachusetts

By ROGER KAY

For those of you who have just arrived in New England, this disquisition gives an introduction to the mores and habits of Massachusetts drivers. For those of you who already live here, read and weep.

In places like California, drivers yield at yield signs, stop at stop signs, and generally follow the law, posted or merely in the book of regulations, as laid out by the various state governments.

Not so Massachusetts. Here we make up the law as we go along, although a sociologist observing average road behavior might be led to the conclusion that there are at least a few rules; for example, he who gets there first has the right of way.

But take heart. Drivers in Bangkok, Rio de Janeiro and Naples are probably worse. A little worse, anyway.

To put the problem in historical perspective, not all the blame belongs to the drivers (and they surely were men) who initially laid out the city of Boston.

They came from Europe and were used to thinking in terms of small spaces. Americans didn't discover how much land there really was here until they pushed farther west. You will note that the states keep getting bigger and bigger as you run your eye from right to left across the old Rand McNally. But back to the point.

The fellows that put this state together made it small so there is never enough room to drive or park. Then along came the geniuses, not exactly the founding fathers but gentlemen much like them, who built the road system. You will note as you cruise around the metropolitan area looking for a parking space, that the lane you are in keeps disappearing out from under you only to reappear suddenly at the most unexpected moment, usually where other crazed drivers are trying to enter the main flow of traffic in direct competition with you.

Lanes come and go; streets are narrow and winding; many suburban streets are not even marked. This derives from an old Yankee viewpoint that could be stated: We live here and we know where we are, and if you come from out of town, you don't have any business being here anyway, so there is no need for signs.

The pattern of lights is designed to encourage speeding. On Massachusets Avenue, if you keep your foot to the floor and whip around all obstacles like a test driver at a GM plant, you can blast all the way from Harvard Square to Arlington Center just nicking the yellow lights as they turn red. Once in Arlington Center, nothing can save you. There are cars waiting at lights there that last moved in 1938.

With this marvelously planned and executed infrastructure, the stage is set for the human interactions that make the driving experience in Massachusetts the unique encounter that it is. Perhaps it would be fairer to narrow the scope of this inquiry to include only Eastern Massachusetts, since it it certainly possible that this description does not apply to those who live in the area we Metronians call "Out West."

The absence of the Long Arm contributes to the general chaos on the roads. Enforcement of traffic law is spotty at best. Police departments have acquired the knowledge through experience that revenues are more easily raised from parked vehicles than moving ones. Thus, on nice days, officers stroll down the streets passing out parking tickets to empty, docile vehicles the way Granddad passes candy out to the kids.

Meanwhile, up and down the streets, all nature of lawlessness is taking place within view of the police, but while moving violations bring in more dollars per ticket, a lot more effort is required to catch the violators. (They never stop unless physically apprehended by at least four cruisers.) Also, there is the very real possibility that the violator, once caught, will pull out a weapon and start making Swiss cheese out of the arresting officers.

One might be tempted to make the inference that road rudeness is related to the social class or educational level of the driver. This is not so. Like spouse beating and child

Belmont people are proud of their bedroom community

By PATRICIA PEREGRIM

Perched on steep hills just beyond the Boston-Cambridge metropolis, Belmont is a commuter-oriented suburb that provides a retreat for its residents at the end of a long work day in the city.

Many of Belmont's 27,000 residents take pride in calling their home town a "bedroom community", and they want to keep it that way.

Highly residential, 20th-century Belmont has virtually no industry, although it built its 19th-century economy by retrieving winter ice from Little Pond and its neighbor, Spy Pond in Arlington.

Today, a large percentage of Belmont residents work in Boston or Cambridge or in the Route 128 high-tech area. There is also a high concentration of elderly residents.

Belmont's small retail businesses are confined to four commercial centers, three of which are along and near Trapelo Road: Waverley Square, Cushing Square and Harvard Lawn.

The Belmont Center shopping district is "anchored" by a department store and a gourmet supermarket.

There is little new development in Belmont, which has been termed a "land-poor" town.

Most of the land in the eastern two-thirds of town is almost completely developed. Residents in recent years have made efforts to block garden apartment complexes and large commercial buildings.

Some of the comparatively small open spaces left in Belmont have been developed for environmental and recreational purposes, such as the Habitat Institute for the Environment on Juniper Road and Beaver Brook Park on the Belmont-Waltham line.

Besides lack of land, the town is struggling with traffic problems caused by development in neighboring Cambridge.

Opening of the MBTA Alewife Red Line station near the Cambridge-Belmont-Arlington line has brought Belmont improved commuting access to Boston, but with it comes increased traffic as commuters cut through Belmont to avoid congestion on Route 2's Alewife Brook Parkway section.

This spring, the state proposed several alternative Alewife traffic improvements. Officials have debated whether the proposed improvements would favor Belmont and Arlington or present and future developments in North Cambridge.

Belmont residents are very proud of their town, which has become quite affluent in recent years. Home prices have skyrocketed, with many single-family houses now being advertised for around $300,000. Prices are even higher in the more exclusive Belmont Hill section of town.

Belmont has four elementary schools, one middle school and one high school. Despite declining enrollment, Belmontians generally consider their school system very good, and take pride that between 80 and 90 percent of Belmont High School graduates go on to college.

Most of the town's elementary school facilities are older than the high school building, which opened in the early 1970s.

The town has just embarked on an ambitious $13.3 million renovation project to give the Burbank and Winn Brook elementary schools new gymnasiums and more classroom space, as well as some badly needed repairs.

Belmont has a representative Town Meeting form of government with a three-member board of selectmen and a six-member school committee.

The town is generally conservative in local matters, although Walter Mondale won here over Ronald Reagan in the 1984 presidential election. Belmont's state representative, Mary Jane Gibson, is assistant majority whip of the House.

Shortly after a Supreme Court decision this spring forced Rotary clubs in the United States to admit women, the Belmont Rotary Club inducted its first three women members. The Belmont Kiwanis Club also lost no time in admitting two women members as soon as the national Kiwanis voted to allow women to join.

The way many Belmontians feel about their home town can be summed up in a banner that was flown during the town's 125th anniversary parade in 1984: "After Belmont, there is only heaven."

Built Like New.
Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

Selectmen welcome newcomers

Belmont Residents:

On behalf of the Board of Selectmen I extend a warm welcome to new residents of our town. We hope you will enjoy and participate in town affairs. Belmont is a town of 26,000 inhabitants, it is primarily a town of homes with very little industry and with small attractive shopping areas.

As town officials we take pride in the services offered by the town. We depend a great deal on volunteer involvement to assist us in making Belmont an attractive community.

Belmont is governed by an elected three-person Board of Selectmen and administered by an Executive Secretary, Mr. Scott Staples. Mr. Staples is available Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Town Hall.

Selectmen's meetings are held Monday nights at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall. We would welcome the opportunity to meet new residents on any Monday night in the Selectmen's Office.

Our town is also your town and we look forward to working with you to make it an even better town.

Chairman,

Staples town's first professional manager

By PATRICIA PEREGRIM

Since becoming Belmont's first chief executive officer in January, Scott Staples has already made some changes around Town Hall.

As the first executive secretary to the Belmont Board of Selectmen, Staples is the first professional manager with townwide responsibilities. He supervises all the municipal departments under the selectmen's purview, including finance, civil defense, community development, Council on Aging, police, fire, recreation, veterans' services, and highways.

Staples has focused most of the effort of his first eight months in office in two areas: personnel and finance.

"When you're in a new position, I think it's always good to remember it's necessary to take things one step at a time and prioritize things," he said.

"One of the reasons why we focused on the personnel system at the time was that this was the number-one concern of the selectmen and elected boards," Staples said. "Obviously I devoted my attention to that."

Staples set to work on a new personnel policy guide for Belmont, which Town Meeting approved in May.

To assist in administering the new policy, Staples also developed and put into effect a personnel management manual, which covers employee recruitment, personnel records, resignation and termination procedures and the like.

Staples hopes to provide more attention to such things as improved employee training and exit interviews for those leaving town service.

In June, after Staples had been on the job for about five months, Belmont selectmen approved a formal job description for the position of executive secretary. This approval was part of a reorganization plan Staples had proposed to the selectmen in May.

In the wake of the retirement of Building Inspector Richard Tirrell and Town Engineer Richard Betts, those two positions will be reorganized into two new posts, director of community development and code enforcement officer.

The code officer, according to Staples, was made necessary by the adoption this spring of a Belmont new zoning bylaw, which is much more comprehensive than the previous code.

Reorganizing the secretarial staff, Staples will also hire an administrative assistant, whose duties will include administering routine personnel matters.

The new administrative assistant will also be involved in affirmative action, minority business enterprise program and equal opportunity compliance procedures.

In another move to improve communication among town department heads, Staples has instituted weekly staff meetings at 7:30 a.m. each Tuesday.

In the area of municipal finance, Staples has been working with the treasurer's office and other officials to revise the method of organizing Belmont's annual budget.

Staples' role in the formulation of the current year's budget was as a mere observer, because the budget proposal was in the final review process by the time he arrived at Town Hall.

But for the coming year's budget, Staples will play a key role.

To help managers make the change over to a "program" budget format, Staples said he is developing a budgeting process manual that will probably be released in September or October.

According to Staples, the "program" budget format gives municipal officials a clearer picture on the cost of individual programs, rather than broad categories such as "salaries" and "general government." School Department officials, who do not come under Staples' administration, are conducting a similar effort with their budgets.

"When you're faced with revenue-raising parameters, it really motivates you to see what your programs cost," Staples said. "If the town does have to reduce, change or eliminate certain town services, this new budget format will give us the opportunity to make those decisions in an intelligent manner."

Staples said he is impressed with the "caliber" of the volunteer members of the Warrant Commit-

Belmont is best of both worlds

By JUDY TORKILDSEN
Belmont Citizen Editor

A suburb with nice features. That's how Joan Konig describes Belmont.

When Joan and her husband, Paul, were looking to make a move from Arlington a few years back, they wanted to live closer to the city. But they wanted plenty of space.

They've found the best of both worlds in Belmont.

Both were familiar with the town. They had often shopped in Belmont Center and had often made trips to Habitat.

Because of their jobs — Joan is a teacher in Arlington and Paul works construction in Boston — they wanted to live near the city.

"It's so close to the city and where we work, yet it doesn't have the parking lots and asphalt," Joan says. In Belmont there's plenty of trees, shrubs and grass, she said.

"It's a suburb with nice features."

"It's a desirable place to live."

Joan likes having lots of open space.

"There's still land around homes," she said.

"I can have a great garden here," she said. "I can do landscaping around the property. I can see the seasons change."

The Konigs, who live on Ross Road, are happy they chose the neighborhood they did. Says Paul: "We are in an exceptionally nice neighborhood."

Paul considers Belmont a unique town. It's also well-run, he says.

"They've done a nice job with keeping some of the areas like Habitat and the land next to it open," he said.

"It's part of being a well-run town — considering open land," he said. He said officials could easily have opted to sell off the land instead.

Paul admits that not everyone can afford to live in Belmont.

Most of the homeowners, he guesses, are probably not first-time buyers. Most who purchase homes here, he says, "probably give up a lot to live in a town like this."

But the Konigs believe any sacrifices they have made have been worth it.

"We think we hit it," Paul says. "It's kind of a dream come true."

But there's something else they've found, that makes Belmont special.

"We don't park on the streets," Joan says, "and that's a good feature."

tee and Capital Budget Committee, boards that make financial recommendations to Town Meeting. "There's support at every level for doing what it takes to improve the financial stability of the town," he said.

Staples said Belmontians have been "very, very supportive" of his organizational efforts.

"This is obviously the first time I've been in a position where the position is new," Staples said. "That brings with it a lot of opportunities, a lot of challenges. It certainly can bring a lot of frustrations, and sometimes it brings those emotions all at once."

"I knew when I made the decision to come to Belmont that it would be the greatest challenge of my professional career, and it has lived up to my expectations," Staples said.

As Staples observed, "A career in city and town management tends to take you to different places." An Arkansas native, he has had professional experience in Florida and Illinois as well as in his home state.

He received his bachelor's degree in political science in 1975 from the University of Arkansas. Two years later he earned a master's degree in public administration from the University of Kansas.

Voter registration quick and easy

Newcomers who wish to register to vote are eligible the moment they arrive in town, according to Town Clerk Ann Cresine Wilson.

Residents can register at the Town Clerk's Office at Town Hall on Monday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. or Tuesday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

No identification is necessary, Wilson said. The only information required is the resident's name, address, former address and where they were formerly registered.

Wilson said once residents register to vote, they're on the rolls immediately.

WHEN YOU'RE LOOKING FOR THE BEST WAY TO SELL YOUR HOUSE, LOOK FOR A GOOD SIGN.

Classic Craftsman Bungalows typically feature decorative beams under the gables and a low-pitched, gabled roof.

A rock-like facade against a brick wall mixes the old with the new. An elegant light fixture separates the styles.

Look for the sign of America's largest full-service real estate company. The sign that has stood in front of American homes for nearly 80 years. It's the sign home buyers are looking for today. Because they know that these days, you don't get bigger unless you do it better. Isn't that the strength and experience you want behind you when you're ready to sell your house?

Watertown

Watertown oldest in the county

Incorporated in 1630, Watertown is the oldest community in Middlesex County. It is home for a diverse population of some 35,000 people.

Watertown experienced the Industrial Revolution early, aided by natural water power from the Charles River falls. In 1816, the U.S. Arsenal was located along the Charles. Considerable manufacturing activity continues today alongside a substantial retail base.

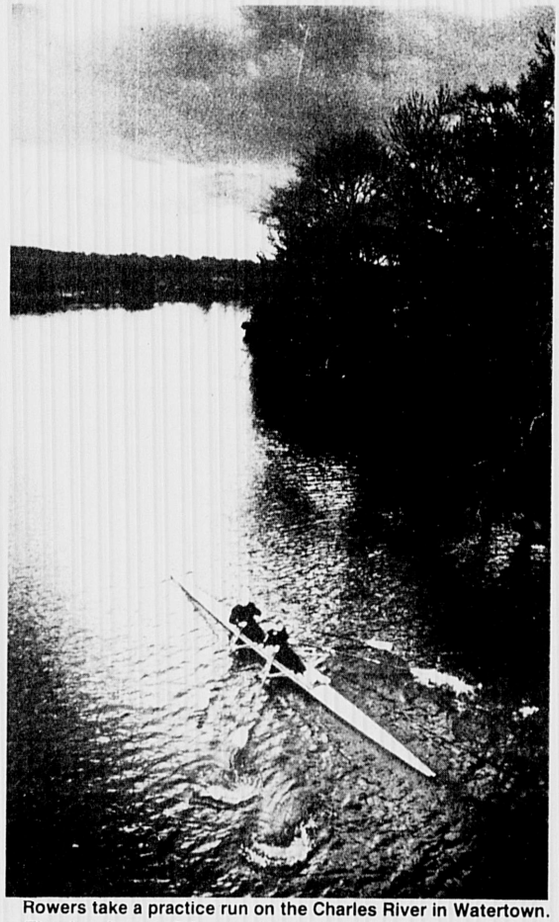
Watertown consists of four square miles of land. It enjoys easy access to Boston thanks to the nearby Massachusetts Turnpike, Soldiers Field Road and Fresh Pond Parkway.

Demographically, Watertown reflects incomes and occupational levels consistent with Greater Boston. A typical household earns over $36,000, while almost a third are employed in executive and professional occupations. More than half the dwellings are owner-occupied.

Politically, the town is heavily Democratic. More than 60 percent of the voting population are registered Democrats. The town is run by a town council/town meeting form of government.

Much of the town's retail activity occurs along Arsenal St., where the Watertown Mall and the newer Arsenal Mall compete for retail business. Manufacturing firms employ twice as many people as retailers, however; the total employment is more than 6,000. Many local companies are engaged in high technology and related enterprises.

Looking to the future, Watertown is unlikely to experience population growth. In fact, the town population appears to have peaked around 1960, when it approached 40,000. The town is changing dramatically, however, with the explosion of real estate prices in Greater Boston. According to statistics compiled by Coldwell Banker, the median home sold for $187,000 in 1986.



Rowers take a practice run on the Charles River in Watertown. The river is one of the town's scenic highlights.

Cost, comfort drew couple to Watertown

By THOMAS CONTENT
Sun Assistant Editor

When Reed Butler and his fiance Ruth Levy first thought of buying a house this spring, moving to Watertown didn't cross their minds.

But when they looked here, they found what they wanted — a mix of affordability and comfort in the two-family home they bought on Evans Street.

Butler, Levy and another couple, Matthew Bokulic and Ruth Buckman, all in their early to mid 30s, had been renting apartments in Jamaica Plain and Brookline, and were ready to make the leap to become homeowners.

"None of us knew anything about Watertown, really," said Butler, who has lived in Cambridge and Boston for 20 years.

After looking in Newton, where they found prices too high, the foursome crossed the Charles to look in Watertown.

"Given what we had to work with, I don't think we could have done any better for ourselves, in terms of finding a good place to live," said Butler, sitting in the living room of his comfortable home.

Levy and Butler searched for a home as a couple first, but found they could not afford to buy a single-family home, and were only "borderline satisfied" with the condominiums they saw, Butler said.

Condominiums they looked at did not have the "personal space" they sought, so the couple joined their friends Bokulic and Buckman in buying the Evans Street house, in a neighborhood they have grown fond of.

'Given what we had to work with, I don't think we could have done any better for ourselves in terms of finding a place to live.'

Newcomer Reed Butler

His neighborhood is the reason Butler does not mind living in one of the most densely populated communities in Massachusetts. "Being that close together is not bad if you're in a place where people have kept it up, keeping the neighborhood looking good and feeling good."

After living in Boston, Butler found Watertown's attributes to be the strength of its neighborhoods, and its proximity to both Boston and Route 128.

His new home is conveniently located between Butler's two jobs. He works as a mason during the day in Weston, Wayland and Newton, and as a bass player by night in a Boston hotel.

"As the crow flies, Jamaica Plain is much closer [to downtown Boston], but it took just as long to get there," he said.

"The location is something which I hadn't know about Watertown," said Butler. "Access getting in and out of the town is great."

Other prospective homebuyers in Watertown agree. Asked the main attraction of Watertown to the people he sells houses, real estate broker Greg Safarian said, "The general consensus is it's ideally located."

Other than its location, Butler said, "The school sytems here are good. There's a beautiful playground right down the street."

Listening to birds chirp outside as a breeze glides into his living room, Butler smiles and looks around his home. "This is what I bust my tail for. I want to relax when I come home."

There are five nicely located schools serving the K-6 population; two schools, located at opposite ends of our town, serving our 7th and 8th grade students; and one comprehensive high school providing a wide variety of offerings to grade 9-12.

The Watertown Public Schools Staff is a collection of highly qualified teachers with very superior credentials. Specialists serve students in a broad range of subjects and special services.

Our full day kindergarten suitably provides for the needs of today's youngsters. Challenging curricula, supported by the best materials available, are part of every program system wide.

Watertown School Supt. Daniel O'Connor

Watertown's Special Education Program provides support and opportunity for students who may require a unique educational plan. In this area, prekindergarten through post-high school, services are made available wherever needed.

The Enrichment Program is designed to foster a broadening of normal classroom activity. The vast resources of this Greater Boston vicinity are explored for their potential to strengthen the learning environment.

Libraries, Guidance staff, a strong Music Program, Art, Physical Education, good class sizes, generous community financial support, and opportunities for citizens to become involved are some of the ingredients that make up this school system.

The Administration and Staff, dedicated to serving you and your family, invite you to visit the Watertown Public Schools and view some of the programs we offer to our students.

The fire, police and civil defense budgets combine to form a public safety budget of $6.55 million, of 15.2 percent of the total.

Winchester offers affluence and easy access to Boston

Winchester combines easy access to Boston with a suburban lifestyle. It is one of the most affluent, exclusive towns in Massachusetts.

The area known as Winchester was created in 1850 from parts of Medford, Woburn and West Cambridge (now Arlington). It was named after Col. William E. Winchester, a Watertown resident. The Winchester area was originally settled in 1640 and was successively called Waterfield, Woburngates, South Woburn and Blackhorse Village.

Today Winchester is a tree-lined bedroom community just a 13-minute train ride away from downtown Boston. It encompasses 21,000 people and six square miles of land.

Winchester's population is white-collar and highly educated. Of those who work, almost half are managers or professionals. Many work in Boston because of the convenient access provided by the Boston to Lowell train. The train has passed through Winchester since the inception of the Boston to Lowell route in 1835.

Winchester is conservative by Massachusetts standards. Roughly 40 percent of the town's registered voters are Democrats, while 26 percent are registered Republicans. The remaining one-third of the registered voters are Independent. Town government takes the form of a representative town meeting.

Irish people outnumber other ethnic groups in Winchester, comprising 30 percent of the population. People of Italian descent represent some 25 percent, while the people of English ancestry are approximately 18 percent of the total.

Winchester is heavily residential, as more than three-quarters of the dwellings in town are single-family units. Approximately half the dwellings in town were built in 1950 or earlier.

Winchester has comparatively little industry, but a considerable service economy. On the retail side, Winchester has undergone considerable revitalization in recent years.

Weather has its own personality in this area

degrees higher.

Winter storms

The same east wind which acts as friend and foe as far as the temperature in the suburbs is concerned, acts similarly where winter storms are concerned.

The newcomer spending a first winter in this area has many surprises in store.

A strong northwest wind in December, January, February, and March will bring clear-cold air, and sometimes sub-zero temperatures with it.

Occasionally there will be snow flurries in the Boston suburbs area, spawned from the upper-air turbulence-type flurries over the Berkshires, White and Green Mountains to the west and north.

The coldest months of the year are January and February with temperatures averaging in the 20's.

January thaws are fairly common in greater Boston, but don't always happen on their scheduled dates, Jan. 17-23.

Snowfall amounts vary considerably. A Boston storm may amount to but an inch or two of snow or slush, while East Arlington will have a broom-pushing two to four inches and Arlington Heights a plowable four to six inches. West of Route 128 the same storm may dump up to a foot of snow.

Forty inches of snow a year is not uncommon in the area suburbs, with again much more to the north and west.

At least once a winter, it seems, the suburban area bears more of the brunt of a storm as was the case last winter, when coastal storms dumped heavy amounts of the "white stuff" on Cape Cod and the islands, lesser amounts on the eastern coastline and none west of Route 495.

Rainfall amounts are generally above 40 inches, with much of the precipitation falling as snow and rain in the stormy period throughout the winter months.

The biggest snowstorms of all in greater Boston are the outshoots of weather systems which form many miles away across the country, hedge-hop their way eastward, reforming from mountain range to mountain range as they go, and finally reforming somewhere on the Atlantic coastline.

The new storms build up over the Carolinas, sometimes just east of New Jersey and at other times in the Gulf of Maine.

The location of formation is important as to how much snow Arlington, Belmont, Watertown and Winchester will get from a storm.

A Carolina storm which comes up the coast and moves west of Boston is apt to dump more rain than snow on the area. A storm that moves just off the coastline will produce more snow, even in the Boston area.

New York/New Jersey coastline-formed storms, may or may not develop fast enough to do much damage locally, but occasionally will explode on our "doorstep" and dump copious amounts of snow.

Gulf of Maine storms, many times, are the results of two small storms, one coming across from the Great Lakes and another idling up the coast joining forces.

The Boston area may not get too much snow from this type of storm, which rather empties on Northeastern Canada.

However, occasionally a storm of this magnitude will back down the coast as it expands and drop from one to three inches of snow on the coastal area.

Rarely, warm air swinging up the coast on the east side of any type of a "northeaster"will swing back to the west in the Maritimes, dragging warm air back down the coast, causing a changeover from snow to rain in parts of Maine, while Arlington getting snow.

Living in the Northeast, New England particularly, is one of the greatest adventures in weather.

Weather of all kinds seems to end up here.

Generally, it is expected that the weather will be cold in the winter, warm in the summer, wet in the spring and nice in the fall.

Wait a minute

But, this area is also noted for its "wait a minute the weather will change" climate.

And there have been some big storms through the years at all times of the year.

Heavy spring rains like those experienced this year soaked athletic fields and delayed the openings of spring practice, and yet this summer has been so dry that the water cannon, which sprays water in 50-foot circles has had to be put into use on the athletic fields.

Two years ago this fall a rare hurricane struck the New England states, causing damage and heavy rain in the Arlington area.

However, these tropical storms have been rare north of the Narragansett Bay area through the years. Storms of this type tend to lose some of their punch once they hit the cold waters in September and October.

One of the the worst tropical storms was the infamous 1938 hurricane which swept up the east coast in late September, knocking down trees, cutting out power and swamping boats along the coast.

Other tropical storms plagued the area in the mid-1950's with high winds and flood-related damage.

Snow in Arlington is generally related to the months of December, January, February, and March, but there have been storms in early October and even one in early May in the last decade.

This year there was heavy, wet snow storm in late April, which melted within two days, once the high sun took over.

There was the big St. Patrick;s Day storm of 1956, the heavy snows of the winters in the late 1960's when some roads in Arlington were impassable for three days.

And of course there was the 'Blizzard of 1978" in which residents of the community got to know neighbors they had never seen as travel was restricted to skis and sleds.

The White Christmas in New England, pictured on post cards througout the world, are more uncommon that common. Occasionally, there will be some snow on the ground at Christmas, left by previous storms, and once in a while a small storm will arrive on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day, but the chances are better for a green Christmas in the sector than of a white one..

An exception was in the early 1960's the area was buried under a mantle of white that covered the area throughout Christmas Eve.

Newcomers settling down in the town should come here expecting almost anything in the way of weather.

Arlington's proximity to the ocean leaves it fair prey to the whims of the cold ocean water and the accompanying east wind which can cause a snow flurry to become six inches of snow, and a predicted heavy snowfall to become a wet rainstorm along the coastal plain.

If anything the weather in Arlington is not boring and there will be four definite seasons, spring, summer, fall, and winter, but in what month each will start and end is anyone's guess.

The rules of the road are different in Massachusetts

abuse, nasty driving occurs in the best of households as well as the worst.

In fact, a case could be made that all metropolitan drivers display a healthy dose of obnoxiousness, since those who were not able to display the necessary aggression to survive on the roads here long ago became extinct or moved to calmer climates.

Let's take a closer look at the type of behavior that sets Boston-area drivers off from the rest of the country:

Under Massachusetts law, drivers in a rotary have the right of way. Those entering the circle are legally obliged to wait until a space opens up before moving into traffic. But some design maven built rotaries that have a leg entering from a major highway. The rotary at the junction of Route 93 and South Border Road is a good example. Drivers entering from the main route feel that, because of their recently higher speed, they have the right to just forge ahead.

Over a period of time these drivers have trained those in the rotary to stop there and let them through. Once a driver stops in a rotary, the whole thing freezes up, much to everyone's annoyance. But in an incredible feat of amnesia, the same drivers who were cut off in the rotary will to it to others when their turn comes to enter via the major leg.

It wouldn't be so bad if the rudeness were executed with a certain degree of skill, the way they do it in New York, for example. But drivers are both rude and incompetent.

*You may find yourself behind a driver who displays the kind of insecurity and selfishness that leads him or her to take up not one, but two lanes. It is possible that one of them will disappear at any moment, and the driver is hedging against that risk, but more likely he or she is eyeing the cars ahead to see which lane will clear up and wants to keep options open in order to be able to roar out fast enough to catch the next light.

A common trick is the If-I-don't-see-you-you-aren't-there stunt. This is applied to intersections. A driver pulls out of a side street or merging lane and simply neglects to turn his or her head. We all know that humans have extraordinary peripheral vision and they definitely see you out of the corner of their eye the same way as the single woman at the bar who pretends not to but definitely does see the group of fellows trying to catch her attention across the way. But the offending driver can make a case that you aren't there in order to cut you off and force you, who have the right of way, to slam on your brakes.

Red-light running takes up a special category by itself. There are casual offenders, those who can't quite get their foot onto the brake pedal in time when the light turns yellow and simply slide through the intersection before the drivers whose light has just turned green can make a move. Savvy drivers have learned not to accelerate at a green light until they visually verify that the traffic in the cross street has physically stopped.

Then there are the hardened red-light runners. These people simply bomb through an intersection if they think they can make it, no matter what the lights are doing.

Since the federal government okayed the right turn on red after a stop, further confusion has set in here. At first, the conservative government of Massachusetts said they would be damned if the feds could tell them anything and set about erecting "no turn on red" signs at every corner in the state. The mind boggles at the thought of DPW workers at union rates putting up 50,000 $50 signs, but that's another story.

After a certain time the logic of the national edict began to dawn on area residents, and they began turning right on red whether a sign was there or not. The federal law specifies that the car at the red light stop and only enter traffic if the oncoming lane is free. Of course, as soon as Massachusetts drivers caught on, they neither stopped nor waited, thus adding unpredicability to the already unstable situation.

A few have now even begun to experiment with making left turns on red.

Part of the endearing Bostonian character is the response with which any suggestions or comments about driving manners is greeted by the offender. Human nature seems to dictate that when someone is wrong about something, he goes on the offensive, and becomes even angrier than he would if he were right. Thus, many of us have had the experience of being cut off in traffic, beeping our horns and then having the pushy driver yell obscenities at us or flip us the bird.

There are many other diseases that infect the body of politic of Massachusetts. For example, there is the famous slam-on-the-brakes-before-signaling syndrome that causes rear-enders so frequently.

Another variant is the cut-across-the-oncoming-lane-when-the-light-turns-green illness. Practitioners are so adamant about their right to break the law that they are willing to cut into the left-hand lane of the side street they are entering to execute this maneuver.

It is just the law of the jungle that rules this Eastern Seaboard metropolis. The pace-setters of this type of obnoxiousness could care less whether they cause other people problems. But bad driving manners are in the long run self-defeating as all drivers take on defensive behavior in reaction.

As everyone tries to optimize his own immediate situation, the whole traffic grid locks up. Everyone suffers and the situation exacerbates itself in an increasingly vicious cycle of nasty desperation.

So, if you are new to the area, good luck on the road, and if you are from here, condolences are due to you, both as victim and perpetrator.

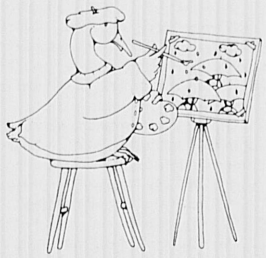
An interesting magazine, the new renaissance (tnr), is published biannually in Arlington. Editor Louise Reynolds says although the magazine has an international readership, manuscripts are accepted from local writers.

The magazine is a showcase for established and emerging writers/artists who have something to say, who say it with style or grace, and, who speak in an individual voice, according to the magazine's fact sheet.

Its purpose is to offer a forum for idea/opinion pieces whose in-depth treatment or subject matter may be too intransigent for the mass media.

The magazine publishes fiction, poetry, lead articles, artwork, essays or interviews, reviews, graphics and commentary.

Manuscripts will not be accepted from July 2 through Dec. 31.



Subscriptions are available from the publisher at the new renaissance, 9 Heath Rd., Arlington, Ma 02174.

A wide variety of child care services is offered in area communities

By DIANE BRONCACCIO

New families moving to the area have many options when it comes to childcare.

The area is rich in family day care and day care centers, nursery schools, babysitters plus afterschool, youth and recreational programs for children from infancy to 12 years old.

The question is how to choose the best facility.

The following suggestions come from Christine Rowan of the Watertown Free Public Library in her excellent reference, Childcare: A Resource Handbook, which sells for $1 at Watertown Free Public Library.

First, parents should meet the day care workers to decide whether or not the children will be comfortable with them. Do they seem to understand children? Do they share the parents' concerns about nutrition, creativity and discipline? Do they invite parent participation?

Second, parents should consider the physical space of the center. Is it suitable for both indoor and outdoor play, for active group play as well as for quiet, individual pastimes? Is it clean, well-ventillated, safe and well lit? Is there enough variety of play materials available that both entertain and teach children valuable skills?

Other criteria that parents might consider includes: the children's age groups; the teacher/child ratio; the teachers' qualifications, experience and competence; how the staff feels about noise, messiness, sharing and quarreling; what kind of meals or snacks, if any, are available and how often are they served; how are toilet needs handled; and what is the center's philosophy and goals.

Babysitting

Babysitting refers to short-term care for the children, often in the family home, with pay based on hourly fees. Here are some area babysitter services.

Childcare Resource Center, 24 Thorndike St., Cambridge, provides assistance in setting up playgroups, babysitting exchanges and childcare centers. The center provides a wealth of other information for parents, including listings on day care centers, family day care providers, nursery schools and afterschool programs. Call 547-9861, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

International Homemakers, P.O. Box 701, Brookline, 02146, offers babysitting services for children of all ages at the rate of $7 per hour, with a three-hour minimum, for one to five children. Reservations are requested seven to 10 days in advance. Call 566-7901.

Parents in a Pinch, offers babysitting for children of all ages and can be called on short notice. Wages range from $7 to $9.50 per hour depending on the time of day and the number of children. Call 739-KIDS.

The Parent Connection, 290 Mass. Ave., Arlington, offers support groups for new mothers, working mothers, etc. Also, children's resale shop 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Call 641-2229 for free information.

University Home Services, 670 Center St., Jamaica Plain, 02130, offers overnight sitting for newborns and children of any age. The fee for one to two children is $57 per 24-hour period, with a 24-hour minimum. Advance reservations are advised. Call 524-1900.

Warmlines, 492 Waltham St., West Newton, provides a resource center, with files on day care centers, play groups, nursery schools and babysitting co-ops. Call 244-6843.

Family day care

Family day care is the supervision of one to six children in the home of a registered family day care provider. Usually, providers serve snacks or lunch but do not provide transportation.

Providers are licensed by the Office for Children, which certifies that the provider has met the minimum requirements for operating a family day care home. Therefore, parents should be sure to plan an initial interview with the prospective provider.

A current list of registered family day care providers is offered free through the Massachusetts Office for Children.

For Arlington and Winchester, call 938-6050.

For Newton, call 965-9810.

Each area community has places for residents to play

By DIANE REZENDES

So you're bored. Maybe you're new in town and don't know what's available to do around here. Or maybe you've lived here all your life and just never paid attention to what's around.

Summer vacation has come and gone, but you still have some free time — what are you going to do with it?

The recreation department has some answers. Sure, you think, and a mental image comes to mind: a bunch of kids sitting around in a park knotting hemp or shooting hoops while the grounds bake at 90 degrees.

Maybe that's what recreation was at one time, but as this society becomes increasingly leisure-oriented, recreation departments are responding with more and varied programs.

Ken Cereghino, recreation director for Winchester, says he is "trying to develop a more contemporary approach." In fact, Winchester has no summer playground program at all.

"Recreation in the '80s is not limited to sports and games," he adds. "We're targeting specific groups of people and providing physical, social and cultural outlets."

Debbie Hayes, assistant director for recreation in Arlington, agrees with Cereghino and adds, "People think recreation is for kids, but we have to go with the population, and there are fewer kids now.

"Four of our schools have closed, and the general population has decreased. Our biggest group now is people in their 20s and 30s. So we've closed down some of the playgrounds and added programs for adults."

In the late '70s, 18 playgrounds were open. In 1985 only six offered programs for young people, yet 11 age- and interest-specific day camps have been added.

Like Winchester, Arlington is offering fewer general programs while offering more programs targeted to specific groups of people.

One of the toughest groups to provide programs for is adolescents. Dan Brosnan, director of Arlington Recreation, attributes the difficulty to "the fickleness of that group. They have nothing to do, but don't know what they want."

One program which has been successful is Arlington's "Workreation."

Young people ages 12 to 17 work in the town. Some do maintenance — others serve as junior counselors for programs.

They are "paid" in credits which may be used for recreation programs. Each hour worked earns an hour in any recreation program which normally charges a fee. In addition, the kids gain valuable work references as well as experience.

Belmont directs its efforts for teens toward more traditional programs. William McKenney explains, "The Belmont Recreation Department provides an opportunity for each of the town's residents to participate in an enjoyable activity during their leisure."

The department provides facilities for a summer Recreation Center for younger teens at the Wellington School. Movies are shown nightly, and the 13- to 15-year-olds play volleyball, frisbee, table hockey and basketball.

In Winchester, a seven-week program offers a different focus for each week.

Individuals may sign up for from one to seven weeks. Themes include: acting and theater, bicycle trips to Martha's Vineyard, canoe trips, lacrosse, mountaineering, television production and photography workshops.

In addition to recreation deptartment programs, area residents can enjoy boating on Spy Pond and Mystic Lakes, where the Massachusetts District Commission operates Sandy Beach for summer swimming. The Winchester Fells is off-limits to swimmers and fishermen. Arlington's Menotomy Rocks Park has a vita course and a pond for skating and fishng.

Each town also has privately operated youth programs for baseball, soccer, hockey and other sports.

The following listings are highlights of some recreation deptartment programs. For further information call Arlington Recreation at 646-1000; Belmont Recreation at 484-2310; Watertown Recreation at 924-2074 and Winchester Recreation at 721-7125.

Business tax rate to match residents' bite

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Winchester's businesses will not pay a higher tax rate than its residents next year.

The Board of Selectmen Monday night in a 3-2 vote decided not to implement different tax classifications for businesses and homeowners. Board Chairman Judith Muggia and members Robert Deering and Thomas Schmitt voted for equal taxation and Selectmen Francis Sopper and Mark Lombardi voted for separate classification.

The selectmen's vote parallels a split on the Board of Assessors. Chairman Francis Mahoney advised the selectmen not to use tax classifications; board member David Errico advised the selectmen to tax businesses at 105 percent.

"Classification does not really pertain to a town like Winchester," Deering said. He said classification was created for cities and towns in which commercial taxpayers use a higher proportion of services or require special services of the municipality.

But Sopper argued that the methods used to assess commercial real estate do not result in a 100-percent market value assessment.

Director of Assessors Daniel McGurl said the state mandates the use of two methods out of the three

Town to consider varied items at TM

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Winchester fall Town Meeting members will see a variety of issues on the warrant; some are items the town has been working toward for years and some have just recently come up.

The warrant officially closed Sept. 18, and the Board of Selectmen voted to formally close it at their Monday night meeting, as is the town's tradition.

Myrtle Street resident Marcia Morris initiated an article to name the Wadleigh School site. She said a committee of neighbors would help with the park's upkeep if it is properly landscaped and named.

Morris said the site, zoned as park land, has often been considered a possible building site because it does not have a name. The Wadleigh Park was photographer Arthur Griffin's first choice as a site for the museum he proposes to give to the town. After a discussion with neighbors, he changed his mind.

Griffin did not file the warrant articles necessary to begin his museum project, but the selectmen expect to sponsor at least three, late museum articles.

Griffin has shifted his focus to a site on Shore Road. Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer said if Griffin

Housing report sparks debate

Consultant says town must generate options

By PETER MAUST
Special to the Star

A recent report to the Winchester Long Range Housing Committee (LRHC) has sparked new proposals by the town and renewed debate concerning affordable housing in Winchester. The report was prepared by Pattison, Slavet and Associates, a Newton consulting firm.

According to Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer's office, the report will be distributed to all Town Meeting members.

Maryann McCall-Taylor, chairman of the Winchester Planning Board, says the LRHC has made three major recommendations in response to the report. First, the committee has advised the selectmen to appoint a new town official responsible for overseeing housing policy in Winchester. The post would be known as Community Development Director.

Secondly, the selectmen are also considering creating a new body, the Housing Partnership Board, to coordinate the housing efforts of the selectmen, the Planning Board, and the Winchester Housing Authority.

Thirdly, the Planning Board is investigating the institution of an "inclusionary zoning policy." Inclusionary zoning, according to the report, is a method that encourages private developers to designate a percentage of new housing development to low- and moderate-income housing. The town would allow an increase in the number of housing units a developer could build per acre in return for a percentage of low- and moderate-income units.

The report, christened the Long Range Housing Plan for the Town of Winchester, is extensive. It reviews previous and current town efforts to provide affordable housing and extrapolates future housing needs. The report also gives a summary of methods other towns use to provide affordable housing.

The report concludes that 'absent a formal housing plan and left entirely to the marketplace, affordable housing will not be built in Winchester.'

Finally, the report recommends ways by which Winchester can provide more low- and moderate-income housing over a 10-year period.

The Long Range Housing Plan is the direct result of actions by the 1986 spring and fall Town Meetings. The Board begins steps to improve water system

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Winchester will open discussions about a permanent hook-up to the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority's water system with a letter to MWRA Commissioner Paul Levy.

Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Thomas Schmitt, who wrote a review of the Weston and Sampson Report, a study of the town's water system, recommended the move. The report recommends two permanent hookups, one at the Bear Hill main and one at Forest Street, but Schmitt and Lombardi said they think only one is necessary.

Selectman Francis Sopper expressed concern that an MWRA hookup would eliminate Winchester's need for its reservoir system.

But Schmitt said the letter would only open up discussions, and not make any mention of specific hookups or a permanent reliance on the MWRA as a water source.

The selectmen voted 4-0 to send the letter. Sopper abstained, saying, "I don't want any part of this."

To take full advantage of the possible hook-up, the review said, the Schools aim to set priorities before making budget choices

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

The School Committee will explore a number of issues during the school year that it listed as goals and objectives.

The committee wants to make clear to the Capital Planning Committee what its priorities are before budget recommendations are made at Spring Town Meeting. School Committee member Donna Brandt-Landry has been touring the schools and will present her findings to the committee by the end of October.

Committee Chairman William Jervey said he wants to create a capital improvement program to the Capital Planning Committee that makes clear the work that should be done and what improvements are most pressing.

"Right now it's unclear who's setting the priorities for what gets dropped off the budget," Jervey said.

Jervey also said he does not want the committee to have to make decisions about the use of school land without knowing the consequences. The committee will take an inventory of school land to decide whether all of it is being used by the department and under what circumstances the committee would give up any of its land.

Two other property concerns are the Mystic School and Sanborn House. The committee will use the department's enrollment forecasting to determine what the best use of those facilities would be.

Committee member Alice McCarter said she would like to see a method to evaluate the cost-effectiveness of programs. "Are we getting our money's worth?" she asked. Or would the money be more effective in another area or program?

To help decide where the department's money should go each year, the committee will list its priorities and objectives as a guide in the budet process.

The cirriculum and program goals the committee set for the year are all follow-ups to previous programs and recommendations.

The first is a review of the progress made in implementing new ideas in the health, reading, multicultural education, and adult education programs.

The second is a monitoring of fact versus process learning, a balance that is being studied under Project 2000. The committee is also interested in the success of interdisciplinary learning and team-teaching methods in the classrooms.

The third goal is a review of the support the high school guidance program gives to students who do not plan to go on to college or trade school.

"If you look at a high school guidance counselor's schedule," Jervey said, "I think you will see that there is a lot of focus on college bound students."

The committee, Jervey said, wants to be sure other students are getting adequate guidance as well.

Last year a branch of Winchester Savings Bank called Sachem Savings Bank opened at the high school. One of the committee's goals this year is to develop a policy on private sector involvement in the schools.

Another concern stemming from previous year's experience is the committee's requirement that all high school functions occur in Winchester.

The committee will review that policy. Student Advisory Committee representative Larry Ferazani said he thinks students do not mind having the prom in Winchester, but would like to plan other class activities, such as ski and beach trips and picnics, outside the town.

The last goal is a response to problems the committee had with collective bargaining agreements at Spring Town Meeting 1987. After bargaining with principals and custodians for their contracts, the Finance Committee, which had a representative at the bargaining table, recommended against the contracts.

Jervey said he would like to know exactly what role the Finance Committee and Personnel Board have in collective bargaining. Will the representatives take part in the bargaining sessions or just observe, he asked.

"The role seems to be selective in nature," Jervey said.

Housing Partnership Board would enlarge affordable housing options

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Fall Town Meeting members have the opportunity to vote for a board that will improve communication and alert Winchester to a wider range of housing alternatives, according to Selectman Thomas Schmitt.

That board is the Housing Partnership Board, whose creation the Board of Selectmen are sponsoring in a warrant article.

Most participants at a public hearing held Monday during the selectmen's meeting agreed that the town needs a board to oversee the planning and implementation of low- and moderate- income housing.

"We have learned that it is difficult to approach affordable housing in Winchester," Schmitt said. Part of the problem, he added, is the number of boards involved in housing decisions and the problems that occur when trying to coordinate them.

David Mortensen, chairman of the Low and Moderate Income Housing Study Committee, said he does not see

POLICE LOG

Sunday, September 20

At 7:30 p.m. police responded to a report of a breaking and entering at the Parkview Condominiums.

The tenants of the condo left the unit on Friday at 9 p.m. and returned Sunday at 7 p.m. to find that the unit had been broken into, police said.

An intruder had pried open a window in one of the two bedrooms. Three video cassette recorders, an answering machine, two speakers and a Walkman AM/FM radio were stolen. Two large pillowcases were also missing. The value of the stolen goods is $1,070, according to police reports.

A computer and three televisions were not taken, police said.

The window had been replaced on its tracks, but police said the window could be easily removed by lifting it out of the tracks and moving it aside.

The unit is at the end of the floor next to the doorway that leads outside. The front door had no deadbolt, so the intruder could have left that way, police said.

Neighbors did not hear anything unusual, according to police reports.

At 3:35 p.m. police responded to a breaking and entering call from a York Road couple.

The couple left on vacation Sept. 13 and returned home Sept. 20 at 3:30 p.m. to find their house had been broken into, according to police reports.

A rear window had been broken and forced open. All the rooms in the house were searched and the dining room and master bedroom had been ransacked, police said.

The couple noticed a small amount of jewelry missing. Many valuable items were left behind, according to police.

Neighbors noticed a white, mid-size car parked across the street Sept. 18 with two, white females inside. They rang the bell at a house across the street and left the neighborhood when no one answered. No other suspicious activity was noticed by neighbors, according to police.

At 2:11 p.m. the new Muraco principal, Andrea Purcell, noticed two open windows at the school on Bates Road, police said.

She closed the windows and called to ask police to keep a close watch on the building. Purcell said she didn't see any sign of disturbances, according to police.

Friday, September 18

While on patrol at 7:10 p.m., an officer approached a car in the parking lot near Winchester Wine and Spirits occupied by a number of minors and an elderly man who had just purchased some beer. The officer explained to the man, who was from Woburn, the consequences of buying alcohol to minors. The officer also told the minors what legal action could be taken against them. He then told the Woburn man not to go to Wine and Spirits any more, according to police reports.

No arrests were made.

At 6:02 p.m. police were called to the scene of an accident at the intersection of Highland Avenue and Grayson Road.

A 1984 Chevrolet Cavalier driven by a Woburn man and a 1985 Chevrolet Celebrity driven by a Washington Street man collided, according to police.

The Woburn man was not familiar with the area. He was driving east on Grayson and did not stop at the intersection of Highland and Grayson, where there are no traffic controls, police said.

The Cavalier sustained damage to its front end and its right, front quarter panel. The Celebrity sustained damage to its left, front quarter panel and left, front door, police said.

Nobody was injured, according to police.

At 12:45 p.m., police arrived at the scene of an accident at the intersection of Wildwood and Palmer Streets.

A Lexington man driving a 1976 Plymouth station wagon and a Watson Place woman driving a 1986 Ford LTD station wagon came to the four-way stop sign at the same time. The man was headed south on Wildwood and the woman was headed west on Palmer, according to police reports.

Both drivers stopped at the stop signs and then began driving at the same time, police said.

The Lexington man's car sustained left front damage and the Winchester woman's car sustained right front damage, according to police.

Construction will resume this Saturday morning at 8 a.m. and continue as long as necessary.

Aberjona Ladies Auxiliary holds monthly social

The Aberjona Ladies Auxiliary No. 3719 Veterans of Foreign Wars will hold its monthly social at the post quarters on River Street Monday, Sept. 28, at 7:30 p.m. to benefit its charitable endeavors.

Chairman Margaret Donohoe invites the public. Refreshments will be served.

Recreation offers aerobic dance classes

The fall session of jazzerobics begins Sept. 21. Spaces are still available for teenagers and adults.

The classes combine fitness development with choreographed routines. Jazzerobics will firm and tone muscles, improve flexibility and condition the heart and lungs.

Classes meet Mondays and Thursdays from 6:10 to 7:10 p.m. at the Lincoln School gym. A 10-week session costs $35.

The Recreation Department also offers an EasyRobics program designed for the beginner. This choreographed fitness class incorporates low-impact techniques into simple, easy to follow, routines. It meets Mondays and Thursdays from 7:15 to 8 p.m. A six-week session costs $20.

Certified instructor Judy Whitney will teach the classes. Call the Winchester Recreation Department at 721-7125 to register.

Local Republicans hold cocktail party

Local Republicans are again invited to the cocktail party that is sponsored every year at this time by the Winchester Women's Republican Club and the Winchester Republican Town Committee.

This year's party will be attended by representatives of several well-known candidates for political office.

A number of active Republican women have just returned from the convention of the Federation of Republican Women's Clubs in Orlando, Fla. They heard speeches from most of the leading Republican candidates for the presidency. They will give their first-hand impressions of the candidates during the party.

Tickets may also be purchased at Gateway Travel, Saltmarsh Insurance Agency and Ann Blackham's.

The sale of the tickets for the party provides much of the money that allows the two local Republican organizations to assist Republican candidates and to do work that benefits the whole Winchester community.

Group explores housing opportunities

"Home-Hold: Single Parent Resource" will be holding an information session and discussion Sept. 30 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Church of the Epiphany at 70 Church St.

Free admission, free child care, and free transportation are available. Everyone with concerns regarding affordable housing for people of low and modest means is invited, and is encouraged to share his or her ideas and talents.

Home-Hold is a nonprofit organization of single parents who have come together to create solutions to the growing lack of affordable housing for single female heads of households, working people and seniors. Home-Hold explores development of models that will provide ownership opportunities for this population. Home-Hold also encourages cooperative living arrangements to exchange services between people, for example cooperative child care, assistance with elderly needs and transportation to help maintain stability in people's lives.

Topics discussed will be: What is available in Winchester for housing for people of modest income, and what can be done to increase housing opportunities?

For further information call 729-8426.

Picture lending party scheduled

Artists and patrons of the Winchester Art Association scholarship program, "Picture Lending," are preparing for the first party of the current year to be held on Sunday, Sept. 27, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Crandall of 16 Stratford Road. The program has made possible scholarship money for Winchester High School graduates in the visual arts for more than 20 years.

The event offers subscribers and patrons a Sunday afternoon of mingling with artists and viewing demonstrations and six months of living with a piece of original art on loan from the association. At the end of the six months, on March 6, another party will be held at Boodakian Rug Showroom. Then subscribers and patrons will have the choice of a different piece of art to complete the year.

The Art Association welcomes new patrons and subscribers. Call Ann Casey, 729-7158 evenings, or Susan Vrotsos, 729-5854, to join for the subscription price of $20.

Extra points

The Concert Dance Company will be in Winchester schools during the fall to perform "All Feet Can Dance," sponsored in part by the Community Schools Association Enrichment Committee.

FINANCING IS WHAT COUNTS

When you're selling a home, it's not the price that counts as much as the buyer's ability to pay. You can have the best house on the block for sale at a give-away price, but it will never sell to the prospect who loves it but cannot afford it—or thinks he can't afford it.

An experienced Realtor, on the other hand, can be expected to discuss personal matters such as financing with prospects. Prospects will tell the Realtor freely what they would hold back from you. During such frank exchange, the Realtor has the ability and experience to suggest ways to make buying your home possible for such discouraged clients. At our office, we've saved many sales that both Buyer and Seller thought were impossible.

A Realtor can suggest the advantages and drawbacks of 15 as opposed to 30-year mortgages; refer prospects to the bank that's most likely to lend buyers in their situation; and suggest ways of financing that weren't available a few years ago. It pay to sell through a Realtor.

Students celebrate Constitution

To celebrate the 200 anniversary of the signing of the Constitution, elementary school students participated in a variety of events including plays, debates, flag parades and the singing of patriotic songs.

On Sept. 16, all the schools held assemblies to join in the "We the People" celebration centered in Washington, D.C., and televised to schools throughout the country. Students and staff wore red, white, and blue and had the opportunity to pledge allegiance to the flag along with President Ronald Reagan.

The students also "signed on" to the Constitution through a project sponsored by the National Conference for Christians and Jews. Each classroom received a poster to sign. Many teachers required students to earn the privilege of signing by spelling the word constitution or memorizing and reciting the preamble.

On Sept. 17 a representative from each school presented Superintendent of Schools Charles Mitsakos with all the signed "Living Constitutions" from their schools.

In conclusion, the students and faculty of St. Mary's school sang the national anthem, America The Beautiful, and other patriotic songs.

Concert Dance Company comes to Winchester

The schoolchildren of Winchester will have a chance to see the nationally acclaimed Concert Dance Company of Boston in a concert sponsored by the Community Schools Association Enrichment committee this fall. The show, which features rap, folk, classical, jazz, soft-shoe and modern music is called "All Feet Can Dance."

The company has spent the last 19 years exploring the spectrum of contemporary dance, and performing for young audiences throughout New England and the country.

The Events Program at schools in Winchester is supported by the Cultural Education Collaborative's Institute for the Arts, which is funded in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities. The Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities is a state agency whose funds are recommended by the not-for-profit arts-in-education agency.

The CSA Enrichment Committee invites parents to attend. Performances will be on Oct. 6 at Muraco and Vinson-Owen, Oct. 7 at Lynch and Bartlett, Oct. 9 at McCall and St. Mary's, Nov. 4 at Lincoln and Nov. 6 at Ambrose. Morning shows are at 10:15 and afternoon shows are at 1 p.m.

St. Mary's honors Constitution

On Sept. 17, the students and faculty of St. Mary's school gathered in the school hall in honor of the anniversary of the U.S. Constitution.

The school hall was decorated with many colorful banners as well as the American flag. Several students were chosen to narrate readings and excerpts from the Constitution. The rememberance of the U.S. Constitution was greatly emphasized in this school assembly.

Lincoln holds curriculum nights

Lincoln school teachers and School Association are holding three curriculum nights for all parents of Lincoln School students.

The teachers will be in their classrooms to meet parents, highlight the year's curriculum and to explain their expectations of their students.

A School Association room parent will introduce each teacher. The association is providing refreshments after the classroom visits for parents and faculty to get to know each other in a relaxing atmosphere.

On each night, the principal, Dr. Susan Villani, will visit throughout the school to greet parents.

The schedule is as follows:

Tuesday, Sept. 29
Grade 3 — 7:30 p.m.
Grade 4 — 8 p.m.

Young memories to be shared

All Muraco School families, both past and present, are invited to share a cup of coffee and a fond memory with former Muraco School Principal Richard Young Sunday, Sept. 27 from 2 to 4 p.m.

The Nursery School is staffed by Winchester High School juniors and seniors in the early childhood class and supervised by Harriet Nelson. The days are planned carefully by the students with a theme for each day and activities are created to go along with a special topic. Some activities revolve around holidays with storytelling, costumes, and crafts.

Marecek-Zeman leads literacy institute

Dr. Miriam Marecek-Zeman of Marchant Road was a leader and consultant in the Literacy Institute held at Lesley College in July and August. More than 100 teachers, K-6 grades, from Massachusetts and Rhode Island participated in the institute, "Effective Literacy Learning: Models and Methods, A Multicultural Perspective" at the Lesley College campus in Cambridge.

Educators immersed themselves in the latest theories and approaches to literacy learning in a 2½-week program of lectures, demonstrations, and discussions centering on "whole language literacy."

The theory of whole language literacy stems from an international body of research which holds that, like the developmental process of language-learning, young children have a natural impulse towards reading and writing from a very early age. Reading and writing in school thus are seen as developments in a natural process that begins when a child first sees a book or makes scribbles with a pencil.

Marecek-Zeman, literacy consultant to Boston Public Schools, writes frequently for Sesame Street Magazine. She is on the board of advisors for Electric Company Magazine and a consultant to various public school systems as well as publishing houses. She teaches at Wheelock and Boston University and frequently lectures nationally on children's books, her specialty.

COMMENT

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

In the obscurity of legal rhetoric our future unfolds

Something is happening on the national scene that is worthy of note in every city, town and village in America.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is considering the nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court of a man who could damage our freedom irreparably.

Judge Robert Bork talks a very sharp and slippery game. He plays bland about his recent "repackaging" as a moderate as if there were nothing odd about changing more than 20 years' worth of opinions on a week's notice. At his best subdividing an obscure point of law, he is at his worst answering direct questions.

Would you trust Bork? The gut says no. There is something greasy about him.

But how can the case of his confirmation be judged on its merits? It is difficult to comprehend the sophisticated plane on which this appointment process is being played. Judicial restraint, legislative intent, activist judiciary... On these terms and others like them the debate turns. Civilized legalese fills the hallowed chambers of the committee. The actors' dialogue unfolds in ritualized code. The tone is one of judicial scholarship.

On the final day of the Senate hearings, Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania sparred for more than an hour with Bork. The senator studied law at Yale. The nominee taught there.

Specter tried to make Bork admit that the Constitutional framers' original intent is difficult to determine. Specter quoted passages from Bork's own work to support his contention. Specter attempted to corner Bork into agreeing that original intent is not any better a measure of good law than, say, judicial precedent. Bork admitted as much, but has often written that he is in favor of strict interpretation of the Constitution. It remains for him to show how he can reconcile the lack of specifics in the founding document with the requirement to follow it as much as possible to the letter.

The Supreme Court has made a number of important decisions in recent years based on the Constitution, to be sure, but also on "values rooted in the conscience and tradition of the people," as Specter describes it. Bork has spoken out against court rulings on the right to privacy, abortion, affirmative action and equal protection. Many of these rulings were passed by a single vote of the Supreme Court. Roe vs. Wade, the decision to legalize abortion, is one of the better-known cases that passed on a 5-4 vote.

All the dancing around in the Senate committee clouds the issue, which is in fact quite simple. If even Bork admits that on the margin two perfectly ethical, competent judges can come up with opposite opinions from the same set of facts, then the matter of choosing a high-court judge is really one of selecting a man for his judgment, beliefs and character.

Bork has contended that legislative acts are the source of law, and that the judiciary should take its cue from the executive branch, not previous court rulings. However, he applies the opposite logic when the executive branch is in conflict with big business. Then he takes up the private sector's cause.

His voting record in the lower courts puts him clearly on the side of the government against civil rights and on the side of business against government.

In high-level corporate appointments, many intangible factors determine whether a given candidate will ultimately be hired. His loyalty, work attitude, team spirit and character are taken into account as well as his demonstrated competence and credentials. No aplogies are made if management decides not to bring him on board. No excuse is necessary.

Senators Kennedy and Biden are wasting their breath trying to catch Bork out on a point of law. If confirmed, Bork will have the right to rule on the American people's lives until he is no longer able. The committee has only a few weeks to rule on whether to give or deny him the right to do that.

We have reached a blatantly political moment. Those opposed to Bork have just a short period to rally support for their position. And the forces of Bork know the time to act is now. They have Bork purring like a pussycat through the media to please the public. The fingerprints of the Far Right are in evidence in the form of tactics reminiscent of those employed by G. Gordon Liddy; to wit, the attacks on Biden and Kennedy, his most vocal detractors.

The sudden exposure of Biden's plagiaristic past drove the Bork story off page 1 of last Saturday's New York Times. The next day Bill Safire put out an opinion piece disparaging Kennedy's verbal abilities.

Judge the judge by his friends and enemies. Do we really want someone who objected to a court finding that a married couple has the right to use contraceptives in their own home? A man who doesn't see the need for suspects to have their rights read to them? A man who thinks separate can ever be equal?

Specter is one of the undecided members of the committee. He and a few others represent the swing votes in the committee's decision to send the confirmation on to the full Senate body. If the committee members don't like him, now is their time to speak out. They are not there to judge his competence, but to decide whether they want a man of his character to occupy one of the most powerful posts of government.

LETTERS

WHS graduate promotes closer family ties

TO THE EDITOR:

Are you weary of social problems that are hopeless for just one person to cure?

This letter is directed to everyone, including myself.

Do we (adults) think we're so keen on how others respond to us,and how we interpret other's "body language" that we puff ourselves up thinking "I know what that person is thinking?" And maybe even interrupt that person while he speaks thinking that we already know what he's going to say? Do we pay that much attention to ourselves when we're around children?

Do we wave to children in a friendly manner, with a smile on our face as we go past them, or as they ride bikes by? Or do we think, "From this child's perspective I may be a robber, or a kidnapper, or a rapist like I've warned my kids so many times about? Maybe I should hurry by so he doesn't worry, and get frightened."

I've started to diverge already, before I've even written what I intend to write about. What I've written is pertinent though. Don't let your left hand know what your right hand is doing — it's true.

There's a lot of (I was going to use "hype," but chose to look through a thesaurus to find another word. I scanned the hyp's to find a reasonable substitute; mesmorize has tones of what I want to say, but I think I'm going to use) fascination with "going back to school."

Food companies use it as an excuse to advertise, Mall Stores use it as an excuse to advertise,...

Do we use it as an excuse to talk with children about what they think about? Do we use it as an excuse to strengthen children's creativity? Whether by encouraging a child to read, therefore use his imagination to live, experience, and wonder- (having questions about) a book, as opposed to looking over the text; or even reading with (to, and listening to) a child? Or by asking him to improvise on a piece of music that he's learning? Do we use it as an excuse to tell children humorous and/or interesting stories about our childhood? Even to humble ourselves by telling about how we always didn't have a lot of friends, or get As, or how we didn't like to practice or read, until we learned how to make it fun.

Do we use it as an excuse to Mall Around, and stock up on things that are already stocked-up?

I advise the removal of Sunday Paper supplements which portray school as a fashion show and not a place to meet friends, make friends, and especially, learn.

Encourage children to play outside. Also spend more time reading and less time watching the television.

It's been said that "a man's home is his castle." Let's not have it be a prison for children who should instead be climbing trees, reading books on the porch, or on a blanket on the grass, or improving their musical talents.

Parent group thanks EnKa

TO THE EDITOR:

The Parent to Parent Committee, a program of the Winchester Interagency Council, once again owes an enormous debt of gratitude to the ENKA Society for their continued and most generous support of our parenting programs.

Parent to Parent has been in existence for six years and this past year alone we provided three major guest lectures with Dr. Robert Brooks, Dr. James Garvin and Dr. Susan Swap. The theme of self-esteem was explored from the younger child through the young adult. We also contributed to the spring program by Joseph Pearce on the "Magical Child." In addition we provided five series of small-group, parent discussion workshops for periods of six to eight weeks.

These very successful workshops served groups of 8-10 parents with youngsters at all levels of development. Parent to Parent contracted with Howard Sherman and David Margolis, a local counseling group, to provide this segment of the program. Positive comments and evaluations continue to be received from the many parents who participated such as: "These discussions provided new ways of thinking about the situations and problems one encounters in raising children and new insights into the underlying causes of problems."

"It's so comforting to know that your problems are not unique and when you share them they lighten."

"This program is a great service to the community — I can't believe it's free!"

Finally recognition is due to the dedicated members of the advisory committee who have devoted many hours to the planning and implementation of these programs including: Anne Moore, Carolyn Angeles, Gail MacNeill, Darcy Fitzgerald, Kay Nash, David Purdy, Kay Tiffany, Richard Witt, Susan Villani, Vandy French, and the many others who have contributed in the past.

Thank you ENKA for your commitment to Winchester and its families.

Kielbasa King reigns in Chicopee

By TERRY MAROTTA

Last week, in a double celebration of Polish phenomena, the Pope came to America and the 14th Annual World Kielbasa Festival came to Chicopee.

Now the Pope is a man who looks like a cross between John Glenn and Gerald Ford; you expect him to speak with the flat twang of a heartland coach instead of the thick and throaty accents of Central Europe.

But Chicopee is a town that looks like Chicopee and nothing else. It is a small burg in central Massachusetts, with a paper that prints a whole page of Polish news, in Polish. "No-winy Polskie," the page is called. "Tem do Widzenia," it ends each week. "So long for now."

I wanted badly to cover the 14th Annual World Kielbasa Festival, which was put on by the Chicopee Chamber of Commerce. A piece about such an event would make wonderful reading, I thought, and constitute a nice thick slice of American pie.

Billed as a four-day extravaganza, it promised to have it all: Joey Smola's Velvetones and the Polkabration Dancers; Eddie Blazonczyk and Lenny Gmulka; Stash Golomka and Miss Chicopee herself; even a Polka Mass (they must mean a Polish Mass, I thought to myself, reading the literature and picturing altar boys and communicants, all wildly swirling).

Mostly, though, it had kielbasa, that piquant Polish sausage that ambles along a while, makes a U turn, and doubles back to bite itself on the tail.

Last year, at the 13th Annual Festival, they had a kielbasa that weighed in at a whopping 412 pounds, and was 26 feet 3 inches long.

"Meet King Kielbasa!" the pamphlet said this year. "How big will it be in 1987????? Come and find out for yourself!!!!!"

In the photo of last year's King, a vast dark looping thing fills the foreground, behind which cower several folks in skirts and sunglasses, T-shirts and a feedcap, wearing, respectively, expressions of joy, wonderment, surprise and deep solemnity.

I'd have loved to see this year's King.

Most especially, I'd have loved to see one of the final events, to me the culminating event of the entire festival: a Kielbasa Eating Contest, scheduled for 4 o'clock on the last afternoon. This did I anticipate with some wonderment of my own; this did I truly wish to witness. ("A Kielbasa Eating Contest?" asked my friend the Registered Nurse. "I hope they have a cardiologist standing there.")

Whether they did or not, I can't say. Rain such as can only fall in New England fell that day, in sheets and pillowcases and buckets and pails. The turnpike to Chicopee was a river. The last time it rained that hard was when the same Pope came to America eight years ago, and made his first stop in the city of Boston.

He said Mass on the Boston Common, where patriots once raised rabble and Puritans once hanged witches; where cows once lay in the grass, and even today lovers lie, kissing, and bums recline, sleeping it off.

To this same Common record numbers came, in the rain, to see the Pope. Years later, John Denver came, in a similar deluge. It rained so hard, water poured off our umbrellas, down the necks of our slickers and into our clothes, puddling at our bottoms; so that 10,000 grownups knew once again how it felt to grow wet from the inside out.

John Denver gave up that night, as it happened: he didn't go on with the show. The Pope did, though, rain or no rain.

As for those who geared up for the Kielbasa Eating Contest, I can't say how they made out amidst the torrents. I bet they had a swell time, though.

I hope I can get there for next year's festival, maybe that gentle good man John Paul can come too. He'd love it, I have no doubt.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Volume 13-Report No. 37
Massachusetts House and Senate
September 18, 1987
Bills signed into law in 1987

The House and Senate. The House and Senate are now scheduled to reconvene in formal session and end the summer recess the week of September 20.

While more than 8000 bills have been filed for consideration in the 1987 session, only a small portion of those have actually been approved by the House and Senate on roll call votes and signed into law by Governor Dukakis. This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" updates action on 10 bills approved by both branches and signed into law.

New Positions(S 1658)- Approved by House 104-38, Senate 24-6 was the bill creating the new position of assistant vice-chair of the Senate Ways and Means Committee along with a $7500 pay hike.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted no.

Senator Richard Kraus did not vote.

Seat Belts(H 5217)- Approved by House 80-59, Senate 24-8 was the bill requiring children from ages 5 to 12 to wear seat belts and fining the driver $25 if a violation occurs in his or her vehicle.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Kraus voted yes.

Pay Hike(S 1833)- Approved by House 93-58, Senate 31-8 was the legislative pay raise bill hiking legislators' base $30,000 salaries to $40,992 by next year and giving a $10,000 hike to constitutional officers. The measure includes an "emergency preamble" making the bill effective immediately and it allows automatic future pay hikes for legislators by tying their salaries to those of state workers' unions.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Kraus voted yes.

Emergency Preamble(S 1833)- House 100-47, Senate 26-11, each gained the two-thirds vote necessary to attach an "emergency preamble" to the legislative pay raise bill. This made the bill effective immediately rather than in the usual 90 days. The other effect of the preamble is that it keeps the law in effect until November 1988, despite the fact that opponents have gathered signatures to place the issue onthe 1988 ballot. Without the emergency preamble, the law would have been suspended after opponents gathered the signatures and would not have gone into effect unless the voters approved it in 1988.

A Yea vote is for the emergency preamble. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Kraus voted yes.

Fiscal 1988 Budget(H 5858)- Approved by House 123-25, Senate 30-3 was the $11 billion fiscal 1988 state budget.

A Yea vote is for the budget. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Kraus voted yes.

Prop 2½(H 4336)- Approved by House 96-49, Senate 24-8 was the bill changing from two-thirds to a majority the amount of voters necessary to allow a community to make a major override of Proposition 2½ and increase property taxes beyond 5 percent.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Kraus voted yes.

Housing(H 5218)- Approved by House 141-0, Senate 28-0 was the $340 million housing package for construction of housing for low and moderate income families, the handicapped and the elderly.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh did not vote.

Kraus voted yes.

Hazardous Waste(H 5867)- Approved by House 133-0, Senate 27-0, was the $81 million package to clean up the state's hazardous waste sites.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Kraus voted yes.

Senate Districts(S 1965)- Approved by House 91-56, Senate 33-2 was the plan redistricting the state's 40 Senate districts.

A Yea vote is for the plan. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Kraus voted yes.

Phipps opens antique shop

Christel Phipps of Cambridge Street, owner of Armoire Connection Inc., has opened European Manor, a shop that specializes in fine French printed fabrics and French and European antiques and accessories.

Phipps grew up in Geneva, Switzerland, and makes frequent buying trips to Europe to search for pieces to sell in the shop.

The shop, at 556 Washington St. in Wellesley, is open Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and stays open until 8 p.m. on Thursdays. It brings together three established companies: Armoire Connections Inc, Les Olivades and Vieille France.

Phipps said that European Manor evolved from her wish to bring wonderful old pieces to the New World.

"There is a place for this style in the residential and business world of today -- corporate, restaurants, hotels, whatever," she said. "Its charm is in its versatility. It goes not only in a country setting, but also in a more formal environment."

Still Point Foundation gives workshops

The Still Point Foundation will present three one-day workshops in Winchester this Fall.

"Loving: How Good It Can Get!" is for couples who want to reach the highest expression of love possible, beyond what may be present now. It is an inquiry into love as a way of seeing, rather than a feeling or a technique. The leaders are Joel Baehr, Winchester psychotherapist and minister, and Norma "Randy" Nelson, a therapist in Greenwich, Conn. The workshop will be given at the First Congregational Church in Winchester on Oct. 10 and Nov. 7, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Letting God Be God" is for anyone interested in discovering how our understanding of, and relationship with, God is shaped by our relationships with people, places, and things. The workshop presents the possibility of a relationship with God beyond the limits of relationships with which we are already familiar. It will be given at the Church of the Epiphany Sept. 26, and at the Unitarian Church Nov. 14, both from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Leaders are Joel Baehr, Terry Rosenberg and Vinnie Olson.

"Belonging" is an inquiry into how much being human is influenced by belonging and the need for it. It will be conducted Oct. 17.

"Letting Go of Eden" is a two-day, week-end retreat, next given Dec. 11 to 13 at the Marist House in Framingham.

The Still Point Foundation exists to support persons in discovering the power and possibility of spirituality. Still Point acknowledges all traditions. It affirms the belonging of all in an atmosphere of harmony among differences. Bee sting reactions may be treatable

Most individuals find occasional bee stings painful nuisances that are easily handled by applying a remedy such as meat tenderizer, ice, or an antiseptic cream to the area near the bite. Once the pain subsides, the remaining itch usually goes away in several days.

But for some people, bee stings can result in medical emergencies. The American College of Emergency Physicians states, "Approximately one to two million Americans are allergic to the venom of insects. A person who is highly allergic can develop anaphylactic shock and die within a few minutes of being stung."

Serious allergic reactions, called generalized reactions, fall into three classifications. Children who develop first-class reactions, or hives, are usually watched carefully for further stings and may receive injections to reduce their sensitivity to future stings. Adults may be desensitized if a physician feels it is necessary.

Patients of any age who experience second or third class reactions (difficulty breathing, loss of consciousness and hypotension or low blood pressure) are immediately referred to an allergist for treatment. If a skin test to determine sensitivity is positive, patients usually begin the series of desensitizing injections described above.

Patients who have experienced serious allergic reactions receive information which describes generalized reactions and their treatment.

They may also elect to wear a medical alert bracelet identifying them as "at risk for bee sting reactions." Those at risk are told to carry antihistamine to be taken following a sting, whether or not a reaction seems to be occuring. Physicians may prescribe a bee sting kit containing epinephrine for their use.

Dr. Catherine L. O'Brien, an allergist who is a member of the Winchester Hospital Medical Staff, comments, "Although most children with general reactions to bee stings have less serious reactions as they grow older, it is still necessary to be aware of the importance of prompt treatment of any general reaction to a bee sting." Prompt treatment may reduce the severity of a general reaction that might occur if the individual is bitten in the future.

Support group aids cancer patients

The Social Services Department at Winchester Hospital sponsors a free program for cancer patients, their families and friends.

Each discussion focuses on a different issue: sharing of experiences, explanations of treatment options, presentations of nutrition options, techniques to maximize the body's defenses to aid recovery, explanations of community and hospital resources available as a support system, and discussions of skills patients and their caregivers can develop.

The group meets the first and third Wednesday of each month from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Social Service Department. Its next meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 7.

For more information and registration, contact the Social Services Department at Winchester Hospital, 729-9000, Ext. 3104.

Bloodmobile scheduled

The American Red Cross will hold a bloodmobile Monday, Oct. 4, at St. Eulalia's Church from 2:30 to 7:30 p.m.

For more information call 665-1351.

Hearing checks are available on the telephone

Between today at Wednesday, Sept. 30, Winchester resident can call 665-9075 for a pre-recorded hearing check.

The testing is being offered by the Atlantic Audiological Association Inc., to alert callers to possible hearing loss.

Hearing Check was developed by the Hearing Industries Association, a trade association that represents firms that manufacture or distribute hearing health-care products, including hearing aids or their component parts.

The number is a pre-recorded message consisting of a series of tones at different loudnesses. The tones are presented twice to allow the caller to test both ears.

The test is a preliminary screening only and does not substitute for a professional hearing evaluation.

Get eyes ready for school

Eighty percent of all school learning is visual in nature.

In the process of getting ready to go back to school, making sure that your student is visually prepared for learning must be at the top of your list of things to do. If he is not visually prepared or if he has an interfering visual problem, your child may be educationally handicapped.

According to Winchester optometrist, Albert Sherburne, "Normal health and structure of the eyes do not guarantee that a child will be able to use those eyes efficiently in the world he must see and interpret. The classroom and learning demand visual abilities and skills that every child must have before entering school if he is to be successful there."

Dr. Sherburne emphasizes several important areas a parent can observe to determine the normalcy of a child's visual development:

Appearance of the eyes. Most abnormal conditions will be apparent. None should ever be allowed to continue unchecked.

Evidence of discomfort. Rubbing, avoidance of bright light and keeping the eyes closed for much of the time are obvious signs of discomfort.

Attention span. The ability to fixate that begins when an infant first recognizes his parents is an important skill necessary to being able to stay on the visual tasks of the classroom.

Visual scanning. Very important to reading is the ability to move the eyes quickly and accurately without too much head movement.

Orientation and localization. Learning to scan for detail and developing an awareness of surroundings mark the beginning of a child's orientation skills. He learns where he is so he can begin to judge distances and directions for his movements.

Visual-manual integration. Eye-hand coordination is the foundation for most other skills and will determine more of what the child learns than any other combination of abilities.

"Any difficulty a child shows in any of these areas should be clinically investigated," according to Dr. Sherburne. "The observations mentioned above are limited and should not be considered a substitute for a complete clinical appraisal of a child's visual abilities."

Donations still sought as Fall Fiesta Fair time draws near

By LEONOR RICH
Special to the Star

As the dates for the Winchester Seniors Association annual Fall Fiesta Fair at the Jenks Senior Center draw near, a last minute call for donations of saleable items is issued to motivate those who have not done so to respond to the urgent plea. This activity is one of the most important means of raising money to operate the building.

Ruth Ayres, chairman of the costume jewelry table, appeals for all kinds of decorative brooches, earrings, bracelets and necklaces for her booth, which is a main attraction at the fair. These gifty items have to be priced and boxed, a time-consuming chore, so she and her committee will appreciate an early receipt of donations of items to be sold.

Electrical appliances, books, knit goods of all sizes, games and toys, white elephants, boutique items, gift shop articles and goods baked on the days of the fair will be on sale on Oct. 7 from 2 p.m. to 9 p.m. and on Oct. 8 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

A catered Italian dinner will be served in the new auditorium from 5 to 7 p.m. continuously on Oct. 7. This is the first time that the entire fair will be under one roof. Tickets must be purchased prior to the event to inform the caterer concerning the number of people to be served. Obtain them at the Jenks Senior Center Reception Desk on weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

An innovation this year is the raffle on a Ford Escort Pony sedan car. To have a chance to win, purchase tickets for this expensive prize at the Jenks Senior Center. The car will be awarded to the holder of the lucky number on Oct. 8 at 3 p.m.

Come to buy! Enjoy! Relax with friends at the Snack Bar! Help to make this the most successful fair ever held by the W.S.A. during the past decade!

Sachems squeeze by Somerville

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester High football team began its defense of the Division I Super Bowl title with a hard-fought, 7-0 victory over a much improved Somerville High team.

The Sachems used a solid defense led by co-captain Frank Gianci who had 10 tackles, two sacks, and three blocked passes. On offense, the Sachems struggled much of the time but had two key drives when they needed them. Once in the beginning of the second half when they scored and their final drive of the game when they were able to chew up most of the final minutes were the only times the offense was effective.

In the first half, quarterback Mike Feeley and running back Scott Garvey took turns trying to penetrate the defense. Garvey had trouble getting outside while Feeley had trouble completing his passes. The Somerville offense had even less success against the Sachem defense and the two teams went into the locker room scoreless at halftime.

On their first posession of the second half, Feeley and the Sachems put together what would be the only scoring drive of the day. Cort Boulanger became Feeley's primary receiver on the drive as he made a couple of clutch first-down receptions including one on a third and long that kept the drive alive. Feeley capped the drive as he kept the ball on the option and galloped 22 yards for the touchdown. Clayton Wight added the extra point and Winchester had the lead.

Somerville came right back with a drive of its own on the next posession. They drove down to the Sachem 25 before they were victimized by the penalty flag. After it appeared Somerville had scored the tying touchdown, a holding penalty was called and it killed their momentum. Two plays later, Garvey had the first of his two interceptions and Somerville would never really threaten from there on after.

Other key defensive standouts for the Sachems include Phil Svahn and Todd Crandall. Svahn had a fumble recovery and blocked a punt while Crandall had the third Sachem sack.

Coach Manny Marshall also used a couple of trick plays in the game. The best one was the fake punt which had Chris Umscheid sneaking around right end and picking up a key first down.

The Sachems begin the defense of their Middlesex League title Friday night when they visit Wakefield.

Nine-year girls soccer streak goes by boards

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester High girls' soccer team saw their nine-year Middlesex League undefeated string snapped last week by an inspired Wakefield team, 4-2, at Skillings Field.

The Warriorettes stunned the Sachemettes with three first half goals. But Winchester regained its composure in the second half and played good aggressive soccer but came up just a little short in their season opener.

With Winchester introducing 10 new starters to their lineup, an experienced Wakefield team had to be licking their chops for a chance to make up for all the frustration the Sachemettes had caused them, particularly their opening round ouster in last year's tournament.

The first half was dominated by Wakefield as they kept the ball in Winchester's end of the field most of the time. The Sachemette defense and goalie Allyson Price held them at bay for a little while and Winchester even had a couple of golden oppurtunities to score themselves but were impatient and their shots missed the net. In short, they looked like a team in their first game of the season while Wakefield appeared to be in mid-season form.

The Warriorettes finally penetrated the scoring column on a shot which rolled across the crease and banked in off the far post. This goal opened up the floodgates and Wakefield quickly followed with two more scores and Winchester found itself down at halftime, 3-0.

But with a lot of pride at stake for Winchester and the Warriorettes celebrating a little prematurely at halftime, the Sachemettes came out smoking in the second half. Cara McDonough stepped in and led the offensive charge for Winchester and her goal put the Sachemettes on the scoreboard early in the second half.

When Julie Sexeny followed up a McDonough shot to close the gap to one goal, the game picked up to a playoff level of intensity.

The Sachemettes, led by McDonough, Sexeny, Beth Nowell,

Tourney completed

Special to the Star

The Winchester Tennis Association Fall Town Tennis Tournament was finally completed last week despite delays caused by darkness and post-school athletics.

In fact, most of the second set of the boys' 15-and-under doubles championship was played in near total darkness but the combatants were determined to complete the match.

Didi Chen and Steve Ferazani ended up outlasting Albie Keenan and Mike Houllahan, 6-3, 6-2. Chen and Ferazani managed to handle almost everything their larger opponents could hit at them and their shot placement frustrated Keenan and Houllahan throughout the match.

In the girls' 15-and-under doubles championship, Leann Intravia and Carrie Tozza defeated Kate Fuller and Elysa Aswad, 7-5, 4-6, 7-5, in a match which took two days to complete. After the girls split the first two sets, darkness crept in and the third set was postponed to the following day. Intravia and Tozza then came through in the pivotal third set to dethrone last year's champions.

In the boys' 12-and-under doubles final, Peter French and Michael Szczepanski triumphed over Peter Fiorentino and Chris Senna. It was the second year in a row these two pairs have met in the finals with the same results in both matches.

The Winchester Star would like to thank tournament organizer Marty Fuller and Chris Anderson of Cambridgeport Savings Bank for their assistance in covering this year's event.

Desmarteaux, Intravia wins the tennis titles

The Winchester Tennis Association 1987 fall tournament came to a rainy but successful close last Sunday as the remaining quarter, semi and final matches were completed.

Despite being forced indoors once again, play continued close to schedule. Quarter and semi-final matches were played throughout the day Saturday. These matches were the first time that seeded players met each other; spectators saw some exciting tennis as a result. Saturday's victorious entrants advanced to the finals, which were played Sunday.

Lou Desmarteaux won the men's singles for the third time in a well-played match against newcomer Lance James. James made some unbelievable gets throughout the match, but Desmarteaux partnered with Neil Hurley, also won the men's doubles title, defeating the ever-present and threatening team of Alex Popp and Bill Wolfe in a hard-hitting match.

A familiar name will be etched on the Women's Singles trophy once again. The baseline marathon between Laura Tozza and Diane Intravia drew more and more spectators as it went into a third hour. After losing the first set to Tozza, Intravia came back to win the second set in a tiebreaker and then took the third. Both young women played a great match and unfortunately for the others, they will probably both be back next year.

After a 20-minute break, Tozza teamed up with Mary Whelan to meet the top seeds Mary Golden and Joan Byrne in the Women's Doubles final. Tozza and Whelan, making very few errors, proved to be too tough for the former town champions, and went on to take the match in two tough sets.

The Senior Men's Singles final found Ron Salter playing Will Aldrich for the second year in a row. After long rallys and steady play, Salter won the match in two sets to capture his fifth consecutive title.

In the Mixed Doubles final, Joan Byrne and Bill Wolfe were defending their title against the brother-sister team of Jim Willing and Debbie Willing Carson. Willing's powerful serve and angled volleys, coupled with Carson's steady groundstrokes and well-placed lobs enabled them to get by Byrne and Wolfe and win the Mixed Doubles title.

Laura Tozza takes a break from her battle for the women's singles trophy against Diane Intravia. Intravia eventually won, 4-6, 7-6, (7-3), 6-4.

Boys win first game

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester High boys' soccer team got off to a great start last week as they knocked off rival Wakefield, 3-1, and then coasted past Melrose by the same score.

In both contests the opponents scored first before the Sachems struck back for three unanswered goals.

In the season opener against Wakefield, the Warriors took advantage of a close penalty call to take the early lead. After a tripping foul was called deep in Winchester territory, the Sachems argued with the referee while an alert Warrior walked in unchallenged and scored.

But Wakefield let up after they scored and when coach Gene Bouley made some adjustments in his team's offensive attack, the Sachems took control. Ken Fowler scored Winchester's first goal of the season with only 22 seconds left in the first half.

In the second half, Winchester took control territorially but they only managed to hit the post twice. Finally, with less than 10 minutes remaining, Vandy French scored on a feed from Fowler. French added some insurance a few minutes later when he scored on a rebound of Paul Erbafina's crossbar-clanking shot.

Against Melrose, number one goaltender Andy Shao, making his first start, was rudely greeted by the Red Raiders as they scored on a breakaway in the opening minutes of the game.

Erbafina got the Sachems on the board in the first half as he scored off a penalty kick. He continued his onslaught in the second half as he blasted the go-ahead goal past the Melrose goalie.

Matt Rotondi was credited with the third Sachem goal when the ball deflected off a Melrose defenseman and into the Red Raider net.

Cross Country team wins

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Winchester High boys' cross country team opened their season with an impressive, 18-39 victory over Wakefield while the girls' team had trouble keeping up with the Warriorettes and lost, 16-46.

The Sachems were led by Dave McClintock who finished on top with a time of 14:11. Co-captain Mike Aldrich came in second with a time of 14:50 as Winchester went on to take five of the first six places.

Jason Kuberski finished fourth with a time of 16:02 and was followed closely by teammates Jesse DeGeorge, 16:03, and Jon Sudbury, 16:09, as Winchester took total command of the race.

Tucker Brandt rounded out the top 10 with a time of 16:54.

The girls' squad was led by Laura Tozza who finished fifth with a time of 20:35. Jennifer Lee was eighth, 23:26, while Sarah Fitzpatrick came in 10th, with a time of 25:54.

Streak

Denise Chabot, Amy Binding, and Laura Rutherford, continually stormed the Warriorette net but were unable to score. Several shots missed by inches, two hit the post, and when McDonough arced a beautiful shot that banged off the crossbar, the Sachemettes had to wonder if fate had caught up to them.

The Sachemettes backs were broken late in the game when a Winchester defenseman's attempt to head the ball out of the zone backfired and went in the net for the final margin, 4-2.

Superintendent tracks progress of test group

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Superintendent of Schools Charles Mitsakos will continue to follow the progress of a sample group of students throughout this year.

Mitsakos studied a 2-percent sample of Winchester's school population, 49 students, during the 1986-87 school year. He presented a report on his finding to the committee Tuesday and said he wishes to continue working with the same students.

Mitsakos said he considered using a new group, but decided that, since he did not meet with high school students until the second half of the year, he could get a better idea of their progress if he followed them again for another year.He said, "The students will be more open."

He said he realized there were inherent biases in using the same students: principals and teachers will be aware of who the students are and may give them special attention. But he said he thinks the benefits outweigh the problems.

Mitsakos also questioned the students' parents about their reaction to the school system. Out of a possible five, parents rated the schools a 4.2, Mitsakos said.

Many teachers, the parents said, try to work with students as individuals, Mitsakos' report stated.

While parents were generally very satisfied with the school system, they did identify two areas in which they felt the system is lacking.

One area involved those students who the report describes as "slow acheivers but not in special education -- the low 'C' student and the student who doesn't have a lot of self esteem or who is not self-motivated."

They also said they would like to see alternative means of communication between teachers and parents in junior high and high school.

Mitsakos asked the students what qualities they thought made a good teacher. Good teachers, the students said, take time to make sure everybody understands the material and make hard work seem easy.

They are concerned with individual students' behavior and talk to them about problems they may be having. Good teachers have a sense of humor, but not at the expense of a student. They are consistent.

A bad teacher, the students said, does not give them help when they are having trouble. Bad teachers are dull. They teach too fast. "They demolish kids by making sarcastic comments or ridiculing your friends in front of the class," Mitsakos quoted one high school student as saying.

If I were superintendent for a day...

Students said they would have more snow days, eliminate scheduling two big tests in a day, and not assign homework on weekends or holidays.

High school students said they would reduce class-rank pressure. All secondary students requested more time between classes and the elimination of warm-up exercises in gym class.

On the other hand, elementary students wanted longer gym classes. Their other concern was that their chicken nugget lunch be served warm.

The school system has begun to address these concerns and will continue to do so in the future, he added.

SENIOR NEWS

years and is cognizant of the operation of the entire program. With her background and training, she will have much expertise to bring to this very important service committee.

Both the Council on Aging and the Winchester Seniors Association sponsor the M.O.W. program. Several other Winchester organizations give financial contributions that make M.O.W. possible: the En Ka Society, the Rotary Club, Church Women United and many Winchester churches as well as individual donors.

Founded in 1978, the Winchester M.O.W. serves more than 30 Winchester residents at a given period who are essentially home-bound because of surgery or severe illnesses. Nutritious, well-balanced meals at cost for five days a week make it possible for patients to leave the hospital sooner to convalesce at home. Meals are prepared and packed in the Winchester Hospital kitchen by the hospital's food service staff and delivered to the homes by volunteer drivers.

The Advisory Committee consists of representatives of Winchester Hospital's Social Service staff, Food Services Committee of the Winchester Seniors Association, the EnKa Society, Church Women United, and the volunteer drivers of M.O.W. Serving with Chairperson Hilde Zerwekh will be the vice chairman, secretary, and treasurer of the Advisory Committee.

The M.O.W. program is of vital importance to the entire community since neither age nor financial background are the factors used in accepting patients. It is a non-profit organization, providing one hot dinner and a cold supper daily with the exception of holidays and weekends.

Volunteers who deliver the meals to the clients work individually or with partners, picking up meals at the Winchester Hospital and going into the homes to leave them where patients can get them.

They work on a regular schedule with the paid part-time coordinator of the program, Marilyn Georgis, who both administers and supervises volunteers and services.

The M.O.W. program always needs volunteer drivers who are willing to use their own cars. Contact Marilyn Georgis before 10 a.m. at 729-4646 in order to be placed on the available list. It is a rewarding service in terms of giving assistance to people in need of helping hands.

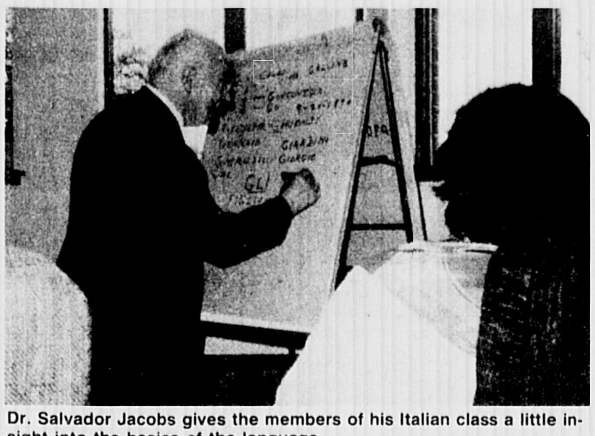
New language class at Jenks

Under the able instruction of Dr. Salvador Jacobs, the first class of Italian got off to a good start in obtaining some language basics for future travels in beautiful Italy on the Mediterranean Sea. Sixteen seniors are beginning with eagerness to explore a new language.

Neighborhood network

Paula Giarrizzo from the Woburn Council for Social Concern will be the guest speaker at the Jenks Senior Center Sept. 25 at 10:30 a.m. The presentation relates to youth from ages 13 to 18 who are in dire need of temporary homes where they can feel friendliness and kindness.

Come to be informed about the tempestuous lives of too many adolescents. Find out how temporary shelter can relieve critical situations that will change the course of many of these young lives.



Dr. Salvador Jacobs gives the members of his Italian class a little insight into the basics of the language.

Mystery trip

Two bus loads, or 96 people, can travel to see the foliage on Oct. 14. The sight-seers leave Jenks Senior Center at 11:30 a.m. and return in the vicinity of 4:30 p.m. Helen Murphy and/or Agnes Blyth will be glad to hear from people who desire to be passengers on the Mystery trip.

The food choices will be roast stuffed breast of chicken or baked stuffed haddock with egg sauce.

Monthly movies and VCR presentations at Jenks

Beginning on Oct. 2, a Video Tape Recording (VCR) will be presented on the first Friday of each month at 1:30 p.m. in the Meeting Room of the Jenks Senior Center.

The first presentation is entitled, "Cocoon." This 1985 production in color presents some veteran actors including Don Ameche, Wilford Brimley and Maureen Stapleton, among others.

The story deals with a group of senior citizens, all still quite active, who are given a second chance at being young with the arrival of Antareans, advanced beings from another planet. It is a moving story with a fanciful scientific twist.

The 1958 color movie, "Gigi," will be shown Oct. 16. It is a delightful story featuring Leslie Caron, Louis Jourdan, Maurice Chevalier and Hermione Gingold. Some memorable tunes are presented. The film was a winner of nine Academy Awards including Best Picture.

The public is invited to enjoy the two hour movie. Light refreshments will be served.

Rug hooking class

Make a reservation at the Jenks Senior Center Reception Desk for membership in the new rug-hooking class which begins Oct. 28 at 9:30 a.m. There will be meetings of the group twice a month.

A substantial amount of material has been given to the Jenks Senior Center to be used in the rug-hooking class. Here is a valuable opportunity to create a rug to add decor to the home of each participating class member.

Church Women United luncheon

The first luncheon of the season given by the Church Women United will be held at St. Mary's Church Parish Hall on Oct. 6 at noon.

Make reservations between Sept. 28 and Oct. 3 with Marjorie Berger (729-4693) or Mary Collins (729-6285).

Town to consider varied items

is ready, the selectmen will have to sponsor an article to transfer the property or create a long-term lease; petition the Legislature for the use of park land; and possibly rezone the property.

The selectmen can vote to place articles on the warrant after it has been closed.

Another selectmen-sponsored article is the accpetance of a Massachusetts General Law that would allow the town to fine violators of town rules, regulations, ordinances and bylaws.

Other petitioned articles include one to designate a downtown district where alcoholic beverages may be served; the sale of lot "J" on Brookside Avenue to Anthony Grassia; the aquisition by the town of Horn Pond Mountain; and the creation of a commission to study the Fire Department.

Barry McNutt sponsored two articles. One would increase employee life insurance from $2,000 to $5,000. The other would give town employees the power to bargain for a greater share of health insurance to be paid by the town.

The Winchester Housing Authority sponsored an article for the appropriation of $132,000 to the WHA. The money will supplement state funds and linkage payments to complete the five units of Chapter 705 housing currently under way.

The Board of Library Trustees's article calls for the acceptance of gifts from the family and friends of Betsy G. Morton.

Seven articles were previously voted on to the warrant including the sale and rezoning of the Woburn Loop property. Selectman Robert Deering said Monday night that the abutters' final plans for use of the Loop are almost completed. The land is available for passive use only. Passive uses include parking lots, driveways, and open space, Planning Board Chairman Maryann McCall-Taylor said. No structures will be built on the land.

The selectmen sponsored two articles that propose improvements to Winchester's planning for low and moderate income housing and community growth; the creation of a Housing Partnership Board and a Community Development Director.

The Conservation Commission drafted a conservation wetlands bylaw that will appear at Town Meeting.

One of two zoning changes sponsored by the Planning Board is on the warrant. The article to amend the dimensional zoning bylaw will remain on the warrant, but the selectmen Monday night removed a density bylaw change at the request of the Planning Board.

McCall-Taylor said the Planning Board decided to include the density change in the inclusionary zoning package they are working on for spring Town Meeting.

Inclusionary zoning would let developers build more housing units than zoning allows if some go to low- and moderate-income occupants.

Improvements in Winchester's water may be on the way system will need meters and pressure-reducing valves to deliver the water to the East High and Middle Low systems. The town should ask the MWRA to help pay for those improvements as part of the connection project.

If that does not happen, funds should come from the water capital account, Lombardi and Schmitt wrote.

Other measures the two selectmen recommended are the installation of new main pipelines and the cleaning and relining of existing lines in areas the Weston and Sampson report labelled "high priority." These modifications are necessary to improve deficiencies in the system's fire flow, Schmitt and Lombardi said.

The Weston and Sampson report said some of the work is high enough priority to qualify for state water system improvement grants. Those that do not qualify should be funded through the town budget, Schmitt and Lombardi wrote.

To alleviate the problems faced by residents whose water pipes dead end, Sopper suggested a routine and systematic flushing of water mains. This would help remove debris before it gets into resident's homes.

Lombardi and Schmitt recommend the use of this solution. They also recommend installing hydrants at the end of dead-end mains that do not already have them.

"Over the past 10 years," the Lombardi and Schmitt review reads, "as resources have been committed to other projects and services, the reservoirs have, by comparison, been neglected."

The review recommends the allocation of funds to the DPW, beginning in fiscal year 1989, to be used for a work crew to clean at least one reservoir a year. It also suggests applying for state funds for capital improvements to the system.

One Weston and Sampson suggestion has already been approved by the selectmen: the installation of a generator for the north pumping station. The generator will insure that unchlorinated water does not enter the water system during a power failure.

Schmitt and Lombardi recommended deferring the installation of a monitoring and telemetering system. Schmitt said the engineers gave no specific benefits of the system. They did recommend an alarm system that would alert the town to problems such as low standpipe water, chlorine pump failure, or pumping station problems.

The town should also defer a pilot water treatment plant study until the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) publishes guidelines for the treatment of water supplies. When the EPA publishes its guidelines, Schmitt and Lombardi wrote, the town should decide what size plant to construct, what treatment process to use, and where to put the plant.

Lombardi and Schmitt found that the new distribution storage tanks recommended by the Weston and Sampson report are not critical. The report said the Middle Low system needed a tank to provide water for fire protection. The south standpipe, the report said, is nearing the end its natural life (2005) and will have to be replaced.

The review stated that a storage tank for the Middle Low system should be included in the treatment plant pilot study. The replacement of the south standpipe should occur at the end of its natural life.

Housing report stirs up controversy in Winchester spring Town Meeting created the Special Study Committee on Low and Moderate Income Housing. This committee, as described by Chairman David S. Mortensen, was charged to monitor the action and inaction of the town bodies in regard to housing and to investigate how Winchester could develop more units of affordable housing.

The committee reported back to Town Meeting in the fall. Based upon the committee's recommendations, the LRHC was created, and it subsequently hired Pattison, Slavet to study the issue.

The report notes that the cost of housing in Winchester is very high, and if prices continue to rise, only the very wealthy will be able to move into the town. The median sales price of Winchester homes jumped from $170,500 in 1985 to $256,000 in 1986. The report concludes that "absent a formal housing plan and left entirely to the marketplace, affordable housing will not be built in Winchester."

Reaction to the plan has been mixed. Mortensen has praised the plan, stating that it "should have a positive effect."

He says it will aid the town to have a blueprint of how to build and acquire more affordable housing. He adds that the plan "de-mystifies the process" of getting more affordable housing in Winchester.

On the other hand, Selectman Mark Lombardi contends that the plan "isn't anything new." He states that the plan is one-sided and merely re-states the views of those in favor of building more town-aided housing.

Lombardi adds that lower-income housing is already available in Winchester and additional town housing efforts are unnecessary. "As a real estate broker," he says, "I know that plenty of apartments and low-rental units are available."

Mortensen argues that the demand for more affordable housing is evident. He points out that when 25 federal subsidies for private rentals by lower-income families, called Section 8 vouchers, became available, 44 people applied for them. "And," he adds, "the earliest applicants were in line at 4 a.m." All of the vouchers were issued to Winchester residents.

Mortensen and Lombardi represent two different attitudes about affordable housing in Winchester. Lombardi contends that the creation of affordable housing is not the best use of public funds and that current attempt to provide more housing are the result of pressure by the Commonwealth.

Mortensen says the town has an obligation to provide more affordable housing "because it's right." He says that the town has a responsibility to enable people who work in Winchester to live here.

Part of their disagreement stems from different interpretations of a 1985 agreement between the town and the state Executive Office of Communities and Development. At that time, the state threatened to cut off discretionary funding to Winchester because it had been found "unreasonably restrictive of housing."

The selectmen, the Planning Board and the Housing Authority pledged to develop a plan "to provide more housing opportunities to meet the need of low- and moderate-income families in Winchester."

Lombardi argues that Winchester has met this goal by recently approving seven lower-income units, which should be occupied within a year. Mortensen says Winchester's commitment to low- and moderate-income housing should be more extensive.

Partnership board would create options

the Partnership Board as a replacement of the authority of the town's elected boards.

Selectman Francis Sopper said the town should work on funding projects through its own means instead of creating a board to help get state money. "I'm not against housing. We have a moral obligation to provide housing for those in need," he said, "but I'm not pleased with the state's programs. We should do it by ourselves."

Yale Street resident Gordon Grant rebutted Sopper's statement. "If we do it the Winchester way, we will get nowhere, which is exactly where we were two years ago," Grant said.

Sopper expressed dismay at the prospect that a Housing Partnership Board might "put housing on all the open land in town."

Robert Frank, a Low and Moderate Income Housing Study Committee member, said the board would make housing options known to the town boards. It would still be up to those boards to act on the options.

Business, homes to be taxed the same available (market value, cost and income) to assess commercial property. The most widely used are cost and income, because, McGurl said, there are not enough commercial sales for the market method to be accurate.

The cost approach takes into account the current, market cost to build the structure, the cost of the land, the location, depreciation and size, McGurl said. The income approach is based on the amount of income the property could yield. It takes into account the costs of running the building, McGurl said.

Those two methods are just as accurate as market value, McGurl said, but Sopper and Lombardi did not agree. Former Selectman Michael Saraco spoke in favor of tax classification. He said he believed it would assure that "all parties pay their fair share."

Chamber of Commerce Chairman Marsha Saltmarsh could not attend to meeting, but Muggia read a letter Saltmarsh wrote. Tax classification in Winchester "would be unfair taxation to the business owners of this town, and would create an anti-business and negative attitude toward business in general," she wrote.

Saraco argued that most commercial property owners do not use the property, but rent it out, and that equal taxation does not help the businesses in Winchester, but instead the building owners.

"This is not a financial question," Cathy Alexander of the Chamber of Commerce said. "It is a philosophical one.

"Please, when you are deciding this question," she continued, "decide on your philosophy of business in Winchester."

"I'm a businessman and my attitude toward business is that they should pay their fair share," Sopper said.

Winchester resident Robert Frank Jr. said the selectmen should consider getting rid of the assessors if they are not happy with assessments, but should not use tax classifications as a repair mechanism for low assessments.

Readiness class aids 'in-betweens'

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Winchester's early childhood developmental education program is heading in the right direction and should continue to grow and improve along the track it is already moving, according to early childhood education specialist Sharon Haselkorn.

The Readiness class, designed for children who are eligible for first grade, but not developmentally ready for it, "admirably provides" for those students, Haselkorn says.

She recommends monitoring students after they enter first grade to be sure they are not having any further problems.

In a Tuesday report to the School Committee, Haselkorn praised the outreach program, which consists of meetings, workshops and a newsletter that is distributed throughout the community. She suggested that the Early Childhood Advisory Council's role be expanded so that the cooperation within the community will continue.

The advantage of a full-day kindergarten over a four-hour program is one of degree, not of content, Haselkorn found. Children in the full-day program have more time to work, but children in the four-hour program experience the same activities.

Haselkorn recommended an expanded, voluntary, full-day kindergarten for parents who felt their children were ready to be in a school environment for a six-hour day.

The change in the context for learning between kindergarten and first grade is too abrupt, Haselkorn said. She suggested a lessening of the reading-group structure in first grade to allow for more hands-on work.

SHOPPING FOR A MOVING COMPANY

Whether you're moving across town or across the country, it's a good idea to shop around for a household goods mover. Local companies that specialize in moves between homes in a single state have always been very competitive. In the past, inter-state movers were heavily regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission and charged the same rates. Today, however, the interstate movers are much less regulated, and their rates are varied and probably negotiable.

If you're in the market for a mover, get recommendations from friends or neighbors. Call several companies for estimates, and ask how their rates are calculated. Find out what kind of insurance against damage or breakage is included in their charges, and how much will additional coverage cost you? Charges are usually broken down into two areas — packing your goods and then getting them onto the truck and into your new home. You can probably save a considerable amount of money by doing your own packing.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling a home, talk to the professionals at The Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Come by our offices at 33 Thompson Street in Winchester.

Fall Theatre Preview

Boston is a buzzin'

Theatre season opens with a song

Sheboppin', the new 60s musical, plays a six week engagement at the Wilbur Theatre. Call 423-4008 for ticket information.

Theatre is bustin' out all over! Downtown Boston is a-buzzin' with activity and the marquees are aglow! And all portends well for the coming season!

The new musical Satchmo, based on the life of legendary Louis Armstrong, officially opened the season at the Colonial Theatre and runs through Oct. 10. Close on its heels at the Colonial will be the Broadway revival of Sweet Charity featuring Donna Mc Kenchie, playing Oct. 20 through Nov. 7. The national touring company of the Broadway smash Big River continues the parade of musicals at the Colonial, playing Nov. 17 through Dec. 6, and their only other booking announced is the Swiss mime-mask troupe Mummenschanz, slated for March 8-13 under the auspicies of the Wang Celebrity Series.

Cats opened the season for the Schubert Theatre, where it remains through Nov. 17 when the eagerly awaited Les Miserables checks in, opening Dec. 5 for an extended run, possibly as long as six months! And the new 60s musical revue, Sheboppin' opened the curtain on the newly revamped Wilbur Theatre and is slated to remain there at least until Nov. 1.

Ian McKellen Acting Shakespeare got the off-Boston Charles Playhouse off to a running start, and another long-time hit, the irreverent Nunsense, moves in on Oct. 8 and is slated to remain until Nov. 15. But Nunsense and Sheboppin' will probably extend their runs indefinitely as long as ticket sales remain brisk. Needless to say, Shear Madness and The Comedy Connection, also in residence at the Charles, and Forbidden Broadway at the Park Plaza just keep rolling merrily along!

Over at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts, the Boston Ballet will open their slate on Oct. 1 (through 11) with a full production of Giselle. The fabulous La Cage aux Folles takes over center stage at the Wang Nov. 3-15, and the Boston Ballet returns with 39 performances of the perennial favorite The Nutcracker, opening on Dec. 3.

The Wang Celebrity Series is offering 36 events including the inimitable Pavarotti, and many of these are already sold out. Their Dance Series includes Twyla Tharp Dance, Virsky Ukrainian State Dance Company of the U.S.S.R., Rudolf Nureyev and Friends, and Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater.

There's been no news of activity at The Next Move Theatre, nor the Boston Shakespeare Theatre, which is homeless this season. But Nick's continues with The Comedy Stop downstairs and the all-male musical revue Men In Motion upstairs.

The Huntington Theatre Company got their season off to an exciting start with the premiere of Remembrance, running through Oct. 18. Also on Huntington's schedule is the much-anticipated The Piano Player by Tony Award-winner playwright August Wilson (Jan. 9-31). Wilson is the author of Broadway's hot ticket Fences, the Broadway blockbuster Ma Rainey's Black Bottom (being staged by Trinity Repertory Theatre (Dec. 11-Jan. 24), and Huntington's smash last season, Joe Turner's Come and Gone, also rumored for Broadway.

On Boston's periphery, the American Repertory Theatre opened with its Fall Festival and the enchanting Le Cirque Imaginaire and revivals of Six Characters in Search of an Author and Good Woman of Setzuan, the latter pair in repertory through Oct. 10. They open their season officially on Nov. 27 with Gillette and their slate includes the premiere of a musical version of The Fall of the House of Usher in the spring.

In outlying districts, Gloucester Stage Company has the London hit Road on the boards through Oct. 18 and follows with Israel Horowitz's Today I Am a Fountain Pen (Oct. 22 - Nov. 15), a hit in New York last season. A most ambitious slate of stellar attractions is being offered by the Andover Center for the Performing Arts, Nickerson Theatre is mounting a new mystery, I'll Be Back Before Midnight (Oct. 23 - Nov. 29), and of note, the New Ehrilich Theatre has a new musical in the offing, Phobias, opening Nov. 6.

To the south, Trinity Rep will present their mounting House of Blue Leaves, a big success on Broadway last season, Oct. 2-25, and at East Haddam, CT, the Goodspeed Opera House will offer a new musical based on the characters of Our Gang Comedy entitled The Little Rascals, from Oct. 7 to Dec. 13.

The American Repertory Theatre's Six Characters in Search of an Author will run for twelve performances, Sept. 24 - Oct. 10.

American Rep announces season

Robert Brustein, artistic director of the American Repertory Theatre, has announced the five plays for teh resident company's Mainstage season, its ninth as the permanent professional ensemble in residence at Harvard's Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge. Because of the consistently high percentage of capacity enjoyed by the company over the years, the A.R.T. is again offering

Music makes the play

Marcel Marceau performs at Lowell's Collins Center for the Performing Arts in March.

SATCHMO, AMERICA'S MUSICAL LEGEND, a new musical in two acts; written and directed, and with original music and lyrics by Jerry Bilik; choreography and musical staging by Maurice Hines; scenic design by Edward Burbridge; costume design by Judy Dearing; lighting design by Thomas R. Skelton. With Byron Stripling, Ebony Jo-Ann, James Rowan, Matilda A. Haywood, Elliot Goldwag, and Doug Barden. At the Colonial Theatre through Oct. 10.

Satchmo is a big, bright, brassy, hi-steppin' musical that only scratches the surface of the man it honors, the legendary Louis Armstrong!

There's much that is praiseworthy in Satchmo, much that is not, but in the main the musical does provide a rousing evening of entertainment, reflecting a period in time when the whole country was swinging and everything was groovy. But because Armstrong was a contemporary figure, a household name, a beloved entertainer we looked upon as a friend, the show's squandered potential is all the more frustrating. Only the fact that Armstrong was an inveterate womanizer was news to me, and that is of little import.

In the title role, the 26-year-old Byron Stripling plays a sensational horn and gives a worthy characterization of Armstrong. His trumpet solos of Shining and Trumpet Rag are nothing short of virtuoso, bringing the audience to its feet! Ebony Jo-Ann, who doubles as Armstrong's mother Mayann and his fourth wife Lucille, and Matilda Haywood, who portrays his second wife, Lil, showcase fine voices with amazing range.

Maurice Hines has created some highly original and stupifying dance routines, although some dance areas in the second act seem highly repetitive. Bring-the-house-down numbers include High Society, Pete Lala's Blues, Chicago Jazz, and St. Louis Blues Variation, and the high energy dancers in his charge are fabulous. The on-stage musicians play up a storm, and Judy Dearing adds to the excitement with her colorful costuming.

But these pluses are dissipated by the writing of Jerry Bilik, attempting his first book and whose credits include the likes of circus and ice show scripts. Producer Kenneth Feld should have dumped him eons ago, or at the very least brought in a play doctor! The feeble excuse for a plotin the first act totally evaporates during intermission. There is a complete void of character development. With such a wealth of material to draw upon, Bilik has done Armstrong a great disservice!

Bilik's direction is no better. Members of the chorus leave the stage haphazardly. Scenery is moved on and off stage with a total lack of discretion, especially bad during Lil's tender ballad in the second act.

The story opens (and closes) in the Empire Room of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel on New Year's Eve, 1971, where Louis and the Band zip through Hello, Dolly!, Mack the Knife, and Sleepy Time Down South. Armstrong, obviously ill, doubles over. It proved his final public appearance.

Action reverts back in time to Armstrong as a youth, growing up in Beauregard Square, New Orleans (atmosphere nicely recreated). With his friend Big Nose, Louis hangs around the bandwagon of his idol King Oliver (James Rowan) and his New Orleans jazz band.

Armstrong is blamed for shooting off a pistol during New Year's festivities (1912) and placed in a correctional institution for a year, the Colored Waif's Home, where he is assigned to play tambourine in the school band before being upgraded to coronet. His big mouth earns him the moniker Dippermouth....("They don't call you satchelmouth...they will!"), and playing with the band in Storyville (to raise school funds) acquaints him with the red light district.

Upon his release, his mother awaits him with his favorite dish, lovingly described in the ballad Red Beans and Rice, wherein "Love is the spice." After two years of doing riffs (Trading Fours) young Louis becomes a full-fledged member of Papa Joe's (Oliver's) band. Six years later Papa Joe announces that he's going to Chicago to play creole jazz with Jimmy Noon's band and names Louis to take over. But Armstrong begs Papa Joe to take him along..."They're gonna like my music not because I'm black...but in spite of it!"

Louis, in Chicago with his second wife, Miss Lil, is playing in King Oliver's Band. During a recording session, in which Armstrong is doing the vocal solo, he accidently drops his music, forcing him to improvise and giving birth to his inimitable be-bop singing style, as well as the newest fad, Chicago jazz. Time moves on and Louis is hired to play third horn (trumpet) with a band in New York that "plays clean for white folks."

From thereon in, non-musical scenes are disasterous. A broadcasting scene is, quite simply, the pits; a booking agent/manager for Armstrong and his band appears out of the woodwork; a jail scene in Tennessee is atrociously written and repugnant; and while the dance number Bamboula is super, it's inclusion is forced and jolting because prior build is so weak. The downhill plunge continues with an embarrassing finale, Callin' the Children Home, noteworthy only for the gorgeous parade of all-white costumes.

Strange as it may seem, the audience came to enjoy...if only pay tribute to a man who, in his lifetime, had provided so many with so much pleasure. It wasn't only the saints that marched merrily out of the Colonial Theatre, but Louis' fans as well!

Kenyatta Beasley as young Louis Armstrong and Ebony Jo-Ann as his mother, Mayann in Satchmo: American's Musical Legend.

What's On The Boards?

McKellen struts upon the stage with magnificence

Ian McKellen Acting Shakespeare, a one-man show featuring Ian McKellen. At the Charles Playhouse, 76 Warrenton St., Boston, through October 4.

The Charles Playhouse is packed to the rafters. A tall man strides briskly down the aisle, bounds up the four stairs and takes center stage. He appears in his late forties, long and lean, possessed of a pleasant face with strong bone structure — not unlike his countrymen Peter O'Toole or the late Laurence Harvey — and a healthy mane of hair.

He is garbed in a dark, loose-fitting, semi-formal suit, allowing for maximum freedom of movement. And with nothing more than the boards beneath his feet, heavy black velvet draperies for a backdrop and side panels, and a solitary high-back chair, he plunges into his relaxed, informal program, Ian McKellen Acting Shakespeare.

McKellen, probably best known in the United States for his role of Antonia Salieri in Amadeus, which he originated on Broadway and for which he won the Tony Award, must be considered among the half-dozen finest actors in the English-speaking world. His resonance of voice with its hundreds of rich shadings, and his stunning grace and fluidity of body, not unlike a classical dancer, places him in exalted company!

McKellen is a man of a thousand personas, an actor's actor who makes Shakespeare come alive as never before. His performance is so hypnotic it leaves the audience hanging on every word! So attentive were they that you could hear a pin drop! The theatre resembled a priory at prayer time!

Opening with a short passage from As You Like It (Act II, Scene 7), when Jacques falls into mortalizing on the general uselessness of life and man's pilgrimage in it, he observes that life is in seven stages that end in nothing. And during the course of the evening McKellen enacts each stage, from screaming baby in swaddling clothes to the old man gasping his final breath.

McKellen develops a quick and easy rapport with his audience and within moments has a running dialogue going, with a give-and-take exchange. He describes how he auditioned to get into Cambridge, doing a rudimentary and very funny rendering of a speech from King Henry V, which later evolves into a beautifully eloquent piece.

In 37 plays, McKellen insists, "Shakespeare never writes about a happy marriage," and then proceeds to prove it as he traces the Bard's career and his early departure from Stratford-on-Avon to answer his calling in London and, in the wake, leaving his wife and children behind.

Shakespeare's love affair with the stage shouts out in a passage from Hamlet between Polonius, Hamlet, and the First Player, with McKellen enacting all three roles. He aptly observes, "People attend football games a spectators; they watch the tele; but they come to the theatre to listen!"

A hilarious recitation of bully Bottom in A Midsummer Night's Dream follows, and a Chorus segment from Henry V proves a delightful elementary lesson in acting skills.

As the Duke of Gloucester (Henry VI, Part I), McKellen instantly changes into a cripple with leg shuffling and cricked arm. Then, youth and age trade barbs as the consummate actor portrays Prince Hal and Sir John Falstaff in Henry IV, Part I, before switching genders for his profile by men in Shakespear's day. McKellen makes merry with Sonnet XX and concludes the first portion of his program with an uproarious scene from Romeo and Juliet, with a widly ribald portrayal of Juliet, the likes of which you have never seen on any stage before!

In the lighthearted second segment, McKellen pays tribute to Samuel Pepys, who maintained a diary of Shakespeare's career and works; David Garrick, the noted actor of the day, who played the major roles in most of the Bard's plays...with exorbitant excesses; and George Bernard Shaw and his critiques of Shakespeare's plays, interspersed with reflections about John Gielgud, Laurence Olivier and Trevor Nunn.

He makes Shakespeare a living language in all its vibrancy with a primer on Act V, Scene V of Macbeth, breaking down the dialogue word by word, syllable by syllable, explaining the rhythm, and then following with its recitation in all its magnificence.

Macbeth must face the fact that his beloved wife has killed herself. He is a soldier, facing a crucial battle, and he tries first to accept the news in stoical fashion, after the fastion of Brutus in Julius Caesar on being appraised of the death of Portia. But then, having tried to bear up, he breaks down.

With Lady Macbeth gone, there is nothing to live for. All his crimes and remorse, all his reverses had not brought him to dispair, but his wife's death does and he finds life meaningless — utterly without value.

Disconsolate, he cries: "Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player/That struts and frets his hour upon the stage/And then is heard no more. It is a tale/Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury/Signifying nothing."

McKellen invites about 40 members of the audience to join him on stage for a funny, upbeat passage by Prospero from The Tempest, which rounds out a most rewarding evening!

Road is performed by the Gloucester Stage Company at 8 p.m., Wednesday through Friday; 5 p.m. on Sunday and 6 and 9 p.m. on Saturday. Call 281-4099.

Miles Dewey Davis, Jr. 61 years young this year and one of the most masterful and innovative trumpeters on the modern jazz scene according to one source at the Boston Globe, seems to have come out of his previous reclusiveness.

Just in the last few years, he has been seen in a now famous Honda commercial, appeared in an episode of Miami Vice as a pimp and a drug pusher, was interviewed recently on Black Entertainment Television, and appeared in a PBS special devoted exclusively to Miles.

His band includes Kenny Garrett on sax, Mino Cinelu on percussion, Adam Holzman on keyboards, Robert Irving, Jr. on keyboards, Darryl "the Munch" Jones on bass (who recently toured with Sting), Foley McCreary on guitar, and Ricky Wellman on drums. Hosting the concert will be WGBH FM's Eric Jackson.

Of interest to Boston's Miles Davis fans, Harvard University Extension is offering a course in Miles Davis in the spring entitled Miles Davis, The Evolving Artist which will meet Wednesdays throughout the semester beginning February 3.

The September 27 Boston concert date will be a kickoff to a major tour for Davis which will take him through Europe in October and on to his first tour of Africa. Davis has also recently finished a soundtrack for the film entitled Siesta.

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Strength & beauty in work

In the 1979 exhibition of painting and drawing by Boston University master of fine arts candidates, the work of Candace Walters separated itself from the rest.

Her oversized, tightly cropped portraits were gravely black and white in a gallery that shimmered with color. Their internal scale was bigger and their space more compressed than the other works. Strong and aggressive, they spoke with intensity of inner world weighted more toward feeling than toward the observation and narration of much of the show. They were not easy to categorize, but they were forceful and demanded to be looked at, then looked at again.

Now exhibiting at Clark Gallery, Lincoln, Walter's imagery includes landscape and still life. The single portrait has become a single figure set in a landscape of narrative implications. The richly tonal and sculptural black and white graphite has become a full palette of oil stick color that has both delicacy and weight, lavishing both natural and psychological light on its subject.

Except for one small, dark and grayed portrait, Lost Woman, the figurative works are hung together. The grouping effects a sense of narrative without the limitations of sequences or specific events.

A woman whose facial features are lovely and fragile is monumentally placed in the picture's rectangle and cropped by it's edges. As in Walter's early portraits, the subject's head is tensely dominant because of its scale and the spatial compression of its volume. She appears involved with her own thoughts, and in that sense, is detached. But she is not disaffected or cool. Her expression is sometimes frightened or suspicious, as in Lost Woman, but more often dreamy, introspective and ironic.

The aloneness of the woman in Beachcomber II is set against an expansive seascape of colored, egg-shaped rocks and moody skies caught in the blazing drama of a heated pink sunset, then moving darkly upward into a star-sprinkled Henri Rousseau night. For the woman there is, perhaps, both identification with and separateness from this nature that teeters between sublime and surreal. As large as the figure is and as tenaciously as she presses forth toward the picture's surface, she does not dominate nature, but seems, rather, in harmony with its essential forces.

The much smaller figureless seascapes, also hung together, equal the large figurative works in intensity if not symbolic potential. In these, as well as in the small still lifes, Walter's handling of oil stick as a medium is integral to the works. The air that moves through these pictures has a palpable emotional weight and beauty. Much like encaustic, surfaces are built so that they are thickly opaque, yet they sparkle with scratched and layered transparency.

The artist whose black and white portraits had such power in an exhibition eight years ago shows great feeling for color and its emotional force. Walters is still not easy to categorize. Her work is personal and unique; its strength and beauty are commanding.

Exhibiting with Walters is sculptor Jon Brooks, whose delightful and witty tables, chairs, music stands and bowls look as if they have been choreographed rather than placed throughout the gallery. Tall and energetic, Brooks's "styx" furniture is a happy combination of nature with the artist's imagination.

Clark Gallery is located in The Mall at Lincoln Station on Lincoln Road and is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and by appointment.

Candace Walters: New Paintings and Jon Brooks: Styx Furniture is on exhibit through Oct. 2.

Salem harvests crafts, dance and music of early New England

Story by Susan Hershey

A lovely seacoast settlement, Salem is famous historically for its important connection with the rest of the world by virtue of its prodigious and active harbor.

Its period houses and gardens, its witches and its museums add to Salem's appeal today. For the tourist or the casual visitor with an interest in history, the Essex Institute in Salem offers much to learn.

This weekend the Institute holds a harvest by the sea of crafts, music and dance. The Essex Institute's annual Harvest Festival takes place Saturday, Sept. 26, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The all-day event is free and open to the public and features crafts people from all over New England and as far away as Texas.

A good place to start your Christmas shopping, the festival will present a juried selection of traditional american crafts on exhibit inside the museum.

These individually crafted items will include dried flowers and wreaths, woodcarvings, baskets, New England stoneware, period furniture reproductions, hooked rugs, traditional weaving and theorem paintings.

Throughout the day crafts people will demonstrate their talents in boat building, natural dyeing, weaving, cabinetmaking and spinning.

The museum neighborhood, better known as the museum's backyard, according to Joan Bacall, coordinator of special events, will be alive with authentically dressed 17th century characters performing 17th century kinds of acts: early New England cooking, blacksmithing, woodturning. All of these activities will be carried out with authentic 17th century equipment, assures Bacall.

Houses from the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries will be open for people to visit. The Society of the 17th century will concentrate their activity around the John Ward house, which was, you guessed it, built in the 17th century.

Bob Franke, a superb songwriter and nationally recognized folk singer, has written a Salem Trilogy from material he and members of the Folklife Society researched at the Essex Institute. Franke will perform this music at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Folk dancing, according to Bacall, has been a part of New England life since the first settlers arrived here from England, and the dances have remained fairly unchanged since then.

The Salem Folklife Society, led by caller Sarah Gregory Smith, will perform a retrospective of country dancing in New England. The audience will have a chance to join in and learn some steps their ancestors may have practiced some 200 years ago.

There will be hearty food for purchase and a special event, one not to miss if you like cheese, is a demonstration of how to make goat cheese.

Accompanied by her flock of goats, a Newbury woman will show the process of making goat cheese and offer samples to taste. Bacall says that although the process will be shortened, it should add a special flavor to the day.

The Essex Institute is at 132-143 Essex Street. The festival takes place from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 26. Call 744-3390 for further information.

Poe's macabre master piece on A.R.T. stage

an expanded number of season subscriptions.

The broad-ranging presentations include a new American play by William Hauptman; a new adaptation of a 20th century classic; a postmodern reworking of an 18th century novel, a Heiner Muller/Robert Wilson performance piece; the premiere of a Philip Glass/Arthur Yorinks music theatre work; and a 17th century poetic masterpiece revitalized through the artistry of a 20th-century woman director.

The company will continue its New Stages series this year and is considering two world premieres and one new adaptation.

The resident company includes Larry Block, John Bottoms, Lucinda Childs, Thomas Derrah, Alvin Epstein, Jeremy Geidt, Pamela Gien, Richard Kavanaugh, Nicholas Kepros, Harry S. Murphy, Sandra Shipley, and Priscilla Smith.

Performances will begin on Nov. 27 and will continue in repertory through July 19. The plays scheduled for production on the Mainstage include: Gillette by William Hauptman, directed by David Wheeler, in repertory from Nov. 27 to Jan 22; Right You Are (If You Think You Are) by Luigi Pirandello, adapted and directed by Robert Brustein, in repertory Dec. 11 through Jan. 31; Quartet by Heiner Muller, based on the novel Les Liasons Dangereuses by Choderlos de Laclos, and directed and designed by Robert Wilson. This will be presented in a straight run from Feb. 5 through March 6.

The world premiere of The Fall of the House of Usher will play in repertory from May 13 through July 10.

Based on the story by Edgar Allen Poe, Usher will have music by Philip Glass, book by Arthur Yorinks and Philip Glass, lyrics by Arthur Yorinks, and be directed by Richard Foreman. (Produced in association with the Kentucky Opera.) The final offering will be 'Tis Pity She's a Whore by John Ford, directed by JoAnne Akalaitis, and in repertory May 27 through July 17.

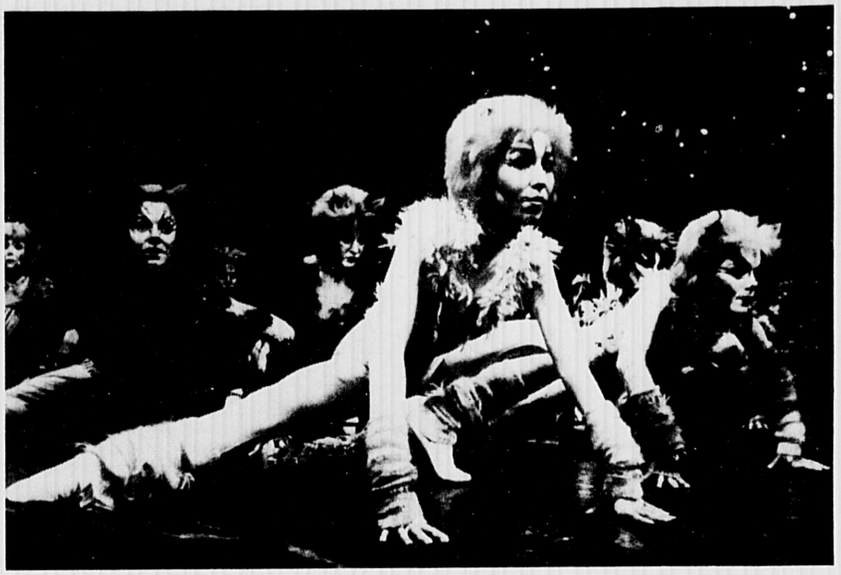
The beginning of the season also coincides with the first full year of the A.R.T. Institute for Advanced Theatre Training at Harvard, which offers two-year programs in acting, design, directing, and dramaturgy. As the training ground and developmental center for the A.R.T., Institute activities are integrated with the work of the company, whose artists involved with the professional company this season, directors Andrei Serban and Anne Bogart, playwright Keith Reddin, will also participate in Institute programs. The newly appointed associate director of the A.R.T., Richard Riddell, serves as its director.

Gillette focuses on two drifters who come to the modern-day boom town of Gillette, Wyoming, looking for freedom, love, and coin in a down-and-out world of bikers, cowboys, prostitutes, and oil riggers. When they do fall in love with two strong-minded women, the struggle of survival turns friends to foes.

With humor and insight, playwright William Hauptman, author of the award-winning musical Big River, has revised and expanded his comedy about life on one of the last frontiers — first presented by the company in a highly successful 1984 New Stages series production.

Continuing his contemporary explorations of Pirandello's plays, Robert Brustein now adapts and directs Right You Are (If You Think You Are). Unlike Pirandello's investigations of theatrical reality, this is a straightforward narrative, written in broad comedy strokes, about a suffering family plagued by the curiosity of busybodies, but it may very well be the author's definitive statement about the illusory nature of personal identity. Transferred to a New England town, and set in the home of a newspaper editor, this production extends Pirandello's concern about individual privacy to include the intrusions of the media on the rights of the individual.

Quartet is a modern reverie on Les Liasons Dangereuses, a novel by Choderlos de Laclos which created a scandal when it first appeared in 1782. As in his award-winning reconception of Euripides' Alcestis, originated at the A.R.T. in 1986, Wilson will draw his magical stage pictures from a poetic text, exploring the metaphor of sex as a war game, played by two elegantly amoral seducers.



Cats returns to the Shubert Theatre through Nov. 7.

With a score devised by Banchetto Musicale's Martin Pearlman enhancing the suspenseful action, Quartet — though a departure in score from such monumental Wilsonian works as the CIVIL warS and Einstin on the Beach — will prove to be as provocative as the original novel in exploring the apocalypse of the bedroom.

Edgar Allen Poe's classic American Gothic Tale — perhaps the most perfectly crafted horror story ever written — is the source for the world premiere of this music theatre piece by the renowned composer, Philip Glass, and the gifted children's story writer, Arthur Yorinks.

The collaboration unites the talents of two of the artists who helped create The Juniper Tree at the A.R.T. in 1985, a work that has since been proclaimed a contemporary classic. Director Richard Foreman, distinguished for his high-voltage, fast-paced style, returns to the company to direct his masterpiece of the macabre.

'Tis Pity She's a Whore is a depraved version of Romeo and Juliet, wherein the two lovers are brother and sister, and the Friar and the Nurse are implicated in their incestuous love. John Ford's exquisitely grisly tale of unbridled passion is a hallucinatory collage of dramatic scenes in the style of Grand Guignol. JoAnne Akalaitis, known to A.R.T. audiences for her productions of Endgame and The Balcony, directs.

The New Stages series productions under consideration include: Big Time — Scenes from a Service Economy, Keith Rdeein's satire about the way our public conduct is corrupting our private lives; Life and Fate, an adaptation from Vasily Grossman's searing novel about the Holocaust, to be directed by Frederick Wiseman; and Uncle Vanya, a new adaptation of Chekhov's tale of lost opportunity by David Mamet, directed by David Wheeler.

The New Stages series option can be added to season subscriptions at a cost of only $20 per person (or $10 a ticket). Subscriptions range in price $55-$130, depending on th eday or night of the week and seat location in the theatre.

Subscription benefits include guaranteed seating in the location of your choice, ticket savings and easy exchange, a Cirlcle of Friends Card good for half-price tickets to 16 area theatres, discounted additional A.R.T. tickets, the A.R.T. Newsletter, discounted parking, savings at fine restaurants, and a new Pre-Performance Discussion Series.

Performances run Tuesday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., Sunday nights at 7 p.m., with Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. For more information, call the box office at 547-8300 between 11 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The A.R.T. is located in Harvard Square at 64 Brattle St., Cambridge. Public transportation and discount parking are available nearby.

Lyric Stage's season is rich blend

The Lyric Stage is proud to announce its new season, a rich blend of seven exciting plays selected from some of the world's greatest playwrights. This season's colorful offering includes an American premiere by Sean O'Casey and a Boston premiere by award-winning playwright Simon Gray.

The Lyric Stage season gets off to a powerful start with Arthur Millers The Price opening on Sept. 16. In this writer's play, two estranged brothers are brought together to divide their parents' estate. The memories lead the brothers to a greater understanding of and love for each other. This humorous, touching and very wise play runs through Oct. 25.

Laughter is contagious in Hay Fever, one of Noel Coward's earliest and funniest comedies. Hilarious flirtations and romantic misunderstandings ensue when each member of an ultra-Bohemian family invites a guest for the weekend. This wicked and wonderful play runs from Oct. 18 through Nov. 25.

The Lyric Stage helps to take the chill out of the cold Boston winter with its traditional holiday favorite, Dylan Thomas's A Child's Christmas in Wales. This heart-warming reminiscence of a young boy's Christmases in Wales runs from Dec. 2 to Dec. 23.

The Lyric Stage starts the second half of the season on Jan 6, with Joe Orton's comedy, What the Butler Saw. In a lunatic asylum, a psychiatrist lusts after his pretty secretary; his wife arrives with a reluctant bellhop in tow; and the State Asylum Inspector inspects it all! The British farce runs through Feb. 14.

Just in time for St. Patrick's Day, the Lyric Stage presents the American premiere of The Bishop's Bonfire by Irish playwright Sean O'Casey. In this rarely-seen drama, which runs from Feb. 17 to March 20, a Bishop returns home after twenty years to a noisy, impressive hero's welcome.

We discover, however, that the welcoming townspeople are motivated by greed, social climbing and misguided piety than by the Bishop himself. O'Casey adds thwarted love and eventual murder to create a riviting evening of theatre.

From March 23 to April 24, Lyric presents the Boston premiere of The Common Pursuit by Simon Gray, author of last season's memorable Quartermaine's Terms. In Gray's most recent work, six Cambridge undergraduates, in the sixties, plan to launch a literary magazine in accordance with the rigorous standards of a critic they admire.

The ensuing twenty years prove them incapable of meeting those standards as Gray paints a humorous and poignant picture of the over-educated and under-principled.

The Lyric ends its season with How the Other Half Loves by Alan Ayckbourn, author of last season's hilarious The Norman Conquests. Ayckbourn, the master of mad-cap romp, creates an evening of coincidences, contortions and complications as a couple tries to cover up a secret trust from their respective spouses. The season's closer runs from April 24 to May 29.

Performances are Wednesdays through Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 5 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 3 p.m. Ticket prices range from $10 to $13 depending on the day. Discounts are available for students, senior citizens, corporate employees and civil servants.

Tickets can be reserved by calling the Box Office at 742-8703 and can be purchased at Bostix and all Ticketron Outlets.

The Lyric Stage is located at 54 Charles Street at the foot of Beacon Hill, three and a half blocks form the Charles St. stop on the Red Line.

Piano Lesson at Huntington

The Huntington Theatre Company's new season will feature the world premiere of August Wilson's The Piano Lesson, a new play by the author of Fences and Joe Turner's Come and Gone. The Piano Lesson will be directed by Lloyd Richard, artistic director of the Yale Repertory Theatre, who has directed all of Wilson's premiere's as well as Huntington's production of Joe Turner's Come and Gone and the current Broadway production of Fences. The Piano Lesson will be jointly produced by the Huntington Theatre Company and the Yale Repertory Theatre, performing in New Haven just prior to its Boston run.

The season will also include the Boston premiere of the classic Marx Brothers musical comedy, Animal Crackers; Remembrance, a new play by northern Irish playwright Graham Reid; Saturday, Sunday, Monday, an Italian dramatic comedy by Eduardo de Filippo; and William Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale.

The season will open with the Boston premiere of Graham Reid's Remembrance which will run from Sept. 26 through Oct. 18. Against the background of violence-torn Belfast, a widow and widower in their 60's begin an unlikely romance which crosses the line between their Catholic and Protestant backgrounds.

Reid's insightful play tells the story of their efforts to lift their affection above age, sectarianism and the suspicious disapproval of their respective grown children.

William Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale follows, running from Nov. 28 through Dec. 20. Here, King Leontes of Sicilia, tormented by suspicions of his wife's infidelity, condemns her and banishes his newborn babe from his once harmonious kingdom.

This passionate tale of the havoc wreaked by obsessive jealousy culminates in a fantastical resolution which powerfully reaffirms life and love. The Winter's Tale will be directed by Sharon Ott, artistic director of the Berkeley Repertory Theatre of California, and one of the country's most exciting young directors.

In a joint world premiere production with Yale Repertory Theatre, the Huntington Theatre Company ushers in the new year with The Piano Lesson by acclaimed playwright August Wilson, running from Jan. 9 through Jan. 31. The winner of a Pulitzer Prize for Drama and the author of last season's Joe Turner's Come and Gone returned to the Huntington with another moving chapter (set in the 1930's) in his cycle of plays about the black American experience. The Piano Lesson will be directed by Lloyd Richards, Wilson's primary artistic collaborator.

The Boston premiere of Eduardo de Filippo's Saturday, Sunday, Monday will be held from March 5 through March 27. Actor, director, and prolific playwright Eduardo de Filippo is one of the most beloved figures in Italy's 20th-century theatre. His plays reflect Neapolitan culture and character with volcanic emotion and warm humor. Saturday, Sunday, Monday, a dramatic comedy of Italian family life, is widely regarded as his masterpiece.

The season will close with the musical Animal Crackers by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind, with lyrics by Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, which will run from May 21 through June 12. This hilarious 1920s Broadway musical comedy featured the Marx Brothers and was adapted for their classic film starring Groucho as Captain Spaulding, the African explorer.

Its lost script was recently reconstructed and triumphantly premiered in Washington, D.C. The Huntington production will be the first professional production since of this zany musical comedy.

Subscriptions start as low as $42. For further information call Huntington's Subscriber Hotline at 266-3996. The theatre is located at 264 Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02115. The box office number is 266-3913.

Theatre S. to present six premieres

Theatre S. has announced the formation of a new resident acting company to create and perform plays for its new season. This represents the second season for Theatre S. as the resident company of The Performance Place in Somerville.

The season will include three original multimedia plays at The Performance Place and TRANS/ACTIONS features three American premieres in English by three noted French writers, Marguerite Duras, Nathalie Sarraute and Nichel Vinaver. The festival is co-sponsored by Alliance Francaise and The French Library of Boston.

Permanent company members include Gloria Mindock Duehr, Beth Goldman, Susie K., Doug McKinley, Rachel Slavik, Pieter Smit and Catherine Verow.

The season will open at The Performance Place with The Three Women, an original multimedia imitation on Hardy's Return of the Native with film, video and original music, running from Sept. 24 through Oct. 24. An epic of lust and the supernatural, the play imposes the barren heath landscape against the midwest of America. Hardy's story of fate transforms into an evocation of the power of memory. Adapted from the first section of Native, The Three Women is the first part of a four-year project to translate Native to the stage.

The festival TRANS/ACTION runs from November through January at St. Peter's Church. From Nov. 6 through 21 Theatre S. will present The Atlantic Beaches by Marguerite Duras, a bittersweet tragedy of a wife's fidelity worked out in the silence of her inner world.

The absurdist comedy Over Nothing at All by Nathalie Sarraute will be the second festival offering, running from Dec. 4-19. In this piece two businessmen, fighting over something they can't recall, drag in their best friends as witnesses.

The final festival work, Nina, It's Different, by Michel Vinaver opens Jan. 8 and continues through Jan. 23. A chamber piece, Nina weaves Vinaver's poetic theatre of multiple viewpoints into a fabric of family violence and imtimacy.

All performances for TRANS/ACTIONS are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., with a late show Saturday at 10 p.m. Tickets are $10 ($6.50 for students) for individual plays and $20 ($12 for students) for the series. St. Peter's Church is located at 838 Mass. Ave., Central Square, Cambridge. For reservations call 625-6087.

The final two premieres will be presented at The Performance Place. From Feb. 11 through March 12, Theatre S. will debut The Angel Dialogs, a new opera commissioned from Boston composer Caleb Sampson in collaboration with poet Catherine Baker and choreographer Gelenda Medeiros. The Angel Dialogs takes off from the German poet Rilke's Elergies as seen through the eyes of J. Robert Oppenheimer. Every angel is terrifying begins this tragi/comedy of the ridiculous and the sublime.

Doppelganger closes the Theatre S. season at the Performance Place, May 19 - June 18. This original installation/performance is a living sculpture where a new visual language is assembled from objects, inspiration is drawn from Poe's William Wilson.

All performances at The Performance Place are Thurdsday through Saturday at 8 p.m., with a late show on Saturday at 10 p.m. Tickets are $10 ($6.50 for students). For reservations and information call 623-5510.

CAR CARE CORNER

By Dan Hogan, Service Manager

Streaking windshield wipers is caused by worn windshield wipers...You should inspect the wipers every 6 months or so...If the wipers appear to be worn or cracked,they should be replaced...The price of the wipers usually includes the cost of installation, a very simple, quick job...Keep your windshield washer tank properly filled, too...The wash should be a combination of water, antifreeze and detergent — even in the summer months...If the washer doesn't work but is filled, have the hoses checked....

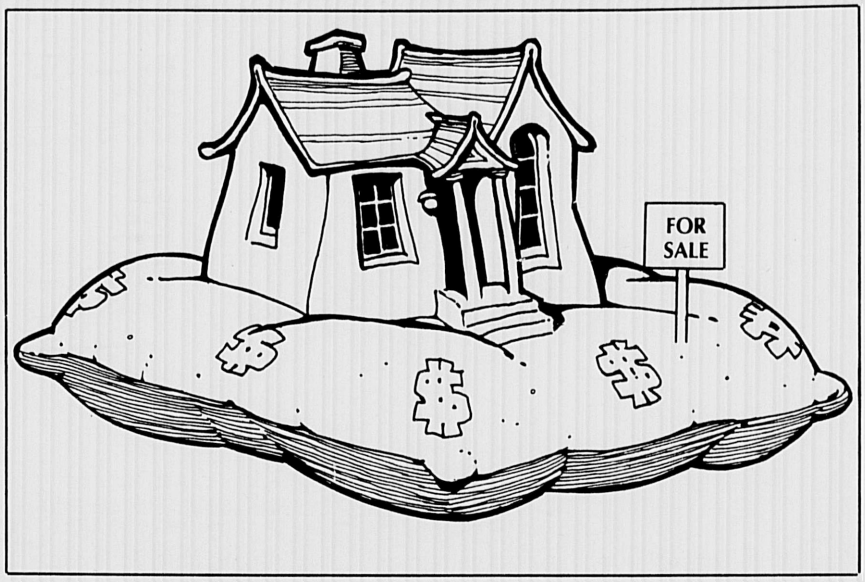
Spruce up your home before trying to sell it

By John Corcoran



You finally decided to do it. You're going to sell your home. You need something bigger, you want something newer and you want to move just a bit farther out.

You lined up a real estate agent, put an ad in the paper and even stuck one of those gaudy signs in your front yard.

But what do you do now? Just wait and hope Mr. and Mrs. Right select your house as their new house?

You could, but if you want to give yourself a leg up over the neighbor down the street who is trying to sell his home, Realtors suggest you could take several steps to increase your chances and maybe even make a bit more money on your house.

Realtors advise potential home sellers not to discount the importance of first impressions on the potential home buyer.

"If you take a few inexpensive, thoughtful steps before you start to show your house, you can add $500 to $2,000 difference to your sales price," says John Paulson, a Realtor.

"And even if you don't make some additional money, you're almost guaranteed of selling your home faster than if you didn't."

"The market goes up and the market goes down," says sales manager Tom Kreuser. "But if you can make a good first impression you stand a better chance of selling your home no matter when it is."

The reason, Kreuser believes, is that people buy homes based on gut feelings. "It may not make a lot of sense, but most people are emotional when they buy a home," he says.

"Most people buy a home because it's a feeling that they get when they go inside. What does it feel like? Does it feel like home? Is this someplace my family and I will be happy? Do I get a warm feeling here?

"Color can have a lot to do with exactly the way your rooms look. A 12-by-14 bedroom looks bigger with a light color than it does with a dark blue. A dark blue creates the impression of being smaller and colder than the room is.

"Face it, would you like to wake up to a dark blue room every day?" he says.

The same goes with carpeting. Keep the color neutral and price inexpensive. If you want to put color into a room, do it with drapes or furniture — something that you can move with you.

Other tips to make your house shine:

• Keep the front of the house neat and trim. Repair gutters, paint where needed, seal an asphalt drive, trim hedges and kill the crabgrass.

"Remember when someone walks up to your home this really is the first impression. If your gutters are sagging or paint is peeling from your front door, this gives a negative impression," Kreuser says.

Preparing to put your house on the market

"From here on out people are going to look for things that are wrong with your home. On the other hand, people may have a good impression and will expect more inside."

• Pull the shades and drapes back. Try to make the home as bright and airy as possible.

"This is what people really are looking for. They don't want to walk into some dark, poorly lit place," Kreuser says. "They want their new home to be cheerful and open. You can encourage that feeling."

• Keep the furniture to a tasteful amount. Don't overload a room with side chairs, coffee tables and magazine racks. "Make it a rule to reduce any crowded room by at least two pieces of furniture. It makes the room look bigger," Kreuser says.

• Clean out at least 25 percent to 50 percent of your closet space. "A closet which is 10 feet deep looks as crowded as a closet which is 8 feet deep," Kreuser says. "We tend

"Sure, the square footage and the taxes and a lot of other things come into the decision, but in my opinion, a lot of people buy homes because they get a good feeling about it," Kreuser explains.

Gary Allen, a Realtor, is of the same opinion. "People want to be comfortable in the house they buy. They want to enjoy their home. They want a house that's livable. And if there is something they don't like they may not buy."

To get that feeling and create that initial good impression, Realtors suggest the potential home seller step back and reassess his home from an outsider's perspective.

"We're all guilty of it," Kreuser says. "We are used to living with little things that are wrong with our home or we decorate our home to our unique tastes, but you have to understand that not everyone is as forgiving about your home's faults as you are."

"Do a quick review of your home," says Realtor Phil Mazur. "If you have some holes in the wall, or some grease has accumulated on your kitchen cabinets or you have a rust stain in your sink, take care of it.

"You may be used to it," he says. "But the buyer will spot it immediately and it may be a big turnoff."

All Realtors agree that expensive remodeling projects rarely will recoup the owner's investment. The byword for making your home more attractive is to spend less, emphasizing what you have.

The first step is as simple as paint. Many Realtors believe nothing makes a home look more like a magazine cover candidate than a fresh coat of paint.

But color is as important as the paint. "Avoid the blues, greens and reds. Stick with the neutral colors. The whites, beiges and off-whites. Something that people can't object to," one Realtor says.

Kreuser says color plays more than just a subtle role in swinging the home buyer to your house. to collect things. A crowded closet looks smaller than a closet which is half full."

• Clear off kitchen counters. Stash blenders, toasters and food processers someplace else. A counter loaded with appliances gives a kitchen a cramped look. Wider, more airy spaces — the maximum space for the minimum dollars — is what the home buyer wants.

But beyond the visible, there also is the invisible — primarily the impressions picked up by the nose.

"Smell is very important in selling a home," Kreuser says.

"It's amazing what smell does. If a house has a homey smell, a cooking smell, it makes a big difference," Paulson says. "I remember I walked through a home (with a buyer) when a woman was baking cookies, and the home practically sold itself."

One negative turnoff many people fail to avoid, Kreuser says, is pets. "Once again, people are used to the smell, but when someone who doesn't have pets walks in, it's unbelievable.

"If I had just two words to give a home owner looking to sell his home," Mazur says, "it would be 'neat and clean.' It can work wonders."

Landscaping saves energy

Why more people don't think of providing a better indoor environment by landscaping their home, I'll never know. What could be better than saving money over the long run by placing trees, bushes and other vegetation where they'll do the most good in terms of saving energy?

Furthermore, why not take other factors into consideration when landscaping your house? Perhaps noise is a problem, or you want to screen out undesirable views or provide a better view.

Besides the specific tasks of proper landscaping, there's the pure joy of having growing things around your house. Landscaping will cost you a few dollars and a little effort in the short run, but in the long term, the rewards will be plentiful.

Anybody can do basic landscaping, or, at the very least, anybody can pick up a phone and call a professional landscaper. Planting a few trees and vines are basic steps even the blackest of would-be green thumbs could take.

Before you take action, you first need to decide which way your house faces. Determine where the wind, rain and sun — the basic elements that affect your house the most — hit.

You'll have to figure this by season, of course, though some elements may remain pretty much the same regardless of the season. Stop and think: Does much of the colder air — especially in the winter — usually blow in from the north? Where does the summer sun hit your house the most intensely? From what direction do the hot summer breezes blow?

Planting the proper types of trees, vines and other greenery may be something you'll want to consult a professional landscaper or nursery expert about. Do your homework by sketching your house beforehand, noting the directions of the elements.

A landscaper or nursery specialist also will want to know what kind of soil you have. If you feel you can't describe it accurately, take some with you. But be sure to dig deep enough — about a foot — to provide a proper sample. Chances are, if you're going to a nearby landscaper or nursery, the specialists there will know what kind of soil you have.

One way you can use landscaping to suppress noise is to place trees between the noise source and your house. They'll effectively absorb the sounds.

If you have a choice, avoid placing a driveway, patio or other paved area between your house and the noise source. Sound tends to bounce off these hard surfaces, whereas soft elements such as trees and shrubs soak up the noise

Today's bathrooms are pretty splashy

By Marsha Kay Seff

The bathroom may have moved indoors years ago, but style-conscious home owners are determined to bring the beauty of the outdoors inside with them. Those who can afford the luxury, the ones with designer-color commodes and gold-finished faucets, want a view from their tub.

Some are opting for massive windows; others enjoy clear-glass ceilings or electric skylights that open to the sun and stars. Home owners who aren't lucky enough to glimpse the ocean, bay, mountains, a river or canyon from the privacy of their privies are creating their own mini-panoramas with flower gardens and atriums just outside their bathroom windows. And inside, potted plants thrive in the humid environment.

"There's something about water that brings you back to nature," says designer Richard Kaleh. "It's very stimulating to your senses to be in water and visually relate to the outdoors."

A bathroom, adds Kaleh, "should be someplace where you don't mind spending time, important time in the early morning and late at night. It should feel friendly."

No longer are bathrooms just a necessary evil. "People are beginning to look at them as a very important part of their houses," Kaleh points out.

"They have become more of a retreat area than a functional space," echoes designer Marsha Sewell.

Many home owners, according to designer Helene Ziman, are redoing their bathrooms even before they redecorate their living rooms. And they're spending increasingly more money on more spacious, elegant and luxurious baths.

As she sees it, this renewed interest is due, at least in part, to the "fitness craze." "People are so concerned about how they look: They're concerned with the care of their face, as well as their body."

An exercise room is only one part of the master bedroom and bath in the home of one of Ziman's clients. The wing — including exercise rooms, bedroom, dressing area and bath, complete with whirlpool, sauna, his-and-her toilets and sinks, and a common shower — measures a generous 1,400 square feet.

These larger bathrooms, some with cathedral ceilings, tend to be compartmentalized, with separate showers and tubs and partitioned toilets. Mirror and glass block make big baths appear even bigger.

It's easy to see that utility has taken on style. Says Kaleh, "Bathrooms are a meditative room, and it's important for them to have the visual impact that such a room needs."

"Ritzy" and "slick" are terms used by Ziman to describe today's luxurious bath. There's an obvious Italian influence. Also popular, she says, is art deco, "almost neoclassic ... fun and fresh, using classical forms in a new way." Postmodern toilets, so to speak.

Lots of splash in today's bathrooms

For gadget-minded consumers, Villeroy and Boch put out a new sink with a hydraulic lift to change the height at the flick of a button. Meantime, state-of-the-art tubs including the Sensorium with Ambiance, an electronic marvel whose water depth, temperature and turbulence (from whirlpool and bubble maker) are controlled by a waterproof hand unit. The unit also includes a stereo record player, radio, tape deck, disc player and television, as well as a home-security TV monitor and switches to control lights, door locks and home appliances. This kind of luxury isn't cheap — it's $25,000 from American-Standard.

Less-spectacular, but still impressive, new bathrooms are decked out in plenty of marble, granite, chrome, gold and lapis. At the same time, home owners who aren't stuck on "the real thing," are having fun with a variety of laminates, including marble and granite look-alikes, geometric patterns, splatters and zigzags. Ceramic tile, in an assortment of sizes, colors and textures, is increasingly popular for floors, walls, countertops, tubs and even ceilings.

Multilevels, with raised-deck tubs, are more popular than ever. So are angles, catercornered fixtures and angled countertops. Instead of the usual oval sinks, there are plenty of hexagons. And whatever isn't angled is likely to be curved.

Colors range from black and white and red to burgundy, teal, mauve and even purple. The assortment of available colors allows home owners to choose not only what they like, but what shows them off at their best.

Concludes designer Ziman, "People really want to look good in their own environment." And that includes the bathroom.

Bathroom decorating tips

You may not be able to move the "furniture" around in your bathroom, but there is much you can do to revitalize and beautify it without spending a fortune.

Here are some decorating tips that can help renew any bathroom — from streamlined to opulent.

- Decorative containers and organizers can hold cotton swabs, makeup, soaps and other loose items that tend to get scattered around.
- Scent your bathroom with fragrant candles, soaps and potpourri.
- Add a few of your favorite things — an antique hand mirror, framed poster or a small chair for relaxing.
- Invest in a set of plush, colorful, king-size towels.
- Plants look great in the bathroom. Try hanging a plant near the window or by the sink. Be sure to choose varieties that adjust well to moisture and that don't need a lot of direct light.
- Add some decorative shelves. Paint them in a color that coordinates with wallpaper or paint. You can use them to store towels or to show off containers full of bubble bath, bath oil, perfume and cologne bottles.
- Liven your bathroom with a printed wallpaper, or try a wallpaper border along the top of the the wall.
- If the bathroom has a window, have a window shade made from extra wallpaper to match the wall.

Attractive windows can be energy-smart, too

By Monica Perez

Window-washing aside, generous window space in a home often draws buyers. And who can argue? Windows provide the link with the outside world, as well as ventilation and sunlight. They provide information concerning weather and set the tone or the mood of any given day. Psychologically, people prefer windows to windowless spaces.

Yet, according to a Harvard Business School energy report, 36 percent to 40 percent of all U.S. energy consumption is for heat, air conditioning, light and hot water — and a big chunk is flying out the window. With speculation that fuel costs may soar again, it is important to consider this when improving your home. What better place to begin conserving energy than at the windows?

It's more than just a matter of closing them; home owners today have dozens of energy-efficient options available that are as aesthetically pleasing as they are functional.

One way is by replacing an existing window with one more suited to energy-efficiency and home design. Window replacement is one of America's most often requested home improvements, according to David Sauer, president of Qualified Remodelers Inc., and this trend has propelled the prime and replacement window industry over the $3 billion mark.

For energy efficiency, many window manufacturers now offer optional low-emissivity glass for their windows. Also known as "low-E glass," it has a special coating that not only contributes to energy efficiency, but also helps to block the sun's ultraviolet rays and prevent premature fading of furniture and other fabrics. In addition, improved weather-stripping allows for a better seal around today's replacement windows.

Design has taken on greater importance in replacement windows. "While energy efficiency still is an important factor for those considering replacement windows," Sauer says, "the appearance and design elements of these units have taken on a role of increasing significance. Gone are the days of 'standard' windows. Replacement windows now can provide visual interest to both the interior and exterior of a home."

If structural changes seem too time-consuming or costly, consider changing the existing window treatment. Today's manufacturers somehow have managed to produce major fashion statements while reducing home and office heating and cooling bills by incorporating insulating characteristics into their design. Here are some tips to help you find window treatments that are attractive, functional and provide maximum savings:

- When selecting the window covering of your choice, inquire about the R value of the product; this is a term used by manufacturers of insulation and engineers to describe the insulating ability of their products. Materials with higher R values are better insulators than materials with lower R values.

- For the best results, select window coverings that fit closely against the window, such as shades or blinds. For instance, the "Duette," a double-pleated fabric shade by Hunter Douglas, is effective against heat transfer because of its air-trapping honeycomb construction with an R factor of 2.2.

When it comes to making energy improvements on your home this fall, look toward the windows. You can benefit from the wide range of energy-efficient options available today. Save money while reducing high heating bills by transforming the windows of your home, and enjoy seeing each room take on a new light.

Warming up to fireplaces, woodstoves, greenhouses

By Sharon Williams

Baby, it's cold outside, and you want this year's home improvement to help make your home a glowing, radiant retreat from the snow and plunging temperatures.

You want a project that will lend more ambiance to your home than a new furnace will — yet ideally, it should boost your home's resale value and energy efficiency.

If you're looking for something that requires more time and money than a snowblower, quilt or portable heater, consider these three radiant additions:

FIREPLACES

Just like hot chocolate and roomy sweaters, people are drawn to the comfort and coziness of a fireplace during the cold weather months. So it's not surprising that fireplaces hold a warm place in the hearts of many home owners. Their warmth and aesthetic appeal make them a room's most important architectural feature.

The easiest way to acquire a fireplace, of course, is to purchase a home that has one, but you also can build or buy a fireplace, or revive a existing — but dormant — structure. Besides custom designs from an architect or contractor, you can choose from a wide variety of freestanding fireplaces or prefabricated metal varieties that can be built into a wall or an existing fireplace.

While a roaring fire will instantly warm cold hands, many of today's fireplaces make for a net heat loss due to the chimney effect. The caveat: Most of the heat produced by burning wood in a conventional masonry fireplace is lost up the chimney, or into the surrounding wall and floor. Cold air is drawn in from the outside to replace the warmed inside air that escapes up the stack.

To improve efficiency, the editors of Ortho's "Energy-Saving Projects for the Home" handbook suggest you:

- Purchase and install a damper; it will minimize heat loss when no fire is burning.
- Buy glass doors to surround the hearth.
- If you have two fireplaces — one on an outside wall and one on an inside wall, block off the one on the outside wall to reduce infiltration.
- Weatherize your home to help reduce infiltration.
- Freestanding fireplaces have a higher combustion efficiency than masonry fireplaces.
- Equip your fireplace with andirons or a grate to permit air flow from beneath the blaze, and a screen to contain sparks.

Once you are the proud owner of a fireplace, check it regularly for loose bricks, gaps in the mortar or obstructions in the chimney. If you use it frequently, have your chimney cleaned at least once a year to remove creosote buildup — a sticky, black, flammable residue created by burning wood, which reduces the ability of the flue to draw off smoke. (Cleaning a chimney is a dirty job, one that might be best left in the hands of a professional chimney sweep.)

For greater safety, new chimneys are built with ceramic flue linings. If yours is an older chimney, you can hire a mason to either add a lining or to lower a prefabricated metal chimney inside your unlined chimney.

GREENHOUSES

Nobody's throwing stones at glass houses these days, at least not home owners who have realized the aesthetic and energy-efficiency attributes of greenhouses.

Greenhouses are an ideal source for passive solar heating and cooling, where the thermal energy flows throughout the home by nat-

FIRE FUEL

The best fireplace fuels:

- Seasoned hardwood logs --- maple, oak, hickory and ash.
- Artificial logs made of pressed wood chips or sawdust.
- Hard coal or cannel coal (burned in a special grate).
- Avoid unseasoned or green hardwoods, and softwoods, such as pine or fir.

ural means such as radiation, conduction and natural convection.

Attached structures, with no walls between the room and the rest of the house, are considered the most energy-efficient because they can have more heating and cooling ventilation from the other rooms. Instead of just baking in the sun or freezing in the snow all day, these rooms can heat and cool other rooms in the house.

Since the distinguishing characteristic of a greenhouse is its transparent siding, these structures bring more light into the home and can be installed in such a way that a new view is created. The structure can be surrounded by glass walls and roof, built with one glass wall or, occasionally, wrapped in a plastic fabric.

You can use a greenhouse for a variety of purposes, such a dining room, patio, pool-table area, swimming pool enclosure or just to raise plants or flowers such as orchids. Some also like using a greenhouse space as a playroom for children or a spot to sit and peer at the night skies amid comfortable furniture and plants.

The greenhouse needs to be located where it gets sun and prevailing breezes. You can build it from materials available from various outlets or pre-made parts in kits. There also are dealers and contractors that specialize in greenhouse construction.

WOOD STOVES

Wood stoves are fast becoming a cost-efficient supplementary means of heating houses. It's estimated that approximately 12 million such stoves serve as the primary or secondary source of heat in homes throughout the United States.

Wood stoves are available in a wide range of styles, varying from period reproductions to simple modern ones. But no matter what style you choose, be sure yours is made of sturdy, suitable material, such as cast iron or steel. Look for stoves listed by the Underwriters' Laboratories or other recognized testing laboratories.

Before you install a wood stove, check with local authorities. Have work inspected and certified by your fire department and notify your insurance company.

If you purchase a used stove, check it carefully for cracks or other defects, suggests the Insurance Information Institute. The legs, hinges, grates and draft louvers also should be checked carefully.

Ideas make small spaces big on livability

By Karen Caldwell
Copley News Service

Hooray for small spaces. Thanks to the high cost of housing and a renewed interest in city living, small is chic and bigger is not necessarily better anymore.

Lack of space isn't a decorating roadblock for creative home owners and tenants who seek new ways to make their small spaces great spaces. And today more than ever, they have the interior design industry on their team.

Furniture designers have gotten in on the act, creating a new wave of furniture designed to provide flexibility and storage as well as add beauty to the home, from entertainment centers to sophisticated shelving systems to the newly popular Murphy bed.

Meanwhile, contractors and architects constantly are seeking new ways to add space through remodeling — knocking out a wall here, adding a raised platform or loft there — to make the most of every square inch.

Whether you choose to increase your space structurally or visually — or simply scale down your decorating scheme to fit the room, these tactics can help make any room that's short on space one that's big on innovation and livability:

■ To open up a small space, decorate in lighter, brighter colors. Besides paint, use upholstered furniture in white and soft shades to make a room appear bigger.

■ Explore the latest home furnishings by browsing through the pages of decorating magazines, stores and showrooms. Many people don't realize just how far furniture design has come in the last decade, especially in the area of flexible design.

(For instance, Carson's of High Point makes a "gravity chair," which shifts from an arched ottoman into a lounger with various positions and a sleek contemporary design — an update on the old-fashioned recliner. Modular units and double-duty ottomans provide plenty of sitting space, yet don't gobble up the room.)

■ Take a tape measure with you when shopping. What your eye sees on an open floor may be too big when you bring it to a small room.

■ Consider glass tables in a room that otherwise may appear cluttered — such as a small dining room or breakfast nook. Glass tables appear to take up next to no space at all, yet are functional.

■ Create the illusion of more space with mirrors — either by covering a wall with them or hanging them at eye level.

■ For a small living room area with no room for a coffee table, consider the new occasional tables that actually slide over a sofa cushion and take up no floor space. If you move into a larger space, they can be used as side tables.

■ With furniture in small spaces, less definitely is more. Don't worry about filling up every corner of the room — instead, choose a few knockout pieces for decorating drama.

■ It also helps if furniture can serve two purposes. Upholstered chairs have a versatile look as appropriate in a living room as a dining room, enabling you to have just one set of chairs. What is a couch by day can be a bed by night with futons, daybeds and sofa beds.

■ In a small space, surprise the senses with bright color such as a yellow, green, orange or purple sofa. Color will become the focal point of the room, and deflect the eye from the smallness of your environment. However, be sure to invest in the finest quality you can and choose a timeless design, such as one with soft styling and tailoring.

■ Use area rugs to define space on a shiny hardwood or tile floor. Create "walls" with dividers and screens. Or, use a glass etagere or open shelving system as a divider; an etagere does double-duty for storage and display, while giving an airy look to your living environment.

■ Light-colored wall-to-wall carpet can increase the appearance and feeling of spaciousness — especially when used with furnishings of the same shade. A soft, monochromatic color scheme highlighted with a plush saxony texture softens a room's sharp angles and diffuses light.

■ Carpet also can help to increase apparent space when used as a construction material. By covering simple, geometrical structures with the same dense carpet used on the floor, you can create a bed platform, a sofa base, extra seating or a table. Used in a living/dining room area, a raised dining platform can gracefully divide the two spaces, helping to give each a distinct personality.

■ Use whatever space you have creatively. With the help of an interior designer or contractor, a nook can become a home office, a windowed alcove a small sitting room or an unused closet a sewing space.

■ Search your home for hidden storage possibilities. There often is space behind the drywall and paneling in your home between the two-by-four studs to which the finished walls are attached. If you're a handy do-it-yourselfer (or with the help of a skilled contractor), you can create bookshelves, cubbyholes for knickknacks, even a second medicine chest.

■ Replace an ordinary window with a bay window for a decorative sitting niche.

■ Rather than hiding behind doors, storage areas now are being integrated into the total design of the room, thus taking advantage of spaces that normally would be ignored. Some examples: open bookshelves; armoires; free-standing closets; nesting tables, platform beds; and bedside cabinets.

■ Mini-blinds and shades take up virtually no space.

■ Shine light on small spaces with wall-mounted lamps that never need a table. Uplighting with tracks or torchieres can push the ceilings and walls outward.

■ Finally, make the most of what you have. If your closet is overflowing, give a closet customizer a call — most guarantee they can double your existing space through shelves, bars, storage units and wall attachments.

Preparing your home for cool weather

By Steve Hurtado
Copley News Service

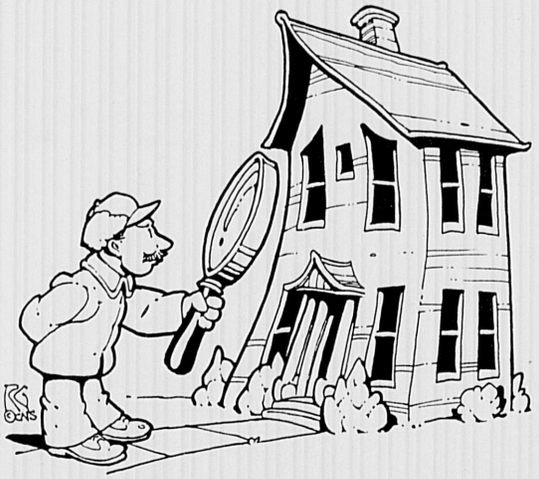
In most parts of the country, realtors agree spring is the peak season for home buying. But when cool weather rolls around, the responsibilities of home ownership sink in; many new home owners may be overwhelmed by the thought of the vast care and maintenance a home requires. Like people, homes need tender loving care.

Once you've settled into your new home and familiarized yourself with its systems — as well as its peculiarities — it's wise to maintain it on a preplanned basis, says Kenneth Austin, chairman of HouseMaster of America, a nationwide home inspection organization.

"You can simplify the job of maintenance if you do it systematically instead of haphazardly," he says. "In short, don't neglect minor repairs, because they won't go away on their own. Anticipate them by inspecting your home on a regular basis."

Austin suggests home owners set aside several fall and spring weekends a year to devote to inspection and repair of the home.

"A well-maintained home not only looks better and keeps up its value, it also provides hidden benefits to the home owner," says Clint Graff, warranty manager for McMillan Development. "It means lower heating bills from improved insulation, fewer problems with household pests and greater safety for the family."



These preventive measures should be taken to prepare your home for cool weather. The checklist is intended as a general guide for all homes. Additional items that are peculiar to a home should be added by the home owner:

EXTERIOR MAINTENANCE

Grounds:
- Check window wells, dry wells and storm drains.
- Seal driveway cracks.
- Check the condition of wooden fences.
- Trim all trees and bushes.

Foundation:
- Check for proper drainage away from house and garage (during a rainstorm).
- Seal any cracks.

Siding:
- Check for finish or paint deterioration.
- Caulk joints.

Windows and Doors:
- Check for finish or paint deterioration.
- Remove and store screens and install storms.
- Check putty at windows.

Roof:
- Check for loose, damaged or missing shingles.
- Check soffits for signs of moisture buildup.
- Check condition of chimney.
- Check flashing for lifting or poor seal.
- Check all gutters and leaders.

Plumbing:
- Drain exterior water lines and open taps (in cold areas).
- Insulate water lines that are subject to freezing.

INTERIOR MAINTENANCE

Attic:
- Check ventilation openings for nests and other blockage.
- Check operation of vent and/or attic fan.

Heating/Cooling Systems:
- Have heating system checked by servicemen.
- Remove (or winterize) room air conditioners.
- Clean all elements of cooling system.
- Check condition of hot water heater.
- Test and start humidifier.
- Clean and secure dehumidifier.
- Service all radiators and valves.
- Repair breaks in insulation.
- Check for leaks (caulk and weather strip).
- Lubricate all pumps, fans and motors.

Home Security:
- Check charge on fire extinguishers.
- Review family fire prevention and escape plans.

Unify decorating theme with floor covering

By Monica Perez
Copley News Service

You are staring into a frightening void — that unfinished, unpainted, empty space that you are determined to make an attractive and functional room. Where do you start?

One of the easiest ways to begin making decorating decisions is from the bottom up. The floor is your home's decorating backdrop, and with the vast array of options available today, your floor covering can unify the decorating theme of your home while serving the functional needs of your household.

When selecting floor coverings, one of the biggest considerations is the traffic pattern of the rooms. Some rooms, such as the kitchen, family room and dining area, require floors that can withstand spills, splashes and the wear and tear of family activity, while other areas, such as the living room and bedroom, can serve as the home's showplaces with sumptuous floor coverings. Here are some of the possibilities:

CARPET

If you are trying to achieve a feeling of warmth and coziness, expand the appearance of space in a small room or highlight tactile comfort, wall-to-wall carpet is one of the best floor covering choices.

Besides increasing the value of your home, carpet has a more varied price range than most flooring materials, is relatively inexpensive to have installed and offers a wide range of colors, textures and patterns.

"Softness and resiliency make carpet one of the most luxurious flooring choices," says Janice Hall, senior stylist for Allied Fibers. "Its broad expanse creates a sweep of color and texture that gives a room a serene visual foundation."

Recent technological developments in carpet fiber have yielded carpet systems with unprecedented resistance to household stains. These carpets are freeing consumers to choose lighter, airier colors such as peach, sea foam green and beige, and bring the warmth of carpet to rooms where stains previously have been a problem.

WOOD

More home owners are knocking on wood these days — natural hardwood floors, that is. According to industry sources, almost 23 percent of U.S. households now have wooden floors in one or more rooms. Contractors and do-it-yourselfers are installing them in new homes, and restoring them as part of remodeling projects.

Thanks to this renewed interest, companies are responding with flooring that goes a long way toward mitigating some of the old complaints about hardwood in the home. For instance, most new hardwood flooring is prefinished with several coats of polyurethane that make waxing obsolete. Just vacuum and buff occasionally. What could be easier?

You also can select flooring in a wide variety of styles, widths and colors, from chestnut parquet to bleached white solid oak to a wide-plank ranch-style oak with walnut pegs.

If you've been hiding a hardwood floor under carpet, but now want to restore it, you can find a competent contractor to handle the job — which requires sanding and screening, staining and sealing — or do it yourself by renting a sanding machine and buying the necessary finishes, sealants and stains.

For creative flair, try one of the new color stains, paint your floor or embellish it with stenciling or painted designs.

RESILIENTS

Easy maintenance and durability are the battle cries of resilient vinyl floor coverings, which are sold from roles or in individual square tiles. But today's selection offers more than just easy cleanup after Junior deposits his dinner on the floor.

There is a variety of vinyl patterns available, ranging from wood-grain look-alikes to intricate mosaic designs. Vinyl floor coverings also are water-resistant and easy-to-maintain — only requiring a little ammonia in water to maintain their shine and luster.

While the kitchen, of course, is a logical place for resilient floor coverings, they also can be attractive design components for entryways, family rooms, bathrooms, sun porches or living/dining areas.

Contracting: Hiring professional for the job

By Nick Harder
Copley News Service

If you're among those home owners who finally want to get that bathroom fixed up or add much-needed space to a too-crowded kitchen — but don't want to do the job yourself — you're probably wondering how to find a good contractor.

There are two ways to hire professionals to remodel your home: you can act as the contractor and hire subcontractors — plumbers, carpenters, etc. — or you can hire a remodeling firm or general contractor to organize and supervise everything.

If you act as your own contractor, in effect, you are the "owner/builder," assuming responsibility for the overall job. This can include such things as state and federal taxes, workman's compensation and other legal liabilities. Unless you are experienced in construction, it is best to leave these matters to a contractor.

The significant savings of being your own contractor should be weighed against liability risks, the time you'd have to spend on the site and your confidence in your ability.

Some professionals specialize in specific jobs, such as tiling, plumbing or painting. If they work directly for you, the owner, then they are considered the prime contractor.

If somebody you know has had a good experience with a contractor for the same kind of job, it's a good idea to follow his recommendation.

Otherwise, check the Yellow Pages or newspaper advertisements under Contractors or a specific profession such as plumbing or electrical. In all cases, however, pay careful attention to the safeguards outlined below.

The more information you can give the contractor about your present house, and what you'd like done, the better the contractor can assist you.

Even if you take exact plans (including specific measurements), don't be surprised if the contractor suggests alternatives. For example, you may not be aware of the city or county building codes, but the licensed contractor will.

A good contractor also will be able to help develop your plans so the finished product is most efficient and pleases you.

The National Association of the Remodeling Industry (a non-profit group with more than 50 years' experience) represents all segments of the professional remodeling service industry. They suggest that you "draw a simple floor plan using graph paper and patterns of your furniture cut to scale. Then lay out your room arrangement, being sure to keep in mind traffic areas; a center of interest such as the television set or sound system; furniture groupings; storage space; and adequate lighting."

Once you've got an idea about what you want done, the association suggests that you employ a contractor in your area, one with an established business. As tax-paying members of your community, licensed contractors are compelled to do the work according to the standards of the industry in order for them to remain licensed and in order for their business to survive.

It's a good ideas to check the Better Business Bureau to see if there are complaints on record about the contractor.

Select two or three bids for the work you need and do not blindly accept the lowest. Ask a contractor why the bid is so low or so high. Sometimes a higher price may be worth it. Have a thorough understanding of the type and quality of materials and the workmanship required.

After you're narrowed the selection of contractors or remodeling firms:

- Call your Contractors State Licensing Board office to ask if the contractor is properly licensed in the proper classification and if the license is in good standing.
- Ask the contractors you're considering for a list of jobs they have recently completed in your area.
- Inspect those jobs and ask whether they were happy with the work. Did the contractor stick to schedule? Did he listen when they had a problem? Was it resolved? Also request any specific suggestions the person can furnish. Most people are more than happy to help and are proud of the remodeling of their home.
- If you're still unsure, obtain references from the contractor's material suppliers, subcontractors and financial institutions to determine whether the contractor is financially responsible.
